For the coming season have been completed and we are now fully prepared to execute orders for Fur Garments of every description.

Having made heavy purchases of choice skins at very attractive prices before the recent extreme advance, we are therefore in a position to furnish Fur Garments of the highest qualities at prices that cannot be duplicated elsewhere. NO MATTER WHAT YOUR FUR NEEDS ARE, WE CAN SUPPTY THEM and at the lowest possible cost to you, as all middlemen's profits are eliminated by our method of buying fur skins direct from the trappers and making them up in our own factory—a saving of fully 20 to 25 per cent.

NO REASON FOR SO MUCH DELAY

"The Government owes Peterborough a rifle range," remarked a citizen to the Review to-day. "Had it not been for the building of the canal there would have been no necessity for doing away with the old range. When the Dominion Government spoiled the former range there is no reason why they should not provide another one and do it without so much delay."

NO DELAY IN BUILDING THE ISOLATION HOSPITAL.

Council Authorizes the Property Committee to Call for Tenders and Proceed With the Work at Once.

Tenders will be called for at once for the new isolation hospital. The recommendation of the Property Committee that the ratepayers vote on the proposition in January was thrown out by the Council last night, the general feeling being that the hospital was so badly needed that no delay should be incurred.

Dr. McPherson, Medical Health Officer, has frequently emphasized the necessity of the hospital being built at once and the majority of the members of the Council are of the same mind as the city physician.

When the Property Committee's report was read to the Council recommending that the isolation hospital question be put to a vote of the people Ald. Morrow moved and Ald. Duncan seconded that the report be so amended to read that the Property Committee be instructed to advertise for tenders and that the work be gone on with at once.

Ald. Hicks stated that he thought the Property Committee had adopted a very wise course. He admitted an isolation hospital was badly needed but he thought that the patients could be well looked after by erecting one or two buildings on a much more modest scale. He pointed out that since 1894 the city' debenture debt had increased over a hundred per cent, while the assessment had increased only about 60 per cent. He thought the city was issuing debentures for altogether too small sums. This time, however, the Council has an opportunity to consult the people. If they are satisfied to spent $15,000 for that purpose, all right.

Ald. Hicks also pointed out that the Council this year had done a lot without consulting the people. For instance a new public library is being built, it will cost the city at least $3,000 a year. Then the people were never consulted in connection with the Board of Education's $10,000.

Ald. Duffus said that if the people turned the by-law down the Council would simply have to build the hospital anyway next year.

Ald. Morrow agreed largely with Ald. Hicks' statements but he thought that a building such as is proposed should be erected by debentures.

Ald. Metheral, Gillespie and Duncan all favored the building of the hospital this year.

Ald. Morrow's motion was then voted on and it was carried by a vote of seven to three.

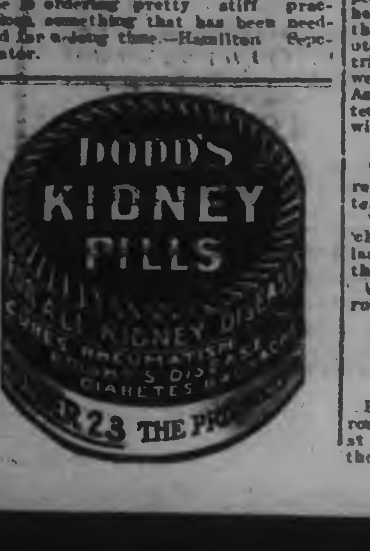
SPORTING NEWS

RUGBY

The Rugby season is with us again. Once more we can hear the merry shouts of the surgeons as they trip lightly along the side lines, taking a leg here and an eye there. Once more we are cheered by the gladsome crunch of iron spoke meeting clavicle or frontal bone. The day of the horrid brutality of the eight ounce padded glove has slipped by for the present, and now we rejoice exceedingly in seeing the skilful use of bare knuckle and bony knee, of the spearlike elbow, the shoulder. Prize fighting at best is a tame game beside football. Where in the squared ring did we ever see eleven combatants hurling themselves en masse, so to speak, upon one solitary victim and then retiring to their positions, each carrying a souvenir? What chance would a pair of mere fighters like Ketchel and Langford have before the rush of a line of beef averaging 232 pounds per? It would be a joke, wouldn't it? Fighters may be strenuous—but, oh, you footballer!—New York World.

Frank Greene, who played on the half line for Lindsay last year, will be available this year also. He is keeping hotel with his father in Bobcaygeon.—Lindsay Warder.

It begins to look as if Ben Simpson will prove a hard task-master to his men. Ben has worked as hard as any of them himself, and he believes that the team cannot get in too much early preparation, with the result that he is ordering pretty stiff practice, something that has been needed for a long time.—Hamilton Spectator.



THREE TEAMS IN SR. O.R.F.U.

On hearing of the official withdrawal of the Dundas team last evening the Executive of the O.R.F.U. held a meeting in the King Edward Hotel and drew up a senior schedule on the three team basis. If Dundas should happen to re-enter the league, a new one will be drawn up.

Each team plays four games, the league starting on Oct. 9 and ending on Nov. 13. The T.A.A.C. and Parkdale Canoe Club have the first game, and Peterborough and Parkdale the last game. The following is the schedule:—

Oct. 9—T.A.A.C. at Parkdale C.C.
Oct. 16—Parkdale at Peterborough.
Oct. 23—Peterborough at T.A.A.C.
Oct. 30—Parkdale C.C. at T.A.A.C.
Nov. 13—Peterborough at Parkdale C.C.

SPORTING TALK

Art Burn, of Calgary, has been declared a professional by the British Columbia Amateur Athletic Union.

Giovanni Raicevich, the Italian heavyweight wrestler who has come to this country to fight his way to a match with Frank Gotch, made a favorable impression in his initial appearance at Chicago last night when he fulfilled his agreement to throw three local grapplers in thirty minutes. The Italian accomplished the trick with ease. Raicevich, who weighs 250 pounds, will meet all the American wrestlers this fall and winter in the hope of getting a match with Gotch.

The Lindsay Warder has started already yet to pick a quarrel with Peterborough. List t o this:

"Peterborough acts as though the championship of the district in rugby last year was a sort of hand-out to this city. It was—ait."

Just fancy anyone here saying a rude thing about Lindsay.

RUNNING

Billy Parker, who went up to Toronto to compete in a ten-mile race at Scarboro Beach last night, quit at the ninth mile, owing to cramps.

FAILED TO KEEP TO HER BARGAIN

Mrs. Richard Failed to Bury Her Husband—Wanted to Come to Peterborough.

Toronto, Sept. 22.—Both members of the Richards household got drunk on Tuesday, so William Richards and his wife, Susan, appeared before Colonel Denison yesterday and admitted their guilt. The Chief Inspector whispered to the magistrate for a minute, and His Worship looked at Susan over his eyeglasses. "The Inspector tells me," he said, "that the last time you came up here I allowed you to go because you wanted to bury your husband."

"Oh, that is all past and it has nothing to do with the present case," said Susan, waving her hand as though quite indifferent whether her husband was buried or not.

The couple asked permission to go to Peterborough, but Col. Denison would not allow them to do so. He fined the woman $ and costs, as she had been a frequent visitor, but Richards got out. "[illegible] your wife's fine if you wish to [illegible] again," said His Worship.

SAID GOODBYE TO A NUMBER

Park St. Congregation Regret Departure of Mr. Alex Haddow

Park street Baptist church congregation held a meeting last night to say "good-bye" to one of the members who is leaving the city. The person referred to is Mr. Alex. Haddow, who left for Toronto this morning to complete his course of studies for a Baptist minister at McMaster University. There was a large turnout of the congregation, and there were many evidences that the departure of Mr. Haddow is much regretted. On behalf of the congregation Deacons Kemp and Green presented the departing member with a handsome fountain pen, and a complimentary address was read. Mr. Haddow made a neat reply. There was a good programme during the evening as follows:—

Chairman's Address — Rev. Mr. Riddiford.
Solo—Miss Ethel Hill.
Solo—Mr. Snowden.
Speech—Deacon Gillespie.
Solo—Mr. J. C. Miller.
Solo—Mr. Pratt.

Mr. Harold Foster was the accompanist.

At Woodstock College last year Mr. Haddow won the Governor-General's medal and the Hiram Calvin scholarship.

WAS DONE BY A MONTREAL FIRM

Mr. J. A. Culverwell Makes Statement Regarding Bond Issue

Mr. J. A. Culverwell informed the Review from Toronto to-day that the financing of two and a half million dollars in bonds for the development of the water power along the Trent was done by a strong Montreal firm, and not by a Toronto firm, as has been reported in some quarters. The firm in question is considered one of the strongest in Canada.

Mr. Culverwell feels that he has made good with the eighteen municipal councils who have endorsed his scheme.

QUIET TIME ON THE MARKET

Peterborough, Sept. 24.—There was a quiet time on the market last week, except in small produce. Very little grain was marketed, wheat remaining the same as last week, $1.00. Hides show no change in prices, and light deliveries. Potatoes were offered in large supply, the prices being 60 to 70 cents per bag. Hay brought $15 to $16 all week, with a fair supply. Select hogs are scarce, the price of of $8.25, which the buyers held up, not bringing very many in.

WHO HAS THE BUTTON?

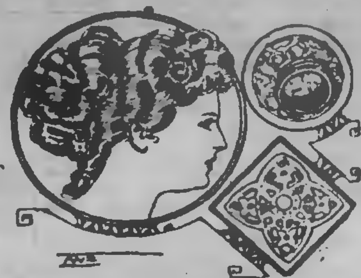
The Newest Hair Ornament and How It Is Worn.

Filets and jeweled hair bands have apparently come to stay since Paris now sends us jeweled buttons to hold them in place, or they may simply nestle in a bunch of soft curls for beauty's sake.

Buttons are a distinctly new ornament for the hair, for since the old days of small combs or carved tortoise shell the coiffure has been left free of what might be called little decorations. But the French never neglect their opportunities, especially in the matter of hairdressing, and when velvet snoods and filets of gold ribbon became so popular a jeweled button was promptly devised to secure the ends of the ribbon.

By no means all the buttons are jeweled. Some of the most beautiful are of delicate filigree, some are enameled, others of jet.

One thing is certain—the French hairdressers will not submit to simple coiffures which have been struggling for the last few months for supremacy. It is true that puffs have seen their day, and rats, too, are not being worn with such obviousness as heretofore, but there remains a certain studied fluffiness which will not be ousted. For awhile it looked as though the hair might be drawn back in classic lines to disclose a bare forehead, but this intellectual style had only a short day, and severity has been softened by fluffy locks drawn low over the forehead. As for the back knot, its position as a Psyche remains, though not its size. It is to be hoped that the day of exaggerations has passed and styles that are natural and becoming will take their place. As a matter of fact, becomingness and suitability are a hundred times more necessary than style, especially where hairdressing is concerned, and the French are too artistic not to recognize this important truth. This is the country of exaggerations. Where a Frenchwoman would wear three puffs of false hair an American woman wears a dozen. It is here that a Psyche knot becomes a monstrosity and pompadours assume enormous dimensions.



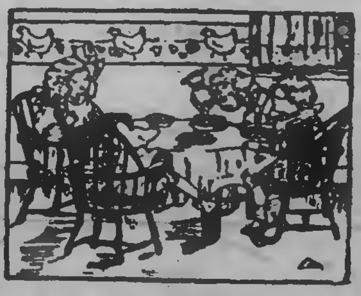
THE BUTTON ORNAMENT.

THEIR OWN TABLE.

Good Times the Wee Folk Have at Meals.

The joy of the little folks knows no bounds when they have their meals from a table their very own, with chairs just their size and little bunnies on the porridge bowls. Every meal thus becomes a delightful picnic that tempts the most capricious appetite, while between meals their own dear table makes a beautiful place to play paper dolls on. Then such wonderful towns and cities are laid out with blocks—there is the castle, the stable and the fort, all at just the right height.

The good times that the wee ones have at the table have much to recommend its use in every nursery, and the endless work that it saves the mother or nurse makes it invaluable. The saving on the wear and tear of the clothing, the wornout stocking knees and scratched slipper toe, from continual playing on the floor, is surprising. Then, too, floors are drafty, besides being far from the cleanest portion of the room.



THE EVENING MEAL.

The nursery suit comes in selected hard wood in several sizes and in a variety of grades.

For Living's Higher.

Be easy on your trousers and be careful with your shirt,
Don't get your coat or waistcoat streaked with paint or smeared with dirt;
The cost of living's higher than it ever was before,
And every suit you purchase costs a little bit more.

Learn to get along with little when you seat yourself to eat,
Try to frighten off starvation without ever tasting meat.
The poorest strip of bacon's worth its weight in precious ore,
And every box of berries costs a little bit more.

Take the children's stockings from them,
let their legs and feet be bare,
Make them run barefooted even when a chill is in the air.
Save your money, for you'll need it when the blasts of winter roar—
Every pair of shoes and stockings costs a little bit more.

Try to learn to cease to shiver when the mercury is low.
Cease to feed your hungry furnace when the howling blizzards blow.
Give up coal or soon the wee wolf will come scratching at your door—
Every ton you burn, remember, costs a little bit more.

Author of
"The Fighting Chance."

"I—don't know—exactly, substantial things. I'd like to learn about things. My father was the head of the American School of Archaeology in Crete. My mother was his intellectual equal, I believe. Do you know about my parents?" she asked. "They were lost in the Argolis, off Cyprus. You have heard. I think they meant that I should go to college—as well as Gerald. I don't know. Perhaps after all it is better for me to do what other young girls do. Besides, I enjoy it, and my mother did, too, when she was my age, they say. She was very much gayer than I am. My mother was a beauty and a brilliant woman. But there were other qualities. I—have her letters to father when Gerald and I were very little and her letters to us from London. I have missed her more this winter, it seems to me, than even in that dreadful time"—

She sat silent, chin in hand, delicate fingers restlessly worrying her red lips; then in quick impulse:

"You will not mistake me, Captain Selwyn? Nina and Austin have been perfectly sweet to me and to Gerald."

"I am not mistaking a word you utter," he said.

"No, of course not, only there are times—moments"—

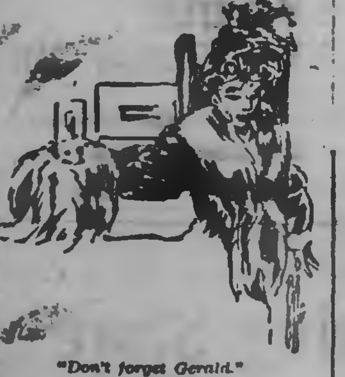
Her voice died; her clear eyes looked out into space while the silent seconds lengthened into minutes. One slender finger had slipped between her lips and teeth; one burnished strand of hair lay neglected against her cheek.

"You said you were going to look up Gerald," she observed.

"I am now. What are you going to do?"

"I? Oh, dress, I suppose! Nina ought to be back now, and she expects me to go out with her."

She nodded a smiling termination of their duet and moved toward the door. Then on impulse she turned, a question on her lips—left unuttered through instinct. It had to do with the identity of the pretty woman who had so directly saluted him in the park—a perfectly friendly, simple and natural question. Yet it remained unuttered.



"Don't forget Gerald."

She turned again to the doorway. A maid stood there holding a note on a salver.

"For Captain Selwyn, please," murmured the maid.

Miss Erroll passed out.

Selwyn took the note and broke the seal:

My Dear Selwyn—I'm in a beastly fix—an I. O. U. due tonight and pas de quoi! Obviously I don't want Neergard to know, being associated, as I am, with him in business. As for Austin, he's a peppery old boy, bless his heart, and I'm not very secure in his good graces at present. Fact is, I got into a rather stiff game last night, and it's a matter of honor. So can you help me to tide it over? I'll square it on the 1st of the month. Yours sincerely, GERALD ERROLL.

P. S.—I've meant to look you up for ever so long and will the first moment I have free.

Below this was penciled the amount due, and Selwyn's face grew very serious.

The letter he wrote in return ran:

Dear Gerald—Check inclosed to your order. By the way, can't you lunch with me at the Lenox club some day this week? Write, wire or telephone when. Yours, SELWYN.

When he had sent the note away by the messenger he walked back to the bay window, hands in his pockets, a worried expression in his gray eyes. This sort of thing must not be repeated. The boy must halt in his tracks and face sharply the other way. Besides, his own income was limited—much too limited to admit of many more loans of that sort.

He ought to see Gerald at once, but somehow he could not in decency appear personally on the heels of his loan. A certain interval must elapse between the loan and the lecture. In fact, he didn't see very well how he could admonish and instruct until the loan had been canceled—that is, until the first of the new year.

Pacing the floor, disturbed, uncertain as to the course he should pursue, he looked up presently to see Miss Erroll descending the stairs, fresh and sweet in her radiant plumage. As she caught his eye she waved a silvery chinchilla muff at him—a marching salute—and passed on, calling back to him, "Don't forget Gerald!"

"No," he said, "I won't forget Gerald." He stood a moment at the window watching the brougham below, where Nina awaited Miss Erroll. Then abruptly he turned back into the room and picked up the telephone receiver, muttering, "This is no time to mince matters for the sake of appearances." And he called up Gerald at the offices of Neergard & Co.

"Is it you, Gerald?" he asked pleasantly. "It's all right about that matter. I've sent you a note by your messenger. But I want to talk to you about another matter—something concerning myself. I want to ask your advice, in a way. Can you be at the Lenox by 6? You have an engagement at 8? Oh, that's all right. I won't keep you. It's understood, then—the Lenox at 6. Goodby!"

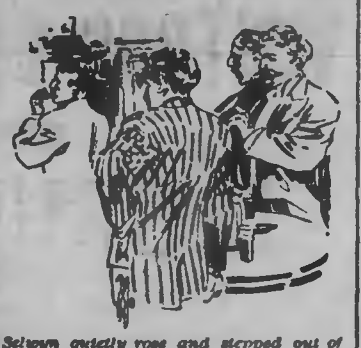
There was the usual early evening influx of men at the Lenox who dropped in for a glance at the ticker or for a cocktail or a game of billiards or a bit of gossip before going home to dress.

Selwyn sauntered over to the basket, inspected a yard or two of tape, then strolled toward the window, nodding to Bradley Harmon and Sandon Craig.

As he turned his face to the window and his back to the room Harmon came up rather effusively, offering an unusually thin, flat band and further hospitality, pleasantly declined by Selwyn.



Selwyn quietly rose and stepped out of the circle.

"Horrible thing, a cocktail," observed Harmon after giving his own order and seating himself opposite Selwyn. "I don't usually do it. Here comes the man who persuades me—my own partner."

Selwyn looked up to see Fane approaching, and instantly a dark flush overspread his face.

"You know George Fane, don't you?" continued Harmon easily. "Well, that's odd. I thought, of course—Captain Selwyn, Mr. Fane. It's not usual, but it's done."

They exchanged formalities—dry and brief on Selwyn's part, gracefully urbane on Fane's.

Sandon Craig and Billy Fleetwood came wandering up and joined them. One or two other men, drifting by, adhered to the group.

Selwyn, involved in small talk, glanced sideways at the great clock and gathered himself together for departure.

Fleetwood was saying to Craig, "Certainly it was a stiff game—Bradley, myself, Gerald Erroll, Mrs. Delmour-Carnes and the Ruthvens."

"Were you bit?" asked Craig, interested.

"No; about even. Gerald got it good and plenty, though. The Ruthvens were ahead, as usual."

Selwyn, apparently hearing nothing, quietly rose and stepped out of the circle, paused to set fire to a cigarette and then strolled off toward the visitors' room, where Gerald was now due. He found young Erroll just entering the room and greeted him with nervous cordiality.

"If you can't stay and dine with me," he said, "I won't put you down. You know, of course, I can only ask you once in a year, so we'll stay here and chat a bit."

"Right you are," said young Erroll, flinging off his very new and very fashionable overcoat—a wonderfully handsome boy, with all the attraction that a quick, warm, impulsive manner carries. "And I say, Selwyn, it was awfully decent of you to"—

"Bosh! Friends are for that sort of thing, Gerald. Sit here." He looked at the young man hesitatingly, but Gerald calmly took the matter out of his jurisdiction by nodding his order to the club attendant.

"Lord, but I'm tired," he said, sinking back into a big armchair. "I was up till daylight, and then I had to be in the office by 9, and tonight Billy Fleetwood is giving—oh, something or other. By the way, the market isn't doing a thing to the shorts. You're not in, are you, Selwyn?"

"No, not that way. I hope you are not either, are you, Gerald?"

"Oh, it's all right," replied the young fellow confidently, and, raising his glass, he nodded at Selwyn, with a smile.

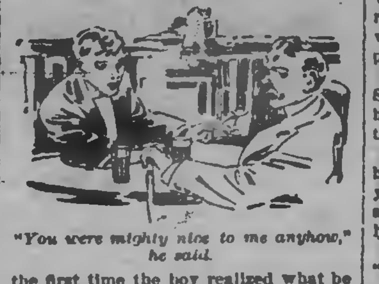
"You were mighty nice to me anyhow," he said, setting his glass aside and lighting a cigar. "You see, I went to a dance, and after awhile some of us cleared out, and Jack Ruthven offered us trouble, so half a dozen of us went there. I had the worst cards a man ever drew to a kicker. That was all about it."

"Do you mind saying whether you banked my check and drew against it?" asked Selwyn.

"Why, no; I just indorsed it over."

"To—to whom, if I may venture?"

"Certainly," he said, with a laugh. "To Mrs. Jack"— Then in a flash for the first time the boy realized what he was saying and stopped aghast, scarlet to his hair.



"You were mighty nice to me anyhow," he said.

Selwyn's face had little color remaining in it, but he said very kindly: "It's all right, Gerald. Don't worry"—

"I'm a beast!" broke out the boy. "I beg your pardon a thousand times."

"Granted, old chap. But, Gerald, may I say one thing—or perhaps two?"

"Go ahead. Give it to me good and plenty."

"It's only this: Couldn't you and I see one another a little oftener? Don't be afraid of me. I'm no wet blanket. I'm not so very aged either. I know something of the world; I understand something of men. I'm pretty good company, Gerald. What do you say?"

"I say sure!" cried the boy warmly.

"It's a go, then. And one thing more: Couldn't you manage to come up to the house a little oftener? Everybody misses you, of course. I think your sister is a trifle sensitive"—

"I will," said Gerald, blushing. "Somehow I've had such a lot on hand—all day at the office and something on every evening. I know perfectly well I've neglected Elly—and everybody. But the first moment I can find free"—

Selwyn nodded. "And last of all," he said, "there's something about my own affairs that I thought you might advise me on."

Gerald, proud, enchanted, stood very straight. The older man continued gravely:

"I've a little capital to invest—not very much. Suppose—and this, I need not add, is in confidence between us—suppose I suggested to Mr. Neergard"—

"Oh," cried young Erroll, delighted, "that is fine! Neergard would be glad enough. Why, we've got that Valleydale tract in shape now, and there are scores of schemes in the air—scores of them—important moves which may mean—anything!" he ended excitedly.

"Then you think it would be all right—in case Neergard likes the idea?"

Gerald was enthusiastic. After awhile they shook hands, it being time to separate. And for a long time Selwyn sat there alone in the visitors' room, absent eyed, facing the blazing fire of cannel coal.

How to be friends with this boy without openly playing the mentor; how to gain his confidence without appearing to seek it; how to influence him without alarming him! No, there was no great harm in him yet; only the impulse of inconsiderate youth; only an enthusiastic capacity for pleasure.

One thing was imperative—the boy must cut out his card playing for stakes at once, and there was a way to accomplish that by impressing Gerald with the idea that to do anything behind Neergard's back which he would not care to tell him about was a sort of treachery.

Chapter 5

THE prospect perplexed and depressed Selwyn. He was sullenly aware that in a town where the divorced must ever be reckoned with when dance and dinner lists are made out there is always some thoughtless hostess and sometimes a mischievous one, and the chances were that he and Mrs. Jack Ruthven would collide either through the forgetfulness or malice of somebody or through sheer hazard at some large affair where destiny and fate work busily together in criminal copartnership.

Their encounter was all a mistake, born of the haste of a heedless and elderly matron celebrated for managing to do the wrong thing, but who had been excessively nice to him that winter and whose position in Manhattan was not to be assailed.

"Dear Captain Selwyn," she wheezed over the telephone, "I'm short one man, and we dine at 8 and it's that now. Could you help me? It's the rich and yellow this time, but you won't mind, will you?"

He explained to Mrs. T. West Minster his absurd delight at being asked. Then he sent for a cab and sauntered into the dining room, where he was received with undisguised hostility.

"She's been civil to me," he said; "jeunesse oblige, you know, and that's why I"—

"There'll be a lot of debutantes there. What do you want to go for, you cradle robber?" protested Austin. "A lot of water bibbing, olive eating, talcum powdered debutantes"—

Eileen straightened up stiffly, and Selwyn's teasing smile and his offered hand in adieu completed her indignation.

"Oh, goodby! No, I won't shake hands. There's your cab now. I wish you'd take Austin too. Nina and I are tired of dining with the prematurely aged."

"Indeed we are," said Mrs. Gerard. "Go to your club, Austin, and give me a chance to telephone to somebody under the anaesthetic age."

Selwyn departed, laughing, but he yawned in his cab all the way to Fifty-third street, where he entered in the wake of the usual laggards and, surrendering hat and coat in the cloakroom, picked up the small, slim envelope bearing his name.

The card within disclosed the information that he was to take in Mrs. Somebody-or-other. He made his way through a great many people, found his hostess, backed off, stood on one leg for a moment like a reflective waterfowl, then found Mrs. Somebody-or-other and was absently good to her through a great deal of noise and some Spanish music, which seemed to squirt through a thicket of palms and bespatter everybody.

"Wonderful music," observed his dinner partner with singular originality; "so like 'Carmen.'"

"Is it?" he replied and took her away at a nod from his hostess, whose daughter Dorothy leaned forward from her partner's arm at the same moment and whispered: "I must speak to you, mamma. You can't put Captain Selwyn there because"—

But her mother was deaf and smilingly sensitive about it, so she merely guessed what reply her child expected: "It's all settled, dear. Captain Selwyn arrived a moment ago." And she closed the file.

It was already too late anyhow, and presently, turning to see who was seated on his left, Selwyn found himself gazing into the calm, flushed face of Alixe Ruthven. It was their third encounter.

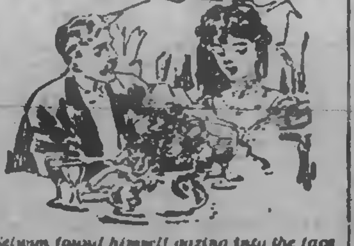
They exchanged a dazed nod of recognition, a meaningless murmur, and turned again, apparently undisturbed, to their respective dinner parties.

A great many curious eyes lingering on them shifted elsewhere in reluctant disappointment.

As for the hostess, she had for one instant come as near to passing heavenward as she could without doing it when she discovered the situation. Then she accepted it with true humor. She could afford to. But her daughters, Sheila and Dorothy, suffered acutely, being of this year's output and martyrs to responsibility.

Meanwhile Selwyn, grimly aware of an accident somewhere and perfectly conscious of the feelings which must by this time dominate his hostess, was wondering how best to avoid anything that might resemble a situation.

Instead of two or three dozen small tables scattered among the palms of the winter garden their hostess had preferred to construct a great oval board around the aquarium. The arrangement made it a little easier for Selwyn and Mrs. Ruthven. He talked to his dinner partner until she began to respond in monosyllables, which closed each subject that he opened and wearied him as much as he was boring her. But Bradley Harmon, the man on her right, evidently had better fortune, and presently Selwyn found himself with nobody to talk to, which came as near to embarrassing him as anything could and which so enraged his hostess that she struck his partner's name from her lists forever. People were already glancing at him askance in sly amusement or cold curiosity.



Selwyn found himself gazing into the face of Alixe Ruthven.

Then he did a thing which endeared him to Mrs. T. West Minster and to her two disconsolate children.

"Mrs. Ruthven," he said very naturally and pleasantly, "I think perhaps we had better talk for a moment or two if you don't mind. My dinner partner is quite impossible, you see, and I happen to be here as a filler in—commanded to the presence only a few minutes ago. It's a pardonable error. I bear no malice. But I'm sorry for you."

There was a silence. Alixe straightened her slim figure and turned, but young Innis, who had taken her in, had become confidential with Mrs. Fane. As for Selwyn's partner, she probably divined his conversational designs on her, but she merely turned her bare shoulder a trifle more unmistakably and continued her gossip with Bradley Harmon.

Alixe broke a tiny morsel from her bread, sensible of the tension.

"I suppose," she said as though reciting to some new acquaintance an amusing bit of gossip, "that we are destined to this sort of thing occasionally and had better get used to it."

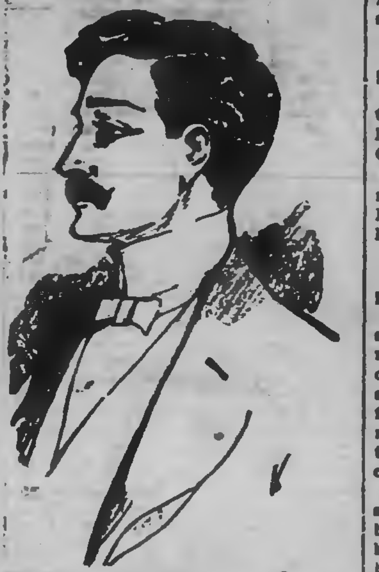
"I suppose so."

"Please," she added after a pause, "aid me a little."

"I will if I can. What am I to say?"

"Have you nothing to say?" she asked, smiling. "It need not be very civil, you know, as long as nobody hears you."

To school his features for the deception of others, to school his voice and manner and at the same time look smilingly into the grave of his youth and hope, called for the sort of self command foreign to his character. Glancing at him under her smoothly fitted mask of amiability, she slowly grew afraid of the situation, but not of her ability to sustain her own part.



Philip Selwyn.

They exchanged a few meaningless phrases; then she resolutely took young Innis away from Rosamund Fane, leaving Selwyn to count the bubbles in his wineglass.

But in a few moments, whether by accident or deliberate design, Rosamund interfered again, and Mrs. Ruthven was confronted with the choice of a squabble for possession of young Innis, of conspicuous silence or of resuming once more with Selwyn, and she chose the last resort.

"You are living in town?" she asked pleasantly.

"Yes."

"Of course; I forgot. I met a man last night who said you had entered the firm of Neergard & Co."

"I have. Who was the man?"

"You can never guess, Captain Selwyn."

"I don't want to. Who was he?"

"Please don't terminate so abruptly the few subjects we have in reserve. We may be obliged to talk to each other for a number of minutes if Rosamund doesn't let us alone. The man was Boots Lansing."

"Boots! Here!"

"Arrived from Manila Sunday. As usual, he introduced you as the subject and told me—oh, dozens of things about you. I suppose he began inquiring for you before he crossed the troopers' gangplank, and somebody sent him to Neergard & Co. Haven't you seen him?"

"No," he said, staring at the brilliant fish, which glided along the crystal tank, goggling their eyes at the lights.

"You—you are living with the Gerards, I believe?" she said carelessly.

"For awhile."

"Oh! Boots says that he is expecting to take an apartment with you somewhere."

"What! Has Boots resigned?"

"So he says. He told me that you had resigned. I did not understand that. I imagined you were here on leave until I heard about Neergard & Co."

"Do you suppose I could have remained in the service?" he demanded. His voice was dry and almost accentless.

"Why not?" she returned, paling.

"You may answer that question more pleasantly than I can."

She usually avoided champagne, but she had to do something for herself now. As for him, he took what was offered without noticing what he took and grew whiter and whiter. But a fixed glow gradually appeared and remained on her cheeks. Courage, impatience, a sudden anger at the forced conditions, steadied her nerves.

"Will you please prove equal to the situation?" she said under her breath, but with a charming smile. "Do you know you are scowling? These people here are ready to laugh, and I'd much prefer that they tear us to rags on suspicion of our overfriendliness."

"Who is that fool woman who is monopolizing your partner?"

"Rosamund Fane. She's doing it on purpose. You must try to smile now and then."

"My face is stiff with grinning," he said, "but I'll do what I can for you"—

"Please include yourself too."

"Oh, I can stand their opinions," he said. "I only meet the yellow sort occasionally. I don't herd with them."

"I do, thank you."

"How do you like them? What is your opinion of the yellow set? Here they sit all about you—the Phoenix Mottlys, Mrs. Delmour-Carnes yonder, the Draymores, the Orchils, the Vendenning lady, the Lawns of Westlawn"—he paused, then deliberately—"and the Jack Ruthvens. I forgot, Alixe, that you are now perfectly equipped to carry aloft the golden hod."

"Go on," she said, drawing a deep breath. She forced a smile and drew her glass toward her. The straw tinted wine slopped over and frothed on the white skin of her arm.

"Well," she breathed, "this ghastly dinner is nearly ended."

He nodded pleasantly.

"And Phil?" a bit tremulous.

"What?"

"Was it all my fault—I mean in the beginning? I've wanted to ask you that—to know your view of it. Was it?"

"No. It was mine—most of it."

"Not all—not half. We did not know mund Fane was much younger—must have been younger, for she still had something of that volatile freshness, that vague atmosphere of immaturity clinging to her like a perfume almost too delicate to detect, and under that the most profound capacity for mischief he had ever known of. Sauntering amiably amid the glittering groups continually forming and disintegrating under the clustered lights, he finally succeeded in reaching his hostess.

And Mrs. T. West Minster disengaged herself from the throng with intention as he approached.

No. And he was so sorry, and it was very amiable of his hostess to want him, but he was not remaining for the dance.

MISS M. QUINN TELLS PETERBOROUGH PEOPLE ABOUT HER WORK IN CHINA

The Review has received an interesting letter from Miss M. Quinn, a Peterborough lady, who is engaged in missionary work in China. It will be read with deepest interest by Miss Quinn's many friends here. The letter is as follows:

My Dear Friends.—I am distressed to think that almost a year has gone around since I wrote my [illegible] letter to you and many person[illegible] received which I h[illegible] red in this mor[illegible] are also acknowledg[illegible] is not that I have [illegible] agent of this pleasant duty, [illegible] I am without material, but [illegible] simply that other duties, which [illegible] seem to be set aside, claim [illegible] attention, and when they are discharged I am either too weary or I have no time, and so what can be put off for a more conven[illegible] season too often gets left out a[illegible] but I must not make too many [illegible] planations. I just want you [illegible] that I am not wilfully [illegible] my dear friends, whom I [illegible] interested in the w[illegible] heart, and who[illegible] as well; and [illegible] understand and appreciate the facts and rejoice that I am busy and able to work. It certainly has been the happiest and most useful year, I believe, of my life. The blessing and encouragement I received at our annual meeting in September remained with me throughout the year, and it has been such a joy to enter the open doors, and sow the good seed of the word with the assurance that just as sure as God's promises are true, there must be a harvest. So every day that we could possibly go, we have been in the country, entering new places, giving the precious invitation to dear women and men and children, too, in most cases for the first time, leaving copies of the Gospel, and seeing the response in their faces as it dawned on them that this Jesus of whom we are speaking, could save them. Oh, it is a glorious work, and I never cease praising Him, that He has counted us worthy to have a share in it. Twice during the year we have been favored with special seasons of refreshing—there were hard "stones to roll away," and so, whilst many were individually blessed the first time, yet there was no general breakdown like we have heard of in other places. However, during the last week in May we had the joy of seeing our dear people almost all of them greatly quickened and encouraged through the visit of a native brother, who was himself baptized with the spirit in Mr. Goforth's meeting in Chang-te-fu Honan last fall. God used him in giving very powerful messages on sin and hearts were laid bare before the Lord for cleansing and filling. There was no excitement but a steady deep work was done day by day. Things were put right in lives and business and hearts were warmed to greater zeal and love. Just before I left an old man, who keeps a street stand and sells small wares, brought me a basket containing opium lamps and cigarettes, which he wanted me to dump into the big river on my way to Wuhu. It meant giving up the most paying part of his business, and several dollars' immediate loss. He was only brought in last year and is rather a dull man. No one asked him to take this step except perhaps he was exhorted by some of the church members. It is very interesting to notice how the members are helping one another in this way now, instead of waiting for those in charge to find you out. They all seem anxious to keep a clean church, and you can easily see how this lessens my care and responsibility. Before the revival our people were very ready to help, but since then they are much more zealous in preaching, visiting and prayer. Everyone has his or her work, and it is a beautiful sight before and after services to see a group praying here, another busy preparing Sunday school lessons under the supervision of a helper; another preaching perhaps to some outsider, who has dropped in, and still another class of women laboring over the golden text with the Bible woman's help, and then as we go out [illegible] school-room we see between [illegible] and thirty bright boys and girls busy earning [illegible] scripture portion for recitation or practicing the hymns [illegible] sung in the service later on. When we left for vacation it was with [illegible] easy mind and all the meetings [illegible] classes we believe, will be carried on as usual in our absence by the natives themselves. The week after we go a band of preachers and booksellers were going south [illegible] large city to attend a fair, where [illegible] opportunities would be found [illegible] of sowing the good seed of the Word. Last fall we made a ten[illegible] work, but owing [illegible] the Emperor [illegible] So [illegible] yet we hope [illegible] to do more with it. Our working staff has been enlarged since writing, and we have now one colporteur working full time and two half time who are rather physically handicapped, but still can do good work. We have also an extra Bible woman, who, while prevented by lame feet and deficient eyesight from field service, nevertheless fills a useful place, and leaves the other woman free for outside work. We have tried to visit every village and hamlet within twenty li of our two stations and whilst we have not succeeded, yet we have covered a great deal of ground, and it has been most delightfully encouraging work. The scenery is so beautiful everywhere and this adds to the pleasure of going about, and makes one forget weariness and hunger. In some places we have been most kindly entertained, indeed in every place, but sometimes by Christians. I remember one trip we made about twenty li from home, and as we were visiting and earnestly preaching to some dear women and selling many books, two of our Christian men, who lived nearby, hearing of our arrival, came to welcome us and take us to their homes for the night. They looked bright and clean. Our hearts rejoiced to see them. When we reached their homes a good meal was prepared, and then the neighbors and friends invited in for a preaching service, which lasted till after nine o'clock. In the morning many of them returned again and we had worship together. Then we started off accompanied by the two men to search for more jewels still where no one has ever visited, and what a precious day we had as village after village is found and large crowds preached to, until preacher and all are tired out. We turn to go home, but an old lady of 80 years calls after us. She didn't hear or see us. Will we not go back? No, but we will wait where we are until she comes up to us, and so interested is she in the story our Bible woman tells with such earnestness, that she forgets all about seeing the foreigner, and so far as we can judge, she never notices her at all. Reluctantly she returns to her home repeating a little prayer taught her, and we believe in her ignorance putting her trust in the Lord Jesus, of whom she has now heard for the first time in her life. Not one of our party have any doubt but that she is one whom we will meet again in that day when He makes up His jewels.

[illegible] continue our journey we are [illegible] glad because we came [illegible] many who seem so ready [illegible] believe our message—[illegible] there are so many of [illegible] who will never [illegible] salvation unless we [illegible] it to them, and we wonder when we can reach even those at our doors. And so we press on, straining every nerve to accomplish the task we have set ourselves, sometimes at the wayside, sometimes as we visit, but seeking to let them know Jesus loves them, and there is a place where they can hear more about Him. One of the Christians referred to above has a comfortable home and he is preparing benches so we can hold services regularly in his guest room. We quite hope next season to begin to have these, as there are many interested. As we journey home next day we have to prepare our lesson for the evening meeting in Joshua, which our helpers, especially are studying this year. Our bodies and brains are weary, but our hearts are happy and we do not mind the extra work. Another day we start out; this time we only see our way to remain for the day, and as we do not see when we can get another day, we push out, although the skies are cloudy and it may rain. Sure enough, just as we had completed our first village, the rain comes on. We can't bear to turn back, and so we urge our chair-bearers to try to make the next village a few li away, and as it is already raining, we walk to make it easier for them. As we make the village the rain comes down in sheets, and no wonder what we will do next as there are no inns. One of my bearers, a very kind, nice man, goes off, however, on a tour of inspection, and in a little while returns with beaming face, bringing a man who attends our services regularly, and who is at home in the country for a day. We are glad indeed to see him, as we had wanted to visit his home, but had no idea where it was. We are soon in his home, a fine brick house, father, mother, wife, brothers and their wives all living together, and all extend a cordial welcome. A good dinner is soon under way, the chair bearers dismissed and we are settled for the night.

A meeting in the evening is well attended, and earnest inquiries are made as to the way of salvation. Some of the women promise to come and visit us and learn to read. Everything is done to make us feel welcome, and although we have to share the mother's bed, the Bible woman and I, yet we are very grateful for the kindness and marvel at God's gracious leadings, and rejoice in the open door. Next morning our men return, but it is raining again and the roads are bad, so we make our way home, wet, tired, but so happy in the Lord. There is so much bad weather, and times when the country people are too busy to receive us, so we do our very best to go where it is possible, but it always means heavy work between times, as even if we never went away from home there is a great deal to do. With no stations and one preacher to help, we are always pressed and busy. This spring we made some necessary alterations in our home to better suit the work, and I wish you could have seen us that week, driving carpenters, masons and workmen. We were doing everything ourselves almost, and so were our helpers, they with their rolled up, long garments laid aside and bare feet, nailing on matting, sweeping, scrubbing, beating the [illegible] level; oh, it was a lively [illegible] and we wondered what our [illegible] at home would think of such [illegible] work! One thing I be[illegible] result from a peep at us. [illegible] would soon have a bet[illegible]. We are not com[illegible] someone has a great [illegible] of providing us with a more healthy, restful home. Already our chapel at times is too small, and it is an interesting sight to see men clambering up on the partition and standing on benches in the entrance, in order to get where they can hear and see. A little different style from some of the beautifully finished churches at home, with half empty pews, and when one allows themselves to think on these things we wonder why there should be such a difference.

I must tell you a little about the pilgrims, whose wailing or chanting as they pray to the king of hell, has so often turned our hearts sick. They seem to pass up mostly at nights, and band after band will go by in one night, making the night hideous with their cry, and our hearts numb with pain as we think of their hopeless journeys. We took a trip to the Mountains. Miss Shore and I were sickened by the sights. We visited temple after temple, some of them large enough to accommodate 1,100 people at once, and were glad to leave long before we saw them all. I never want to see them worship again. You remember our out-station is just at the foot of this sacred mountain. We have an old man now who lives in the chapel, and daily sits at the door with his books spread out, and his pot of tea ready, inviting any who will to rest awhile and hear the story. Our other colporteur also tries to go to the mountain sometimes, but we are still looking for our two men to devote themselves to this work. We have the money, but we need men, men so pray for this urgent need.

Some of you have been kind enough to help me during this year, I do appreciate this, and believe your money is well invested. One gift from Queen St. Mission, Toronto, helped me, and several of the natives to attend Mr. Goforth's wonderful meetings in W[illegible]chary. Other gifts have been used in other ways, as the need was most urgent. We still need an organ, but more than anything else we need property. I am encouraged to pray for this since hearing how wonderful God has provided for this need in Jerusalem where my friend, Mr. Thompson is. Many of you will have heard of the $50,000 lately donated for the work there, more than we dared ask for. So please help us here with your prayers. It would take probably $3,000 to buy land, remodel and build, but the missionaries would live longer and work with more comfort if they had it. My faith reaches out for it. We have one Bible woman who is he[illegible] specially supported; salary about $25 or $30 a year. A day school [illegible] about $50 or $60, and some of our school boys about $20. I [illegible] this as I [illegible] friends are [illegible] much [illegible]. We are [illegible] to have [illegible] operation this partnership brings, but we like to get the gifts sometimes to be used as needed, and feel free then to invest as we are led at the time. Now, there is much work that I might have written but my letter is long enough. I will write, I hope, quite soon again, and tell you about my summer trip to Korea and other things that I know you will enjoy hearing about. I am very well, feeling worn sometimes with the pressure of work and conflicts with the forces of evil, but glad and happy for the privilege of being His witness at this opportune time. I believe God's time for working has come to China, and I trust He will spare me to have a part in it, but if He should not, I am still glad to be a seed-sower, for I know 'His word shall not return to Him void,' and there must soon be a harvest.

Counting on your prayerful sympathy, and with a heartful of love to all who know and love me, I am as ever,

Yours sincerely,
M. QUINN.

The Transcontinental

The steel has been put down for 40 miles west of Cochrane on the Transcontinental Railway, and will be extended twenty miles further within the next thirty days.

Two temporary bridges had to be built, the permanent steel structure, will be put in place during the winter. The grade practically completed for 100 miles west of Cochrane.

East of Cochrane contractors have had some trouble with a coffer dam at the Abitibi, where the high bridge is to be built.

Because there is to be no temporary structure there the contractors, Foley, Welsh and Stuart, are now engaged cutting out a tote-road sixty-five miles long through the forest north-east of Lake Abitibi. Across this lake and over this new-made trail they will carry supplies during the winter. These supplies will be cached at intervals along the line for use when spring opens again. About sixty miles of the first 100 miles of grade has been completed. The steel is down and track is being ballasted for the first eight miles east of Cochrane to the Abitibi River.

Harvest is over and farmers of this district are well pleased with the crops. We are glad to say that we no longer dread the famine for hay, as there is lots of corn in Douro.

Nothing Too Good

WE have had over ten years experience in supplying Toric Lenses to our most particular patrons. This form of lens is increasingly popular in all the large cities of America and especially in the United States, where the manufacturers have large capital and the best facilities for turning out accurate work. We are particular to have only the best, and judging from the increased number which we now supply, we deem our care in this regard is appreciated. There is nothing too good for the eye.

DEFENCE OF MRS. TURNER; WILL SET UP AN ALIBI

T. C. Robinette, Who is Conducting Case for Woman Accused of Slaying Authers' Baby, Says His Client Could Not Possibly Have Thrown Box From the Window.

Toronto, Sept. 24.—For the first time since the arrest of Mrs. Maud Turner for the murder of the Authers infant, T. C. Robinette, her counsel, was induced to speak of her defence last night.

According to his statement, the defence will set up an alibi in so far as to try to show that while Mrs. Turner did go to Lewiston from Toronto on the Chippewa, leaving Toronto at 7.30 on the morning of Thursday, Sept. 16, she did not go from Lewiston to Niagara Falls and return on the New York Central train, which runs along the cliff from which the box containing the body of the child was thrown, but on the Gorge Route, which runs along the rocks at the river's edge, and, therefore, could not possibly have thrown it as it was seen to fall.

Her story to her counsel is that she gave the child to the Mrs. Maud Wagner of Cleveland, who had written her from that city regarding the adoption of the child. She says she gave the child to Mrs. Wagner in Toronto on Wednesday and agreed to meet her at Niagara Falls, N.Y., on the Thursday, to give her some clothes for the baby. She says she did so meet Mrs. Wagner there, going over on the Chippewa, and did carry a box like the one containing the body of the child, but says that it contained only lunch and baby's clothing, and that she did not have it with her on the way across the lake, but checked it in the check-room of the boat and was reading a book on the way over and had not a parcel with her until she took it out on arriving at the dock at Lewiston.

She says she went to the Falls on the Gorge Route and returned that way in the evening. Then she says she met Mrs. Wagner at the New York Central at the Falls depot, and that Mrs. Wagner then had the Authers' child with her alive and well, and that she gave her the clothes in the box.

Mrs. Turner has also informed her counsel that she did not at any time advertise in the papers for the adoption of children, and that the advertisements spoken of by the police must have been inserted by others. She says that she never had any other babies save the Authers' and King children, and that the child taken from the Wood street house was the King child, despite the fact that the police are informed that it was not.

She declares that the statement of Mr. and Mrs. Goldie, who keep the house at 39 Wood street, that they heard the cries of a strangling child coming from her room on the Tuesday night are false and foolish, and that she does not even remember them coming to her door then or on any other occasion to enquire about that or any other noise.

Mrs. Turner has not explained either where she took the child from the hospital, nor where she kept it from the Saturday till Wednesday, when she says she gave it to Mrs. Wagner.

Coroner Charges Murder.

Niagara Falls, N.Y., Sept. 24.—Coroner Walter A. Scott, who has been conducting the investigation following the finding of the body of an infant girl thrown from a train on the Lewiston branch of the New York Central, on Thursday last, and in connection with which Mrs. Maud Turner (alias Miller) is now under arrest in Toronto, last evening rendered a verdict, which formally charges Mrs. Turner with the crime of murder in the first degree.

San Francisco Police Interested.

San Francisco, Cal., Sept. 24.—That Maud Turner, alias Miller, alias Gmelin, incarcerated for child murder at Toronto, may be the same woman who operated in San Francisco and in Reno, Nev., in 1905, is the belief of the authorities here. Dr. Marion Thrasher of this city, asserts that he made a medical examination of a child for a woman named Zemelin, who wished to adopt it. Later the woman removed to Reno, where the child was taken from her by the authorities. This woman was also accused of murdering another infant.

MAY GOVERN BY A COMMISSION

Port Arthur, Sept. 24. Council will probably take definite action soon on a matter that has been under discussion among the people for a long time—that of a new system of municipal government.

Talk is of a paid commission of experts to act instead of mayor and council. The members would be railway, light, power and telephone experts, and, with another as chairman, would act as board of directors taking in charge all business created by the various franchises in which the city has practically half a million dollars invested.

The committee will be appointed to prepare a report, so that a plebiscite may be submitted, and they will likely attend the convention of heads of civic governments to be held shortly at St. Louis for the purpose of getting information on the subject.

UNKNOWN MAN KILLED ON TRACK

Kingston, Sept. 24.—The body of an unknown man is awaiting identification. As 6 o'clock yesterday morning it was found beside the G.T.R. tracks near Rideau station. Dr. Anglin found death due to natural causes. The man was presumably a tramp, dressed in shabby blue serge coat and vest, light flannel shirt, dark trousers with gray stripped Kentucky jeans. He wore new boots and a pair of grey woolen socks, the top of one of the socks being brown; wore a dark tweed peaked cap and was dark complexioned with gray eyes, dark hair and full dark beard; 5 feet 7 inches tall, weighing 130 pounds, and being about 55 years of age.

POLICE INSPECTOR WAS A GRAFTER

Chicago, Sept. 24.—Police Inspector Edward McCann, charged with "grafting," was found guilty by a jury yesterday.

Attorney Wayman charged that "graft" aggregating many thousands of dollars had been collected from disorderly houses in return for "protection," at $40 a month.

McCann's defence was that he had suppressed and regulated vice in his district with so rigorous a hand that a conspiracy was formed against him.

STORY IS DENIED

No Truth in Rumor About C. P. R. Building New Line From Peterborough.

Montreal, Sept. 23.—When seen tonight Mr. J. W. Leonard, general manager of the eastern lines of the C.P.R., said there was nothing in the story that his company was to build a line from Peterborough to Lake Ontario and thence west to Toronto. "There is absolutely nothing to the story," he said. "It is true that we made a survey along Lake Ontario some two years ago, with the object of paralleling the Grand Trunk, but since then there has not been anything done in regard to the matter."

"But what about the future plans of the C.P.R. in that section of Ontario?" was asked.

"It is hard to say what we may do in the distant future, but for the present and the near future there is absolutely nothing in the story that we are to build that line. We are too busy with urgent construction in the west to bother much with eastern lines. Eventually we will double-track much of the line between here and Toronto and build new lines, but not for some time."

WERE CREMATED IN AUTOMOBILE

Seattle, Wash., Sept. 24.—Three women were killed and three men and a women seriously injured when an automobile containing eight persons jumped off a trestle at Fourth and Weller streets, a short distance from the Union Station here, yesterday.

As soon as the car landed on the tide flats, 25 feet below, the gasoline tank exploded and flames shot up thirty feet.

When firemen arrived, two women were dead, with all the clothing burned from their bodies. They had been killed instantly. The other woman, horribly burned, died on the way to the hospital. All the men were bruised and burned, and one suffered a broken leg.

JURYMEN WITH A GRIEVANCE

St. John, N.B., Sept. 24. Jurymen spoke out in the Circuit Court here yesterday morning. J. Sydney Kane, when called for duty, asked to be excused, declaring he had served the last ten days in different cases, and thought it time somebody else took a turn.

Kendall Hall, another merchant, declared merchants who were excused from jury duty in the recent trial of McDougall, editor of Free Speech, on the ground of ill-health, sat day after day through the proceedings, listening to evidence and arguments. It was his opinion that the court should enforce jury attendance by sending to jail those who failed to assume their burden.

HIS HOLINESS MUCH PLEASED

London, Sept. 24.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—A Rome despatch says the Pope was extremely pleased by the receipt of a telegram from Quebec giving the text of messages exchanged between Mgr Sbarretti and King Edward on the occasion of the Plenary Council of the Canadian Catholic Church. His holiness was especially satisfied the solemn reaffirmation by the King of the religious freedom granted to all British subjects throughout the Empire. It was reported that the Pope said such an attitude on the part of the ruler of the greatest power in the world contrasted strikingly with that of other countries from which better things might have been expected.

CANNOT PREVENT LIQUOR TRANSPORT

Mobile, Ala., Sept. 24.—In the inferior criminal court, Judge Alford declared the section of the Fuller Prohibition Law which prevents transportation of liquors for delivery inoperative and discharged two men who were arrested here with wagons on which were barrels of whisky and beer. Judge Alford held that that portion of the law was not a reasonable exercise of police powers.

This provision of the Fuller law was considered the most powerful weapon the prohibitionists had.

GUELPH WATERWORKS OPENED; IS A MUNICIPAL ENTERPRISE

Hon. J. M. Gibson, Representing the Province, Turns the Valve That Lets in the New Water Supply—Ald. McCrea Weldomes the Visitor.

Guelph, Sept. 24.—The Royal City yesterday celebrated the formal opening of its new waterworks system by his honor the Lieutenant-Governor, Col. J. M. Gibson. Apart from the local significance attached to such an event, the ceremony in the afternoon and the banquet in the evening bore splendid testimony to the results which can be achieved by municipal ownership, under the management of a competent commission, shorn of the deleterious influences of local and party politics.

Guelph first drew upon its shoulders the mantle of municipal ownership over twenty years ago, when the Guelph Junction Railway was constructed to connect the city with the C.P.R. The line is only 15 miles long, but Sir William Van Horne once said that it was the most profitable piece of municipal ownership in the world. From that time until the present the city has kept faith with the principle of municipal ownership, never to find that confidence misplaced.

To-day Guelph citizens are the only citizens in Canada who can say of their street railway, gas, electric light and waterworks systems, "These belong to us."

Hon. Mr. Gibson, attended by Capt. Douglas Young, A.D.C., arrived from Toronto about 3 o'clock. The party was met by the members of the city council and board of trade, and was driven at once to the new main pumping station, where his honor turned the large valve letting the supply of pure spring water into the reservoir, and declared the waterwords officially open.

In welcoming his honor, Ald. J. A. McCrea, chairman of the reception committee, referred to the events antecedent to the installation of the new system. In 1907 the system was placed under the control of a commission. When these gentlemen found the water impure and asked the citizens for funds to provide a new supply, the confidence of the ratepayers as to municipal ownership, and in the commissioners, at once showed itself, and $125,000 was immediately available.

His honor, after turning the valve, admitted that it was fifty years since he had performed a similar task. It was in 1859 that he was one of the head boys of the Central School in Hamilton who were selected to open the waterworks there.

He congratulated the city on securing a full supply of pure spring water, so well protected from the source to the reservoir as to entirely free from contamination. He was all the more gratified when he learned that it had been efficiently and economically brought about.

The banquet last evening took the form of a municipal reunion. Representatives from all municipalities in western Ontario were present, as well as from financial papers in the States.

Responding to the toast of "Our Guest," the Lieutenant-Governor referred to municipal ownership and control. He thought Guelph occupied an advanced position in regard to the operation of public utilities generally. That opened a large question. Some utilities were properly placed under public control. It was not every municipality that could be trusted to elect or appoint men capable of managing such works. It was always advisable for a municipality to own its utilities. In many cases it was an advantage to operate these utilities directly or by commission. Guelph in this respect had been fortunate in its representatives.

Other speakers were Mayor R. P. Slater of Niagara Falls, Mayor Weidenhammer of Waterloo, Jas. Oborne, general superintendent C.P.R.; E. A. James, a Canadian engineer, and Jos. P. Downey, M.P.P., South Wellington.

ARRIVAL OF THE HANS EGEDE AT COPENHAGEN

BRITISH WARSHIPS JOIN IN THE HUDSON-CELEBRATION

Inflexible, Drake, Argyll and Duke of Edinburgh Are Anchored Off Sandy Hook, With Admiral Sir Edward Seymour in Command.

New York, Sept. 24.—Three British cruisers, the Drake, Argyll and Duke of Edinburgh, which, with the armored cruiser Inflexible, will represent Great Britain at the Hudson-Fulton celebration, pushed through a gray haze into sight of New York harbor yesterday afternoon and anchored at sunset close to Sandy Hook. The British flagship, the Inflexible, with Admiral Sir Edward Hobart Seymour on board, joined her sister ships this morning.

The coming of Sir Edward Seymour has been looked forward to with unusual pleasure by the American officers. The flagship Connecticut has been paired off with the Inflexible by order of Admiral Schroeder, and the officers in the flagship will see to it that their British brothers on the Inflexible get as good a time as possible during their stay in American waters. Admiral Schroeder, as soon as the Inflexible anchored, called on Sir Edward and welcomed him. Admiral Sir Edward Seymour immediately returned the visit and met on the Connecticut all the officers of the flagship and the division commanders, who were assembled there to welcome him.

Suicide at Grave.

Ottawa, Sept. 24.—Yesterday afternoon a New York City man named E. Hamilton, committed suicide at Beachwood cemetery here by shooting himself through the head with a revolver. His wife died here a year ago, and he suicided at or near her grave.

It is stated that Hamilton a year ago married a Miss King, of Ottawa, that she died in about a month, and that despondency at her death led to his deed of yesterday.

Winnipeg, Sept. 24.—It is announced that a general reduction of 20 cents a barrel, or 10 cent a 98-pound bag, on all grades of flour, will be made.

Cook Banquetted.

New York, Sept. 24.—Cheered by a thousand men and women as he entered the banquet hall on the arm of Rear-Admiral Schley (retired), Dr. Frederick A. Cook told his story last night before the most brilliant audience he has addressed since he left Denmark. The banquet was given by the Arctic Club of America, of which Dr. Cook is a member, in recognition of his last polar venture.

While there was no official representative from either state or nation, the assemblage was cosmopolitan and enthusiastic.

STRANGE THINGS

It is a strange thing that a man will carry an umbrella around for two or three days and then it will not rain after all. But let him put down that umbrella and he will find it will rain almost immediately. It is so with some men. They pretend they want to see justice done and the law carried out, except where it concerns themselves. Mr. Balfour has attacked the Budget Bill because he says it does not go quarter of the way to cure the ills it pretends to be the remedy for. Moreover it is Socialistic. The only remedy, he says, is tariff-reform. Tariff-reform is what we understand by Protection. It has nothing to do with land, however, and we cannot see that the rich and big—not necessarily great—have any right to bottle up the necessities of life, one of which is land. As for the rest, Protection has come to be, it seems, a necessary article for the Old Country, as well as for the new. Its new name should be the trade-adjuster. It is the one great adjuster of international trade difficulties.

MANUFACTURERS AND THE AMERICAN TARIFF

(The Weekly Sun)

R. Hobson, in his address at the annual convention of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, held at Hamilton last week, delivered before retiring from the office of President, dealt with the American tariff. Mr. Hobson took it for granted that the maximum rate of American duties will, after March 31st next, be applied against Canadian goods sent across the border, and declared that such action would be equivalent to an announcement from Washington that our neighbors do not want any of the products of Canadian farmers to be sold in their country. Accepting this assumption as correct, Mr. Hobson said we should announce in reply that we do not want American goods to be sold in this country.

If the maximum tariff of the United States is to be applied against Canada the effect will undoubtedly be practically prohibitive as far as the sale of Canadian farm products in the United States is concerned. The regular American tariff on horses valued at $150 per head for less is $30 and 25 per cent. on horses over that value; on sheep the duty is $1.50 per head, and on lambs 75 cents; on calves it is $2 per head, and on cattle valued at over $14, twenty-seven and a half per cent; on beans it is 45 cents per bushel, on potatoes 25 cents, and on barley 30 cents. Rates on other agricultural products are proportionate to these. If on top of all this, the maximum tariff of 25 per cent. additional is to be applied our export trade with the United States will be practically cut off.

But, as elsewhere intimated, it is not at all certain the maximum rate is to be applied; the probabilities rather are, if we allow the French treaty to drop, that only the regular rates will be applied. And, under rates similar to the new regular United States tariff, we have sold quite largely in the American market. Our exports of cattle to the United States in the fiscal year ending with March, 1908, were valued at half a million dollars; of sheep at nearly a million; of hides at close on three and one-half millions, and of turnips and potatoes at nearly $200,000. All told, over $14,000,000 worth of our farm products were sold to our neighbors in that year, while $91,000,000 worth of Canadian products of all kinds—over one-third of the total sent abroad—were taken by them.

In view of these facts Canadians generally will scarcely join with Mr. Hobson in his proposal to jump at the assumption that Americans have already declared for prohibitive rates on Canadian exports, and to declare on their part for retaliation in the form of a policy of non-intercourse with their neighbors. They will rather favor the [illegible] with a view of finding out just where we will stand under that part of the American tariff law which will come into force at the end of March next.

But what is the Sun thinking about? Hasn't it told us full many a time and oft that the country with a protective tariff is doing itself harm and that the opposing country must, therefore, per contra reap the advantage. If not, then what is the force of the Sun's conclusion? To us this article looks as if the Sun were more than half-inclined to admit that there is some force in protection after all.

EDITORIAL NOTES

If Blythe escapes the gallows we shall lose faith in the administration of justice in Ontario.

The Peterborough Review sees nothing but undisguised protectionism in Quebec's prohibition of the export of logs. Yes, it is protection—the physical protection of our pulpwood areas.—The Globe.

The Globe endorses it and yet pretends it frowns on Protection.

Certain scientists now say that the ancient Biblical year was a lunar month. It is contended that Methusaleh, therefore, has been beaten out many times since, being only one-thirteenth of 969 years of age, or seventy-five years three months. This is a case where "looking it up" in the family Bible won't "do."

The Montreal Star speaks of the need of inspiration in religious circles. It probably means results. Everything is judged by results. It is an old saying of cause and effect. The present worship of materialism will hold just so long as churches advertise for patronage.

The Gaelic America, in a recent issue makes a savage attack on Archbishop Farley because he has not shown sufficient zeal for the cause represented by the irascible editor of that publication. Both Canada and the Old Country just now have more than their share of men who have gone crazy on the language question.—The Catholic Register.

Pope Pius IX., Encyl. 1864;

"The Pope and the priests ought to have dominion over temporal affairs.

"The civil power is inferior and subordinate to the ecclesiastical power.

"The Romish Church has the right to exercise its authority without having any limits set to it by the civil power.

"The Romish Church has the right to avail itself of force, and to use the temporal power for that purpose.

"Our church is God's church, and accountable neither to state or country."—The Sentinel.

A writer in the Canadian Baptist rises to enquire if it be all right for Catholics to strive by every means in their power to convert Baptists, what is wrong about Baptists in turn striving to convert Catholics? There is a big difference. Truth has rights which error does not possess. The Baptists, being in error, have no right to convert anything or anybody. We wish it were possible to sugar-coat the pill, and to put it more mildly, but the interests of truth demand that we come out openly and tell these good people just how the case stands.—The Catholic Register.

"Intolerance dies hard."—The Catholic Register.

"Here I propose that we raise our glasses to the health of the King and to the health of the Sovereign Pontiff." At this point the Royal band played the national anthem and the Pontifical hymn. Mgr. Sbarretti, in rising to reply, said he was happy to say that the Province of Quebec gives to the whole world an evident proof that a cordial understanding between the Church and the State is advantageous to the temporal as well as the spiritual welfare of nations. "I am pleased to declare again," he said, "that the Church has always taught this perfect submission to the civil authority. I wish to give new proof in the message of loyal fidelity, that the Archbishops and Bishops of the Dominion, assembled in Plenary Council have addressed to his Majesty King Edward VII., and in the reply that his Majesty has designed to send us himself.—The Sentinel.

The Toronto Telegram takes the position that the Secretary of State, in issuing a charter to the Metropolitan Racing Association, as "doing more than all the Moral Reform Committees of the churches put together" can do to abolish race-track gambling, on the theory that such charters must "tend to universalize race-track gambling and drive the whole business out of Canada as it already has been driven out of the United States." It is rather surprising that a journal so used to riding the Protestant horse should commend the principle that you should do evil that good may come. According to this theory, you should spread smallpox as rapidly as possible to arouse the authorities to preventative measures; you should provide all possible facilities for the making of drunkards in order to hasten prohibition, and generally let loose all sorts of vice for the purpose of curing society of vicious instincts.—The Christian Guardian.

DETECTIVES TO PROTECT THE NATIVES

Lindsay, Sept. 22.—There will be two detectives at the fall fair here this week. The Government send two men down to keep their eyes open for pickpockets, who generally are to be found where people congregate in large numbers. Fall fairs have generally been agreeable "hunting grounds" for pick-pockets, and many a farmer has lost a big wad of money which he brought to town. The presence of detective will have a salutary effect on these thieves, it is hoped.

Man Who Knew What He Wanted Went to Strange Place to Get it

London, Sept. 22.—Just before dinner was served in the W.C.T.U dining-room at the Western Fair grounds, and while crowds were waiting at the tables for their meal, a loud knock was heard at the rear door of the kitchen. One of the members answered the door, and a man who was standing there asked if he might have a glass with a little water in it. The W.C.T.U. member very obligingly dropped everything to give the man the glass of water, and after handing it to him was much surprised to see him pour the water out and draw a huge whiskey flask from his pocket, and partly fill the glass from it. He called a friend and gave it to him, and then filled one for himself, after which, with much smacking of lips, he handed the glass back with many thanks, apparently entirely unconscious of the fact that he had done anything which would cause a W.C.T.U. member to be astonished.

Save 25 Bars of Soap

Ordinarily you use at least one bar of laundry soap every week—more than fifty bars in a year.

That's twice as many as you need, for Taylor's Borax Soap goes twice as far as any other soap.

Please prove this for yourself—we invite the test. Try one bar of this soap with one bar of any other. See which soap lasts the longest—learn which is the cheapest.

We know what the result will be, for we have made this same test many times over—our soap lasts twice as long.

Taylor's Soap

Don't think that all soaps are alike—there is a wonderful difference in Taylor's Borax Soap. Let us show you some of the ways in which this soap differs from others.

First we use only the purest cocoanut oil from the Isle of Ceylon. Then we boil it doubly long and mix in the borax. While boiling we run thousands of gallons of clean water through the soap which carries away all impurities.

We require twenty-one days to make a single cake. The labor of more than 200 people is needed. We crush every bar under a weight of 30 tons to press out the moisture. We put every bar through an ageing process equal to standing six months in your pantry. So you don't have to age this soap.

When finished the bar is hard and firm, so it wears much longer. The borax softens the water which also reduces the amount of soap by almost half that ordinarily required.

This pure soap is utterly harmless to the skin—it leaves the hands whiter and softer than ever before. If it is so harmless to the skin, then think how harmless it must be to the clothes.

INQUIRY AGAINST CHIEF OF POLICE

Ottawa, Sept. 24.—An investigation into the competency of Chief of Police de la Ronde, instituted by the three city newspapers which has been in progress for a week or so, was yesterday adjourned indefinitely.

The chief is also accused of using strong language towards reputable citizens and newspapermen.

STABBING CASE AT HAMILTON

Hamilton, Sept. 24.—Another stabbing affray among foreigners was added to the long list that has disgraced the city. There have been weekly events recently. Most of them have been the result of drunken rows, but the principals in last night's slashing affair were all sober. Because Peter Budda, a Hungarian laborer, got $2 more pay than some of his fellow countrymen at the International Harvester Works, they became jealous, and whisking out knives, they cut Budda over the heart and across the head.

It is thought he will recover.

It transpired that, after tumbling over in the dark, the unfortunate man had fainted and lain out in the cold rain all night. He gave his name as George Hugert, laborer, aged 45, unmarried. He was removed to the hospital, where he is in a precarious state, suffering from internal injuries.

WHAT MANNERISM DID

Another Example of the Rule That Works Both Ways.

THE HINDOO REST METHOD.

A Fascinating New Clothes Hanger That Saves Closet Space—Two Old English Games Revived For Fall Amusement.

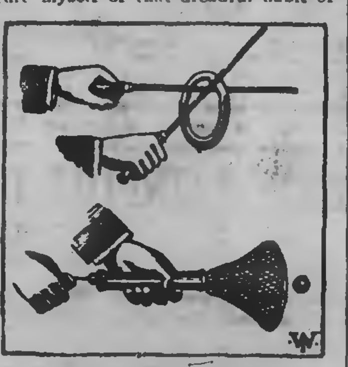
My Dear Mabel—It is very humiliating to my amour propre and all that sort of thing, but I must tell you how the family got the better of me recently. For a long time I have been annoyed by the mannerisms of certain members of the household. Dick doesn't always eat his soup in the quietest fashion—now, don't think for a minute that he has adopted the suction plan; nothing as dreadful as that has occurred—still, there are times when it is perceptible to the ear that Dick is eating soup. Then father keeps up a continual tattoo with his fingers when talking, and even my dear mother hums about her work, off the key, too, in a way that gets on my nerves awfully. I've said little things occasionally about mannerisms, and they promised to reform. But yesterday they turned on me when I proposed that we set up a mite box and each one put in a penny whenever he or she indulged in a mannerism.

"And if I have any mannerisms you must remind me when I sin," I generously remarked, feeling quite sure that I'd kept too close a watch upon myself to have any annoying habits.

There was a long and embarrassing silence. Then mother spoke.

"Well, dear," she said, "if a mite box would only cure you of the way you have of giving a perfectly meaningless little tee-hee at the end of nearly every sentence you speak I would be in favor of it."

"Her tee-heeing isn't half so bad as the way she has of rocking madly while she converses." This came from the youngest member of the family. Then Dick cut in and said he could stand the rest of my faults if I would cure myself of that dreadful habit of drumming on the table while I was playing bridge, and dear old uncle finished me completely by saying mildly:



CERF VOLO—AIGLON TENNIS.

"My dear, of course you are not conscious of it, but that trick of sniffing is growing upon you. Now, for a lady to sniff—you know the rest? Well, we haven't set up that mite box in the family yet."

In my childish days I read a story that impressed itself upon me about a hen that couldn't say anything bad enough about one of the other hens because she—the other hen—had a speckled feather in her wing, while all the time the gossiper was being laughed at by the whole barnyard because she had two speckled feathers in her wing and didn't know it.

I reminded myself of that hen the other day.

To counteract the effects of too much mental exertion in trying to reform people, I'm now indulging in the latest cult—the Hindoo method of rest and relaxation. Yes, I am a faddist, but it looks as if this Hindoo business would become a life principle. It's tremendously hard to relax completely. The Hindoo maintains that the mind must be fixed on the muscles relaxing to get the best results. There are exercises for the legs, head, arms and even the waist and hips that have to be relaxed, but I'd have to write a volume to explain how they're all done. What the Hindoo cult lays most stress upon is right breathing. One can fall into what approaches a mesmerized state just by breathing in the oriental fashion, which affects both the lungs and abdomen. Here is an exercise that I take every day. While lying flat on my back I raise the right hand to the nostrils and with my finger or thumb close one side tightly, making it necessary to breathe through the other. The order is reversed by closing the other nostril.

This rhythmical breathing brings about a state of perfectly blissful repose. On days when I do not drop off to sleep under this soothing treatment I try abdominal breathing, continuing the reclining position. I take a deep breath down in the abdominal region, gradually inflating the chest and lungs as the breathing is continued on up to the top of the lungs. The breath is held a few seconds, then exhaled by drawing in the abdomen, then dropping the lower part of the chest and finally allowing the upper part to fall as much as possible.

Not until you have known the great benefits from abdominal breathing will you begin to understand the value of this old world method, and I know it would do you a heap of good. Now, doesn't this sound as if I'm a sure enough convert?

I have, though, until lately been getting a lot of physical exercise and losing a lot of temper over the very densely populated condition of my clothes closet. Now, don't think I am trying to impress you with the idea that my summer wardrobe has been unusually well supplied this season. Rather the case is that of not many frocks, but still less pegs to hang them on. But I happened on a new hanger the other day that has simplified things immensely. This hanger will hold five different garments in the space usually occupied by one. It is an upright nickel rod supplied with a hook at the upper end to fasten it to shelf or rod and a smaller one at the bottom on which to hang blouse or skirt. Between the upper and lower hooks are four horizontal rods, graduated in size from top to bottom. Each rod has a hook at the end. With this new hanger five articles are hung one above the other, and one can be removed without lifting off all the rest, which is a boon when space is at a premium.

A clever woman I know, who lives in an apartment where closet room is scarce, has solved the problem of hanging garments without crowding them by tacking to the back of the closet the width and depth of the space a piece of denim. On this fabric she pins her skirts and waists by means of large safety pins. The scheme is not a bad one to keep in mind when staying at a country boarding house where closet room is apt to be rather limited.

And apropos of the good old summer time, which, by the way, is almost a thing of the past for this year, I spent the night with some English friends of ours who have a place out of town. While there we played some new open air games that had been recently sent over from England to them. One of these sports was called cerf volo, a game that created in the spring a sensation in Paris and along the Riviera. This cerf volo is very like the old world grace hoops and is played with red and yellow hoops and two sticks. The object is to throw the hoops up into the air or from player to player and to catch them on the sticks. The height or distance to which the hoops may be thrown is extraordinary, and the game is both amusing to play and graceful to watch. The other game was an odd form of tennis known as aiglon. In this play the ball is thrown from a funnel shaped ring net which is fitted with a spring tube handle. By throwing the spring in and out, somewhat after the manner of a syringe, the ball is forced from the funnel with great velocity. We had good fun in catching the ball on its exits from the funnel. With so much mental and physical high jinks I expect to develop into a raging beauty. In the meanwhile I am yours devotedly,

MABEL.

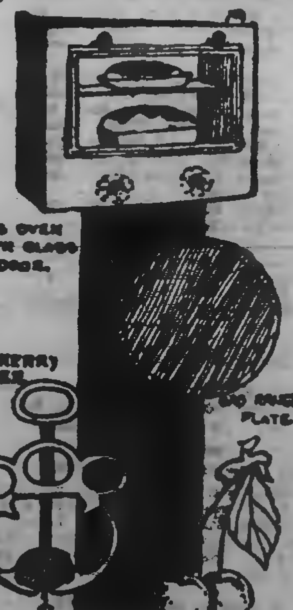
KITCHEN APPLIANCES.

Glass Door For Oven One of the Latest Novelties.

The oven with a glass door, through which the cooking progress of the articles of food may be noted with a minimum of inconvenience, is considered a necessity by many cooks. It undoubtedly is a great convenience, and it also contributes to the proper preparation of the food by doing away with the necessity for opening and shutting the oven door to see how things are getting along. Many of the up to date gas ranges are equipped with a glass door to the oven, and there may also be obtained a portable oven with a glass door, thus putting this convenience within reach of the housewife whose cooking is done over a gas stove.

Another convenience designed for the gas range is a plate made from two layers of sheet iron. Each layer is full of perforations and so arranged that the perforations do not come directly over one another. The original object of its construction was to prevent the burning or scorching of food, but it is now claimed that by its use there is considerable saving of fuel. It is especially valuable in cooking cereals and for preserving purposes, as an even heat is maintained. It may also be used as a warming plate, flatiron heater, bread toaster, etc. As it saves the utensils from coming in direct contact with the gas flame, it prevents discoloration and thus is of value. It may be used on a coal or wood stove in place of a lid.



GAS OVEN WITH GLASS DOOR.
A CHERRY SEEDER.
GAS RANGE PLATE.

NEW THINGS FOR THE KITCHEN.

During cherry time the simple little contrivance such as is here pictured, that does away with much of the inconvenience and labor associated with cherry seeding, is sure to be appreciated. The device is practical, as it seeds and stems the fruit at the same time. It is inexpensive—another point in its favor.

DETECTIVE GREER VISITS LINDSAY

Lindsay, Sept. 22.—Provincial Detective Greer of Toronto, was in town to-day and held a consultation with Crown Attorney Devlin regarding the coming trial of Joseph Hunter for murder.

Detective Greer stated that he was in town merely to ascertain if the crown attorney needed new witnesses or any other assistance of a similar nature in this case. The department makes it a practice of aiding in every way possible and send a detective down in such cases as this.

No other case in this vicinity is taking his attention, Detective Greer stated when asked if such were the case.

WEDDING BELLS

MAGEE—FAIRBAIRN

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Fairbairn, Wellington street, was the scene of a very pretty wedding at 3 o'clock this afternoon, when their youngest daughter, Ethel, was united in marriage to Mr. Chas. H. Magee, of Emily.

Rev. W. G. Smith of Bobcaygeon was assisted by Rev. J. Wallace, pastor of St. Andrew's church, Lindsay. The marriage ceremony was performed beneath an arch of evergreen and asters. The bride was attired in an Empire gown of white silk mull, with dainty trimmings of lace and wore a tulle veil with a coronet of orange blossoms and carried a bouquet of white asters and maiden hair fern. She entered the drawing room on the arm of her father to the strains of the wedding march played by Miss Ella Switzer, of Bethel. Little Miss Gladys Kelly, niece of the bride, carried the ring in a basket of flowers. She was dressed in cream taffeta silk.

After the ceremony the wedding party sat down to a dainty dejeuner the dining room being prettily decorated with sweet peas, asters and ferns, the color scheme being pink and white.

The bride and groom left on the 6.20 train for Toronto and points west. The bride's travelling suit was of champagne with a shadow stripe, with a white silk blouse dotted with pearls, and she wore a large picture hat.—Lindsay Warder.

BENT—McQUADE

Mr. Fred C. H. Bent led to the hymeneal altar the girl of his choice in the person of Miss E. K. (Dot) McQuade, Thursday afternoon last. The marriage ceremony took place at Christ church, the Rev. Mr. Earle officiating. After the young benedicts received the congratulations of their many friends an adjournment was made to the home of the bride's father where an elaborate feast was done justice to. The young couple are very popular in town, and the bride's popularity was evidenced by the many useful and valuable presents she received. Mr. and Mrs. Bent will reside in Cavan township.—Omemee Mirror.

HALL—COTE

The marriage of Miss Bertha Hall, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. Hall, Queen street, to Mr. Frank Cote, took place last evening at the Methodist parsonage. Rev. J. R. Real, pastor of the Queen street Methodist church, officiating. Mr. Cote is a well-known hockey player and a member of the champion Midgets. Miss Hall is a popular young Lindsay lady. Congratulations from all sides are extended to the bride and groom. They will reside in Lindsay.—Lindsay Warder.

BOLAND—O'KEEFE

A very pretty wedding took place on Tuesday morning at 9 o'clock at St. Paul's church, Norwood, the Rev. Father Conway officiating. The contracting parties were Miss Helena F. O'Keefe, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Michael O'Keefe, of Norwood, and Mr. John P. Boland, of Asphodel.

The bride, who was given away by her father, looked charming in a gown of cream Gloria satin, and wore the customary tulle veil and white blossoms. She was assisted by Miss B. Henry, cousin of the groom, who wore a dress of blue silk mull over taffeta. Mr. Thomas O'Keefe, brother of the bride, performed the duties of groomsman.

After the ceremony the bridal party drove to the home of the bride's parents, "Rath More," Norwood. After congratulations the party adjourned to the dining-room, where a dainty dejeuner was served, the room being beautifully decorated, the color scheme being pink and white.

After the party had done justice to the good things served several toasts were proposed, which were responded to by the groom in a few well-chosen words.

The groom's gift to the bride was a set of mink furs; to the bridesmaid a sunburst of pearls, and to the groomsman a signet ring. The bride was the recipient of many good and useful presents, which showed the high esteem in which she is held by her many friends.

The happy couple left by the 4.06 train in the afternoon for Chicago, the bride being dressed in amethyst [illegible] cloth and place picture hat.

Guests were present from Peterborough, Campbellford, Toronto, Chicago and other places.—Norwood Register.

LANG—McMAHON

A very pretty wedding was solemnized at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. B. McMahon, Marshall street, Millbrook, on Wednesday, September 22nd, when their daughter, Miss Charlotte E., was united in marriage to Mr. Hilliard Lang, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Lang, of Cavan, the Rev. W. P. Rogers, B.A., officiating, the ceremony being performed in the presence of about 40 guests.

At 2 o'clock p.m., to the lively strains of the wedding march, skilfully played by Miss H. Courtney, of Omemee, the bride, leaning on the arm of her father, who gave her away, entered the parlor and took her place under an arch of ferns and evergreens, the groom immediately taking his place at her side. They were unattended.

At the conclusion of the interesting ceremony an excellent wedding dejeuner was served in the dining-room.

The bride was charmingly attired in a gown of cream directoire cloth trimmed with satin and lace. Her travelling suit was of blue broadcloth with picture hat to match; she carried a bouquet of bridal roses and ferns.

The presents to the bride were numerous and costly, among them a beautiful carving set from the choir of the Methodist church; a jardiniere and stand from Miss Dean and Sunday school class, the bride having been a faithful and appreciated member of both.

The groom's gift to the bride was a gold watch and chain.

The happy couple left on the evening train for a trip to Toronto, Niagara Falls and Buffalo, and upon their return will reside in the township of Cavan.—Millbrook Mirror.

PETERBOROUGH GIRL WAS ARRESTED IN ROCHESTER

Mother Had Police Take Her Into Custody — Girl Said to Have Frequented Place Where Liquor Was Sold—Doesn't Want to Come Back.

Rochester, N.Y., Sept. 23.—"I will never go home, I will commit suicide first," said pretty 17-year-old Mabel Jobe, with tears streaming down her cheeks last night after being taken to police headquarters on a charge of vagrancy, the warrant for her arrest having been sworn out by her mother.

The girl resides with her mother in Peterborough, Ont., and came to this city some time ago to accept a position in a paper box factory.

The girl's mother came too Rochester yesterday to get her daughter to return to her home in Canada, and again take up work as a domestic. This the girl refused to do, and as a result the warrant was sworn out for her arrest. The mother told the police her daughter had been frequenting places where liquor is sold, and is not keeping the best of company. The girl says this is not true, and when the North street family, where she rooms, were interviewed, they stated that she never went out at night.

The girl was almost heartbroken at being placed under arrest, and insists that she will kill herself if she is compelled to return to Canada and again become a domestic in a private family.

Chief Rozzel told the Review the girl had no police record here.

HARVEST FESTIVAL SERVICES AT ALL SAINTS' CHURCH

A beautiful and impressive service marked the celebration of the Harvest Thanksgiveing Festival at All Saints' church last night. Everything was in harmony with the occasion, and the large congregation paid close attention to every detail of the service. The edifice was artistically decorated with offerings, significant of the harvest. The music by the large choir was most acceptable, the anthem "Break Forth into Joy," being especially so. The rector was assisted in the services by Rev. Dr. Langfeldt, rector of St. Luke's, and the sermon was delivered by the Rev. Canon Dixon, of Trinity Church, Toronto.

His remarks were listened to attentively and he displayed an earnestness which appealed to his hearers.

In the first part of his discourse he reminded the congregation that their lives should be continually singing the praises of God for the many blessings He had seen fit to pour down upon them, not once in a while, but all the time, as His desire was to always guard those whom he loved. "But, what is it to give thanks unto God?" asked the preacher. "If we are going to be thankful we must first be obedient, as that is the very foundation of thankfulness. It is when we are assigned irksome duties and do them with a cheerful heart that we are showing the true spirit of thankfulness, and not when our pathway is smooth and no cares beset us. Sometimes He calls us to stand up for our faith in the face of derision or mockery. If we stand the test we again display the true spirit. It is impossible to give full thanks for all or even part of the mercies we receive from His hand. But, suppose the crops had failed this year and our families were called upon to suffer the pangs of hunger, what then? Would we still be thankful? It is very easy to be grateful when conditions are satisfactory, but that was not the kind of thankfulness that God wanted. It was in all circumstances and at all times that we should give Him our thanks. He emphasized the fact that those present knew nothing about real poverty, and gave several cases which had come under his notice in Toronto, which would tend to bear out his statement. He next gave some interesting statistics showing the immensity of the harvest in the provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta for this year, and asked if it was not a matter of thankfulness for all to consider. The words of the poet:

"Lord God of Hosts, be with us yet, Lest we forget, lest we forget."

were very significant.

But there was one way in which we could show how thankful we are, and that was by giving our hearts to Him, and let Him guide and direct us in everything. We would then be within the power of His love, and our lives will be happy. The speaker closed with a strong appeal to all to make a friend of Him and follow in His footsteps.

WERE PAINFULLY SCALDED BY ESCAPING STEAM

Ernest Hensley and Harry Chapman, two employees of Adam Hall's, were painfully scalded yesterday afternoon while engaged on making connections from a hot water boiler in the cellar of the Nicholls Hospital. Both men were working on top of the boiler when two nipples blew off, and each received the full force of the escaping steam about the body. The unfortunate workmen were taken into one of the wards where their injuries were attended to. Chapman was able to be out this morning, but Hensley who was the more severely scalded will be confined in the hospital for some days.

WILL THIS HELP FURNISH CLUE TO THE IDENTITY?

Springville Farmer Remembers Man of Short Stature Who Was Leader of Gang of Rowdies—Skeleton Perhaps That of the Fellow Mentioned—Inquest Resumed Last Night.

The inquest at Springville was reopened yesterday afternoon at five o'clock at F. E. Wilson's store. The coroner ordered a post-mortem on the skeleton found in the woods a week ago Sunday, and this will be done by Drs. Greer and Eastwood.

ONE WITNESS HEARD

The evidence of only one witness was taken. Mr. George Hidgood, who with his wife discovered the remains of the skeleton in Campbell's woods, told of finding it. He had no idea of the identity of it, and could give no information that might lead to it being established.

WAS THIS THE MAN?

A farmer, who lives near Kendrey's station stated last night that a year ago last spring there was a gang in the neighborhood, and the gang was a source of annoyance to residents of the vicinity. The man who was apparently leader was the dead man, it is believed. He was, judging by his accent, probably from the north of Ireland, or may have been a Canadian. He was about five feet two inches in height, and the clothes he wore corresponded with what as left of those found on the skelton. The man had been seen with a pair of new shoes on.

Shortly after the gang went away from Springville a number of young fellows got into trouble at Belleville for robbing a tailor shop there. These are supposed to have been members of the same gang.

PRELIMINARY HEARING OF JOPLINGS OPENING TO-DAY

Nothing New Introduced in the Evidence — Three Witnesses Testified—Hearing Enlarged Till Wednesday.

The preliminary hearing of the Jopling brothers, Fred and Harry, who are charged with manslaughter as a result of their alleged complicity in a fracas which is believed by the Crown to be the indirect cause of Arthur Bollard's death, was opened this morning. It was held in the County Council Chamber before County Police Magistrate Edmison, and was largely a rehearsal of the testimony given at the inquest into the cause of Bollard's death at Chemong Park on the evening of August 23rd.

The strength of the Crown's case against the Joplings apparently lies in proving that Bollard was assaulted by Fred Jopling after being pointed out to Fred by Harry Jopling, and in establishing that the injuries received by Bollard were the indirect cause of his death.

In his cross examination of Dr. Scott, Mr. D. O'Connell, the counsel for the defence, was very persistent in getting the doctor, who was one of the physicians who perfromed the post-mortem on Bollard's body, to admit that the cause of death might be from some souce not ascertained by the doctor in his post-mortem examination.

"As this is a charge which cannot be tried in this court, the parties cannot be called upon to elect or plead and there cannot be no formal arraignment, I therefore ask that the case be proceeded with," said County Crown Attorney Wood at the opening of the proceedings.

Dr. Scott, who attended Bollard, testified concerning the condition in which he found the young man. The contributing or indirect cause of the death of Bollard was from the injuries sustained in the fight, which the deceased had said he had had at Chemong Park.

Mr. O'Connell, in his cross examination, reminded Dr. Scott of the grave nature of the charge with which the Joplings were charged, and reminded him of the seriousness of his evidence.

"You would not want to state positively what you simply suppose was the cause of death," said Mr. O'Connell. Counsel for the defence then dwelt for some time on the indirect cause of death. Dr. Scott, in reply, to a question from Mr. O'Connell, said in cases of death there might be a number of contributing causes.

"There might be a number of contributing causes of death which a physician in a post-mortem examination might not discover," said Mr. O'Connell.

"Certainly," replied the doctor.

The doctor admitted that this might possibly be the case in the post-mortem in connection with the Bollard post-mortem. Mr. O'Connell put the witness through a long and very searching cross-examination.

Blake Cullen, who lives at Bridgenorth, and who was at the park on the night of the fracas next gave evidence. Nothing new was disclosed and practically gave in substance what he said at the inquest. Crown Attorney Wood was severe in his examination of Cullen and told him he was reticient about giving his testimony.

Gordon Long witnessed the trouble between the Joplings and Bollard. He said there was no outcry that he heard on the part of Bollard during his struggle with Fred, and heard no outcry whatever.

There was no further evidence taken and the hearing was enlarged until next Wednesday morning at ten o'clock.

THAT WATCH OF YOURS

Is in many respects similar to a railway engine. Let an engine be run without oil or cleaning and before long it will stop dead. Upon examination it will be found that the friction and wear and tear has ruined the machinery, and it is fit only for the scrap iron heap. Likewise your watch. You put it in your pocket, and while there is a kick in it, you, in your mistaken economy, do not consult the watchmaker, and consequently rob your watch of years of good service and also much of its former accuracy. The time-keeping qualities of a good watch are maintained and often improved by timely and skilful attention. If you have been one of the neglectful ones call around and see us.

He brought his lung duster, his certificates, his Dominion rights, as he calls them, and all the rest of his equipment along.

Nevertheless, the doctor was unable to make arrangements for a stand on the fair grounds, where he might show the wonderful powers of that same lung duster.

The directors of the fair asked him for $25 for the privilege, and this Dr. Pelletier thought prohibitive. In fact he intimated that it was almost outrageous. He does not intend, however, that this little setback should affect his work in the cause of humanity.

COURT OF APPEAL REFUSE LEAVE

Special to the Review.

Toronto, Ont., Sept. 24.—The Court of Appeal has refused to grant an order directing Justice Riddell to state a case for the court in the matter of the King against Walter Blythe under sentence to be hanged on Oct. 1st for the murder of his wife at Agincourt, Ont. The application was made by Mr. T. C. Robinette, K.C., Wednesday morning, relying entirely on the ground that Blythe was intoxicated at the time that he did not realize the probable consequences of his act. To the prisoner's counsel, however, is left the opportunity of making application to Mr. Justice Riddell himself to state a case upon this point.

Why it Costs so Much to Live

An item that looms formidably in the nation's annual family expense is for liquor and tobacco. No one will have the hardihood to contend that these are necessities. In 1905 distilled malt and vinous liquors to the total value of $501,266,905 were produced in the United States while $19,257,000 worth were imported. These are wholesale prices and so represent less than half the actual cost to the consumer. For example, we drew 58,747,680 barrels of 31 gallons each of beer in the year ending June 30, 1908. Taking the average sized glass and making the average allowance for foam, a quart of beer will fill five glasses. At five cents a glass, then, our beer as it was served over the bar last year must have cost $1,821,177,080. Making all possible allowances for beer at a cheaper rate the bill would be a billion and a half at retail prices. The aggregate debt of the states and cities of the United States in 1902, the latest period for which figures are available, totaled $1,864,195,826, or just about what we spend a year for beer.—From "New Luxuries Keep the People Poor," in October Technical World Magazine.

Great Britain exported to Canada 1908-9 goods worth $131,745,375, and the U.S. exported $92,604,357.

Winnipeg, Man., Sept. 22.—The adoption of the system of dispatching trains by telephone instead of telegraph on the Canadian Pacific Railroad has proved that fully 80 per cent more traffic can be handled by the former than by the latter.

In June of last year the company put in operation a telephone circuit between Montreal and Farnham, Que., and it proved satisfactory in every way. Since that the company has strung other telephone lines, and in western Canada to-day it has 531 miles.

It is the intention of the company at once to string a telephone line between Winnipeg and Brandon, 133 miles, and within a year it will have 1,000 miles of its system operated by telephone. The system is operated by telegraphers, who have their keys handy in case of emergency.

It is understood that the company will string 'phone wires from the Pacific to the Atlantic as rapidly as possible.

For the coming season have been completed and we are now fully prepared to execute orders for Fur Garments of every description.

Having made heavy purchases of choice skins at very attractive prices before the recent extreme advance, we are therefore in a position to furnish Fur Garments of the highest qualities at prices that cannot be duplicated elsewhere. NO MATTER WHAT YOUR FUR NEEDS ARE, WE CAN SUPPTY THEM and at the lowest possible cost to you, as all middlemen's profits are eliminated by our method of buying fur skins direct from the trappers and making them up in our own factory —a saving of fully 20 to 25 per cent.

Mr. Fred Elliott, of Muskegon, Mich., is in the city to-day.

Mr. and Mrs. Stewart R. Payne, of Warsaw, Ont., desire to thank their many friends who have written them in their sore bereavement in the death of their only son, Harold C. INVITED TO MR. COLLIER'S LAWN

The Peterborough centre of the Royal Astronomical Society and its friends are invited to be present upon Mr. H. B. Collier's lawn, 555 Weller street, on Tuesday evening at eight o'clock, to observe Jupiter, Saturn and Mars which are now in a favorable position for observation.

FOR THE LADY WHO CALLS

The lady who has a large circle of acquaintances always finds it a difficult matter to keep track of the reception days of her friends and often mistakes are made, that might have been avoided if care were taken to make a record of such days. And then there are the teas, at homes, and parties to be remembered too and when a hostess is planning an affair, she is always worried lest she overlook some one who has extended hospitality to her some time previous. To avoid these mistakes, a social register has been issued by the Review, that will be a boon to the busy lady. There are pages for each day of the month on which the record of the calls received and paid with the address of the visitor appear, then there are pages for social engagements, visits paid, addresses and memoranda, all of which prove very valuable data to have. These books are on sale at all the book-stores and at the Review Office for 50 cents and there has already been a good demand for them.

A FLAG INCIDENT

To the Editor of the Review.

Dear Sir,—We think that all the people who were at the Grand Opera House on Wednesday night met to witness the performance of "The Gay Musician" were surprised and delighted at the act of courtesy of the entire company standing and singing 'God Save the King' at the close of the performance and the vast audience joining in. As this company is composed entirely of American citizens the kind act should be deeply appreciated. Another act of courtesy was having the good old Union Jack on the boat that went across the stage and the audience were not slow in responding. We would like to see all companies that play in the Grand Opera House follow the example of "The Gay Musician" Company, and the audience join in. We would like to call the attention of those people who start to rush out before the performance is over, as it is very annoying to those who wish to see the finish of the play.

Hoping the general public will take these words kindly, and thanking you, Mr. Editor, for your valuable space, we remain,

Yours truly,
J. J. TURNER & SONS.

P.C.I. AND ROUGH RIDERS WILL CLASH TO-MORROW

Only one game will be played in the Junior City Rugby League to-morrow afternoon at Riverside Park as the Rough Riders and P. C. I. are the only two teams ready to play. Each club will be represented by a formidable lineup and the exhibition should be interesting. The players of these two teams thoroughly understand all the fine points of the game, and have been hard at work practicing during the past couple of weeks. Both teams will make a big endeavor to land the first game, and the players will get a chance to make good their statements as to which is the better aggregation.

LINES ON SPORT

The meeting called to take place at the Armouries last night for the organizing of a rugby club did not materialize. The members of the regiment were conspicuous only by their absence.

If there is any chance of getting in wrong the sporting editor of the Hamilton Spectator is always there with both feet. A day or two ago he had the Parkdale Canoe Club in the Interprovincial Union without a doubt and had commenced to crow accordingly. But, as usual, he had weeds on his propeller and had to reverse.

There is talk of an amalgamation of the Interprovincial and O. R. F. U. Perhaps it would be a good thing. There is no reason why the two bodies should be overlapping. As far as Peterborough is concerned the grouping with T.A.A.C. and Parkdale is quite satisfactory for the present year.

All interested in Rugby matters in connection with the T.A.S.A.C. are asked to be present at a meeting in the rooms to-night at 8 o'clock.

The secret is out. The reason why the sporting editor was not run down by an automobile on Broadway was because he carried a carpet bag labelled "dynamite."

Those officers connected with the Senior City Baseball teams are reminded of the meeting at 7.15 this evening.

The Chicago team that won the Yankee championship the other day, reminds one of a bunch of promising juniors who once wore Beaverton uniforms and incurred the displeasure of the C.L.A. At any rate it is pleasing to know that the only Pat McDonough is a champion at last.

Paul Acoose, the Grenfell Indian runner, is a son of Acoose, the Indian, who ran Seven Deer from Moose Mountain to Sakemay's reserve, a distance of 100 miles, and killed them all. The feat of Acoose' father is interwoven into one of the standard records of Western Indian life.

A meeting of the inter-provincial and O.R.F.U. representatives is being held in Toronto to-night.

By Newark losing two games to Montreal yesterday and Rochester winning from Providence, the championship will rest in Rochester.

It is owing to the defeats received at the hands of the two Canadian teams, Toronto and Montreal, that Newark have been blocked in their race with Rochester for the Eastern League pennant.

Peterborough will be minus the services of "Gene" Hurtubise this year. Gene did a little too much wrestling with Yankee Rogers last winter to be eligible for amateur company again. His famous "bear hug" will be much missed.—Mail and Empire.

Only three innings of the Picton-Kingston baseball game was played yesterday on account of rain, the score being 4—3 in favor of Picton. Ab Quinlan was twirler for the Picton team.

PAT McDONOUGH'S LACROSSE TEAM

Have Landed Two Championships This Season.

St. Paul, Minn., Sept. 22.— Four thousand lacrosse fans saw the Shamrock Athletic Club, of Chicago, defeat the local lacrosse team here Sunday for the championship of the National Association. The game was fiercely contested. At full time the score stood four all, but in the ten minutes' overtime the Shamrock ran away from the St. Paul team, netting three goals, making the final score 7 to 4. The Shamrocks also won the championship of Chicago a week ago, when they defeated the Illinois Athletic Club team by the score of 8 to 5. The line-up of the winners Sunday was as follows:—Gilligan, Marshall, Pickering, McIntyre, Irwin, Hill, Hunter, Masterson, Knapp, Nesbitt, McDonough and Shaver.

NO PREFERENCE TO RUGBY PLAYERS

Applicant for a Position in Toronto City Hall Turned Down

"I don't know who offered him a job," said Mayor Oliver this morning, noting that a young man named Bardgett had been promised work at Toronto City Hall in order that the Argos may bring him from Brantford to play football. "I know one fellow that didn't and wouldn't," he added, "and that's me."

Then he called up the departments, but none admitted hiring Bardgett.

"Must have been one of the aldermen promised him a job," surmised His Worship, but he also intimated that he would fight any attempt to import City Hall employees, because of proficiency at football."—Toronto Star.

FOOTBALL

The local football club have received a letter from the secretary of the Ontario Football Association, informing them that Green River and Brussels would play off their tie this week, and that Havelock would meet the winners in the first of the final games for the championship next week.—Havelock Standard.

DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS

BASEBALL

New York, Sept. 23.—The Detroits, who are trying to win the American League pennant for the third time, will begin what may be the gruelling series of four games with the Highlanders here to-morrow afternoon. If they can win a majority of the games from Stallings's men the Tigers will have a pretty firm grip on first place and will be generally regarded as the Pittsburg's rivals for the world's championship honors. But in the event of three victories out of four for the Highlanders, providing the Athletics clean up their season with the disorganized Clevelands, the Tigers' pennant chances will be reduced to a minimum and may be totally wiped out during the games to be played by them in Boston next week. The Highlanders have been playing fast, aggressive ball since their return from the West, and with Gardner filling the gap at second base they are presenting a more formidable array of strength than at any previous time this year. Furthermore, the New York players are fighting tooth and nail to finish fourth place, and as they won three out of four games from the Detroits the last time Jennings' men were here, they believe they can repeat the trick.

Major Tidswell will likely succeed Hon. J. S. Hendrie as commander of the Second Artillery Brigade.

BROCK ST. TEAM WERE WINNERS

Defeated Team From Auditorium Roller Rink Last Night by 3–1

The Brock street roller hockey team defeated the sextette from the Auditorium roller rink last night on the former's floor, by 3 goals to 1. The contest was witnessed by a large number of interested spectators and the youngsters got away with numerous good plays. The first half ended with honors about even, the score being one all, but after the breathing spell the Brock street team had the better of the argument, putting two counters past Legros and preventing a score on their own nets.

Jack Seymour rolled around and had an easy time refereeing.

The teams were—

ATHLETIC MEET AT PORT HOPE

Will be Held on October 22nd — Some Good Ones Expected

Physical Director Galley, of the Y.M.C.A., is busy making arrangements for a huge indoor meet on October 22nd, three days before Thanksgiving. The merchants are requested to contribute prizes for the affair. The meet will be held in the rink on Queen street.

It will be remembered that last fall the Y.M.C.A. held an indoor meet of extreme interest whereat Bobby Kerr, of Hamilton, then 220 yards metre champion of the world (amateur) gave an exhibition of 50 yards and 220 yds. dash. This year Walter Lukeman, the 94-5 second man of Montreal, Sebert, the Toronto wonder, and Archibald, the champion pole vaulter, are possibilities for the Port Hope meet. Archibald is a most graceful performer and can negotiate nearly 12 feet in vault. This act would prove a good card for the local athletic congregation.

There will be the usual sprints, dashes, runs, and jumps, with a walking race.

As W. Jewel, J. Ham and others may go to Peterborough to take in the 10 mile road race on Thanksgiving Day and will appear here three days before that big race their form will prove an added attraction.—Port Hope Times.

HORSE RACES AT LINDSAY EXHIBITION

Lindsay fair is being held to-day or to-morrow and Saturday and the Warder in doping out the races has the following interesting matter:

Lou Bennett, the proprietor of the Queen's Hotel, Port Hope, has entered his bay mare, City Queen, 2.15 1-4, and the horse will be on hand for the fair days.

Gracie Pointer, the North Bay mare, owned by Burke, with a mark of 2.15 1-4, will swell the list of fast horses which will appear on the local track this week at the fall fair.

McDowell's Planet, the chestnut stallion, marked 2.24 1-4, arrived here from Peterborough this morning and will be entered in the .22 race, probably. This horse copped second money in the free-for-all in Peterborough.

Collingwood Rooker, bay gelding, with a mark of 2.11 1-4, owned by Childs, Toronto, is an entrant in the free-for-all speeding event. This race is the last one on the programme, taking place on Saturday afternoon. The prize is $250.

Walter G. is here. This horse has caused quite a fuss at the fall fairs wherever it appeared. It is a walking puzzle to many. In Peterborough last year the cry "ringer" was raised and it has been kept up since. In Belleville this year the free-for-all had to be called off because the owners of two horses would not enter against G.

A coming race horse is the young stallion, Joe Patchen, which is owned by Hopkins, of Orillia, a well-known horseman. This stallion is unmarked as yet and will be entered in one of the races during the fair. If breeding counts for anything this young animal should rank with the best of them in a few years. Joe Patchen, 2.01 1-2, is his sire and Bessie Bonbill, 2.05 1-4 the dam. Already the son of Patchen has shown symptoms of great speed.

Harry Direct, 2.17 1-2, the racer owned by Dr. Johnston, of Peterborough is a well-known horse here. Direct got his first experience on a Lindsay track, having been owned by Dave McMahon, the Reaboro blacksmith. The gelding showed class at the ice races here one winter and Harry Nesbitt, of Peterborough, bought him for $600. Since then Harry Direct has won not a few races and is still in the running for many more.

RUGBY

"There is not likely to be any O.R.F.U. by the end of the week." So said an officer of the Big Four Wednesday, who was attending the O.R.F.U. meeting at the King Edward Hotel.

Further than the above remark and that the O.R.F.U. would be taken under the wing of the Inter-Provincial Union, nothing [illegible] given out.

What it [illegible] is that the Intermediate series of [illegible] Argos, Tigers and Dundas in the I.P.R.U. and T.A.A.C., Parkdale and Peterborough in the O.R.F.U. make one group. This would be the best intermediate football Ontario, or Canada, as a matter of fact, could get together and would be just as interesting as the Big Four senior series. What will be done about it remains to be seen.

One local man connected with the O.R.F.U. when asked if there was any truth in the rumor, said he didn't know the matter at all, and if anything was to be done, it would be left to others in the O.R.F.U. to decide.—Telegram.

RAINY AT WOODBINE.

Scratches Are Numerous In Yesterday's Races.

Woodbine, Sept. 24.—The attendance yesterday was very light on account of the rainy weather. The scratches were numerous following the changed weather conditions. The track was very sloppy, the water lying on top in little lakes and the mud flew so much when the horses were in action, that the riders presented a sorry sight after each race.

Limit of Praise.

The limit of praise for food was reached the other day in a Sixth avenue restaurant where the old fashioned confidential Irish waiters are still to be found. A man well known to the place came in very late at night for supper and asked the man who had taken his orders for years, 'What's good today?'

"I'll tell you, sir," was the reply; 'we've just got some clams in, fresh from the water, and (this in a whisper) I don't mind telling you, sir, they're so good the waiters are eating 'em themselves."—New York Sun.

Reclothing Pelee.

The vegetation on the area laid waste by the Mont Pelee eruption of 1902 is gradually reappearing, and the indigo plant, castor oil plant, sensitive plant, guinea ferns, silver ferns and other plants are spreading over the ground. Roots not killed by the hot ashes falling above them have readily penetrated the thin crust. In other places the trampling of animals and water action have been breaking up the lava, giving a slowly forming new soil or bringing the old soil to the surface.

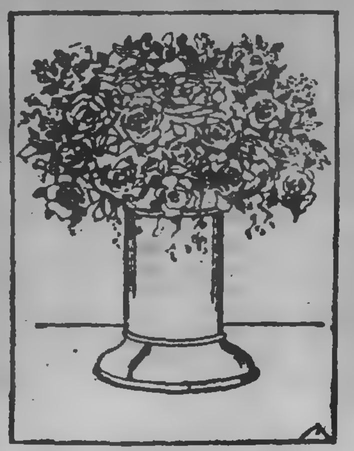
Saved by His Helmet.

Brass helmets worn by English fire fighters occasionally prove useful. At a recent fire fourteen tons of glass fell on one man's head and completely buried him, and when he had been dug out down to his shoulders another shower of glass came down and buried him again. He was in a hospital for four months, and glass was coming out of different parts of his body for six months afterwards, but he is still one of the best men of his [illegible]

A SUBSTITUTE FOR CANDLES.

New Electric Device Which Combines Beauty and Utility.

Every woman has realized for some time past that the use of the candle as a table decoration was attended by danger and other shortcomings, and a substitute has been eagerly sought. The solution of the problem has not been found in electricity, for the reason that lamps of this character lack the feature of portability, and their use also requires the presence of wires piercing the cloths and tables. A New York man has recently designed a piece of table decoration which takes the place of the candles on the dining room table in the home as well as the hotel and cafe.



THE DINNER TABLE CANDELABRA.

The device is a pretty design, embracing a silver receptacle capable of holding a single storage cell. The battery stores sufficient energy to keep the lamps aglow for fourteen hours, and the illumination emanates from three tungsten lamps supplied with a switch for controlling them. Fitting neatly over the stand is a shallow glass dish containing cut flowers and water. The former are supported by a cut glass disk with numerous holes, into which the flower stems, etc., project. The lamp thus serves as a flower vase as well, and the effect of the light passing through the glass and water and playing around the flowers and leaves is very pretty indeed.

A SWEET POT.

One of Grandmother's Customs Much Appreciated Today.

As the summer advances and the fields and gardens grow more glowing and beautiful each day with myriads of sweet smelling blossoms one naturally wonders if there is not some manner in which these treasures of the summer may be preserved to refresh us in the cold, blustering days of December. Our grandmothers utilized these blossoms in many ways. Not only did they sew up the petals of the fragrant rose into pillows and pack them away with salt for their rose jars, but combined with the rose petals they used spices, unguents and flowers of other variety, keeping the mixture carefully conserved in huge jars and conscientiously mixing it with a great wooden spoon at stated intervals. These "sweet pots," as the ladies of the eighteenth century called them, were to be found in every parlor, their fragrance when the lids were removed, as they were when grandmothers gave a tea drinking or some other formal festival, permeating the stately rooms and blending with that of the delicate Formosa which grandmother served in her priceless cups, brought forth for occasions of this kind.

In an old book of recipes, which bears the date of 1802 upon its title page, is found written upon the last page in the delicate, pointed handwriting of the last century the following rule for a sweet pot. It has been experimented with and found to be an everlasting delight to the woman who enjoys the quaint old world atmosphere which the perfume imparts to her drawing room:

"Take of benjamin, storax, myrrh, sweet orifice, seddary, nutmeg, grains of paradise, cinnamon and cloves half an ounce each. Pound them in a mortar, throw in a handful of bay salt mixed with a little of the spiceries in the bottom of a large jar, then a layer of all kinds of sweet smelling flower leaves, with aromatic plants and herbs cut small. Over each layer of flowers or herbs put a handful of bay salt and some of the spiceries. It requires no more spiceries than directed for the whole of the jar, but more salt must be put between each layer of flowers or leaves, as the flowers must be gathered at different times of the year when in full blossom. Pick clean from stalks and leaves, such as violets, lily of the valley, roses, orange and lemon, clove pinks, gillyflower, lavender and thyme, rose geranium leaves, lemon verbena, sweetbriar, bay leaves, marjoram, etc. Keep in close covered jar for a month or two and on first opening stir with a wooden spoon. When wished to have a pleasant odor about your room open the jar and stir again. It improves by keeping."

Iced Bouillon.

Beef extract made quick iced bouillon at an impromptu luncheon the other day. Three cupfuls of hot water were flavored to taste with the extract, it was seasoned with salt and pepper, and a level tablespoonful of gelatin soaked soft in cold water was added, and when it was dissolved a tablespoonful of lemon juice was turned in and the bouillon was put on the ice. When served it was whipped with a fork until the jelly was in flakes and put into bouillon cups.

THE SOLDIER'S BURDEN.

Uncle Sam to Attempt to Reduce the Too Heavy Load.

For years infantry officers have been carrying on much discussion concerning the weight which should be carried in the personal equipment of the foot soldiers in the field. That weight has gradually increased until it is now about 40 per cent of the weight of the man who carries it, and of this weight nearly fifty pounds are represented by arms and accouterments, with twelve or thirteen pounds additional in the way of clothing. All sorts of suggestions have been made in the hope that some way of reducing the burden might be found. The experts agree that the soldier's load should be reduced to the rifle, ammunition, canteen, one lightweight blanket, rations for three days and perhaps a light rainproof shelter. It is maintained that the remainder of the kit should be carried in the wagons and distributed to the men as they need it. If that can be accomplished the soldier will be in a position to cover more ground. It is the mobility of infantry which makes for its fighting efficiency. The war department has arranged for some elaborate experiments and a thorough investigation of the subject, to be conducted at the Rock Island (Ill.) arsenal, where the plant will be placed at the disposal of a special board of infantry officers of various grades. If the board should desire some equipment manufactured for its examination the plant at Rock Island will be placed at its disposal. In addition the war department has arranged to send to Rock Island a battalion of infantry, so that various samples of equipment may be practically tested under war conditions. The board will probably be in session several months, as the subject cannot be easily disposed of. It is probable that a similar board will be detailed later with a view to establishing the personal equipment of the cavalrymen and the enlisted men of the field artillery.—Washington Star.

The Antarctic Continent.

Strange have been the historical vicissitudes of the antarctic continent. A figment of geographic fancy evolved by Ortelius in 1570, the great Captain Cook thought that he had demolished it in 1773. Resuscitated by an American sealer, N. B. Palmer, in 1820, it took form and definite location under Wilkes' daring and persistent explorations of 1840, supplemented by those of D'Urville, Enderby and Kemp. Ross eliminated Wilkes' discoveries from his charts, but the continent was theoretically and scientifically reconstructed by the great physicists, Carpenter and Murray. Slowly evolving its tangible shape through the discoveries of the German Drygalski, the Scotsman Bruce, the Belgian Gerlache, the Frenchman Charcot, the Norwegian Larsen and the Englishman Scott, through the late labors of Shackleton, the antarctic continent now appears to extend from Victoria Land west to Enderby Land and from Wilkes Land across the south pole to Palmer Land.—Major General Greely in Century.

The Dulcitone.

The dulcitone of Thomas Machell of Glasgow has the keyboard of a piano, but the key hammers produce sound by striking steel forks—like shankless tuning forks—instead of wires. A semicircular steel spring carries the vibrations from each fork to the sounding board. The tone is softer than that of the piano, but it has great clearness and carrying power and is adapted for solo playing as well as for accompanying other instruments or the voice. Important advantages are the lack of necessity of tuning and the portability. A dulcitone of five octaves weighs but forty-five pounds, but a piano of the same range has a weight of 250 pounds or more.

THE YOUNGER SET

Author of
"The Fighting Chance."

"How do you like them? What is your opinion of the yellow set? Here they sit all about you—the Phoenix Mottlys, Mrs. Delmour-Carnes yonder, the Draymores, the Orchils, the Vendenning lady, the Lawns of Westlawn"—he paused, then deliberately—"and the Jack Ruthvens. I forgot, Alixe, that you are now perfectly equipped to carry aloft the golden bed."

"Go on," she said, drawing a deep breath. She forced a smile and drew her glass toward her. The straw tinted wine slopped over and frothed on the white skin of her arm.

"Well," she breathed, "this ghastly dinner is nearly ended."

He nodded pleasantly.

"And Phil?" a bit tremulous.

"What?"

"Was it all my fault—I mean in the beginning? I've wanted to ask you that—to know your view of it. Was it?"

"No. It was mine—most of it."

"Not all—not half. We did not know how. That is the wretched explanation of it all."

"And we could never have learned. That's the rest of the answer. But the fault is not there."

"I know—'better to bear the ills we have.'"

"Yes; more respectable to bear them. Let us drop this in decency's name, Alixe."

After a silence she began: "One more thing. I must know it, and I am going to ask you if I may. Shall I?"

He smiled cordially, and she laughed as though confiding a delightful bit of news to him.

"Do you regard me as sufficiently important to dislike me?"

"I do not—dislike you."

"Is it stronger than dislike, Phil?"

"Y-es."

"Contempt?"

"No."

"What is it?"

"It is that—I have not yet—become—reconciled."

"To my—folly?"

"To mine."

She strove to laugh lightly and, failing, raised her glass to her lips again.

"Now you know," he said, pitching his tones still lower. "I am glad, after all, that we have had this plain understanding. I have never felt unkindly toward you. I can't. What you did I might have prevented had I known enough, but I cannot help it now, nor can you if you would."

"If I would," she repeated gayly, for the people opposite were staring.

"We are done for," he said, nodding carelessly to a servant to refill his glass, "and I abide by conditions because I chose to, not," he added contemptuously, "because a complacent law has tethered you to—to the thing that has crawled up on your knees to have its ears rubbed."

The level insult to her husband stunned her. She sat there, upright, the white smile stamped on her stiffened lips, fingers tightening about the stem of her wineglass.

He began to toss bread crumbs to the scarlet fish, laughing to himself in an ugly way. "Why, Alixe, only look at him! Look at his gold wristlets; listen to his simper, his lisp. Little girl—oh, little girl, what have you done to yourself, for you have done nothing to me, child, that can match it in sheer atrocity?"

Her color was long in returning.

"Philip," she said unsteadily, "I don't think I can stand this"—

"Yes, you can."

"I am too close to the wall. I"—

"Talk to Scott Innis. Take him away from Rosamund Fane; that will tide you over. Or feed those fool fish; like this! Look how they rush and flap and spatter! That's amusing, isn't it—for people with the intellects of canaries? Will you please try to say something? Mrs. T. West is exhibiting the restless symptoms of a hen turkey at sundown, and we'll all go to roost in another minute. Don't shiver that way!"

"I c-can't control it. I will in a moment. Give me a chance. Talk to me, Phil."

"Certainly. The season has been unusually gay and the opera most stupidly brilliant. Stocks continue to fluctuate. Another old woman was tossed and gored by a mad motor this morning. More time, Alixe? With pleasure. Mrs. Vendenning has bought a third rate castle in Wales. A man was found dead with a copy of the Tribune in his pocket, the verdict being in accordance with fact. The Panama canal"—

But it was over at last—a flurry of sweeping skirts, ranks of black and white in escort to the passage of the fluttering silken procession.

"Goodby," she said. "I am not staying for the dance."

"Goodby," he said pleasantly. "I wish you better fortune for the future. I'm sorry I was rough."

He was not staying either. A dull excitement possessed him, resembling suspense, as though he were awaiting a denouement, as though there was yet some crisis to come.

After awhile he found himself in the ballroom.

The younger set was arriving. He recognized several youthful people, friends of Eileen Erroll, and, taking his bearings among these bright, fresh faces, amid the animated throng, constantly increased by the arrival of others, he started to find the hostess, now lost to sight in the brocaded circle of silk and lace setting in from the stairs.

He heard names announced which meant nothing to him, which stirred no memory, names which sounded vaguely familiar, names which caused him to turn quickly, but seldom were the faces as familiar as the names.

He said to a girl behind whose chair he was standing: "All the younger brothers and sisters are coming here to confound me. I hear a Miss Innis announced, but it turns out to be her younger sister"—

"By the way, do you know my name?" she asked.

"No," he said frankly. "Do you know mine?"

"Of course I do. I listened breathlessly when somebody presented you wholesale at your sister's the other day. I'm Rosamund Fane. You might as well be instructed because you're to take me in at the Orchils next Thursday night, I believe."

Looking up at a chinless young man who had halted near her, she said, "George, this is Captain Selwyn." Glancing at Selwyn: "Have you met my husband? Oh, of course!"

They exchanged a commonplace or two; then other people separated them without resistance on their part. And Selwyn found himself drifting, mildly interested in the rapid exchange of civilities which cost nobody a mental effort.

His sister, he had once thought, was certainly the most delightfully youthful matron in New York. But now he made an exception of Mrs. Fane. Rosamund Fane was much younger—must have been younger, for she still had something of that volatile freshness, that vague atmosphere of immaturity clinging to her like a perfume almost too delicate to detect, and under that the most profound capacity for mischief he had ever known of. Sauntering amiably amid the glittering groups continually forming and disintegrating under the clustered lights, he finally succeeded in reaching his hostess.

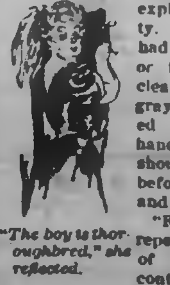
And Mrs. T. West Minster disengaged herself from the throng with intention as he approached.

No. And he was so sorry, and it was very amiable of his hostess to want him, but he was not remaining for the dance.

So much for the hostess, who stood there massive and gem laden, her kindly and painted features tinted now with genuine emotion.

"Can you forgive a very much mortified old lady who is really and truly fond of you?" she said.

He laughed, holding her fat, ringed hands in both of his with all the attractive deference that explained his popularity. Rising excitement had sent the color into his face and cleared his pleasant gray eyes, and he looked very young and handsome, his broad shoulders bent a trifle before the enameled and bejeweled matron.



"The boy is thoroughbred," she reflected.

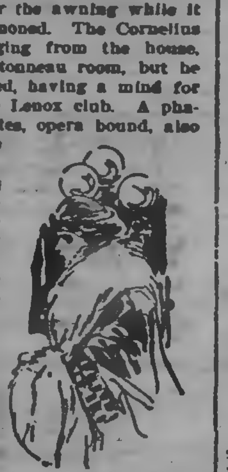
"Forgive you?" he repeated, with a laugh of protest. "On the contrary, I thank you. Mrs. Ruthven is one of the most charming women I know, if that is what you mean."

Looking after him as he made his way toward the cloakroom, "The boy is thoroughbred," she reflected cynically, "and the only amusement anybody can get out of it will be at my expense! Rosamund is a perfect cat!"

* * * * * * *

He had sent for his cab, which, no doubt, was in line somewhere, wedged among the ranks of carriages stretching east and west along the snowy street, and he stood on the thick crimson carpet under the awning while it was being summoned. The Cornelius Suydams, emerging from the house, offered Selwyn tonneau room, but he smilingly declined, having a mind for solitude and the Lenox club. A phalanx of debutantes, opera bound, also left. Then the tide set heavily the other way, and there seemed no end to the line of arriving vehicles and guests until he heard a name pronounced. A policeman warned back an approaching motor, and Selwyn saw Mrs. Ruthven, enveloped in white furs, step from the portal.

She saw him as he moved back, nodded, passed directly to her brougham and set foot on the step. Pausing here, she looked about her right and left, then over her shoulder straight back at Selwyn, and as she stood in silence, evidently awaiting him, it became impossible for him any longer to misunderstand without a public affront to her.



Selwyn saw Mrs. Ruthven enveloped in furs.

When he started toward her she spoke to her maid, and the latter moved aside, with a word to the groom in waiting.

"My maid will dismiss your carriage," she said pleasantly when he halted beside her. "There is one thing more which I must say to you."

Was this what he had expected hazard might bring to him? Was this the prophecy of his hammering pulses?

"Please hurry before people come out," she added and entered the brougham.

"I can't do this," he muttered.

"I've sent away my maid," she said. "Nobody has noticed. Those are servants out there. Will you please come before anybody arriving or departing does notice?"

And as he did not move, "Are you going to make me conspicuous by this humiliation before servants?"

He said something between his set teeth and entered the brougham.

"Do you know what you've done?" he demanded harshly.

"Yes; nothing yet. But you would have done enough to stir this borough if you had delayed another second."

"Your maid saw"—

"My maid is my maid."

He leaned back in his corner, gray eyes narrowing.

"Naturally," he said, "you are the one to be considered, not the man in the case."

"Thank you. Are you the man in the case?"

"There is no case," he said coolly.

"Then why worry about me?"

He folded his arms, sullenly at bay, yet had no premonition of what to expect from her.

"You were very brutal to me," she said at length.

"I know it, and I did not intend to be. The words came."

"You had me at your mercy and showed me little—a very little at first, afterward none."

"The words came," he repeated. "I'm sick with self contempt, I tell you."

She set her white gloved elbow on the window sill and rested her chin in her palm.

"That money," she said, with an effort. "You set some aside for me."

"Half," he nodded calmly.

"Why?"

He was silent.

"Why? I did not ask for it. There was nothing in the—the legal proceedings to lead you to believe that I desired it, was there?"

"No."

"Well, then"—her breath came unsteadily—"what was there in me to make you think I would accept it?"

He did not reply.

"Answer me. This is the time to answer me."

"The answer is simple enough," he said in a low voice. "Together we had made a failure of partnership. When that partnership was dissolved there remained the joint capital to be divided. And I divided it. Why not?"

"That capital was yours in the beginning, not mine. What I had of my own you never controlled, and I took it with me when I went."

"It was very little," he said.

"What of that? Did that concern you? Did you think I would have accepted anything from you? A thousand times I have been on the point of notifying you through attorney that the deposit now standing in my name is at your disposal."

"Why didn't you notify me then?" he asked, reddening to the temples.

"Because I did not wish to hurt you by doing it that way. And I had not the courage to say it kindly over my own signature. That is why, Captain Selwyn."

And as he remained silent: "That is what I had to say; not all, because I wish to—to thank you for offering it. You did not have very much either, and you divided what you had. So I thank you, and I return it." The tension forced her to attempt a laugh. "So we stand once more on equal terms unless you have anything of mine to return."

"I have your photograph," he said.

The silence lasted until he straightened up and, rubbing the fog from the window glass, looked out.

"We are in the park," he remarked, turning toward her.

"Yes. I did not know how long it might take to explain matters. You are free of me now whenever you wish."

He picked up the telephone—hesitated. "Home?" he inquired with an effort. And at the forgotten word they looked at one another in stricken silence.

"Y-yes; to your home first if you will let me drop you there"—

"Thank you. That might be imprudent."

"No, I think not. You say you are living with the Gerards?"

"Yes, temporarily, but I've already taken another place."

"Where?"

"Oh, it's only a bachelor's kennel, a couple of rooms"—

"Where, please?"

"Near Lexington and Sixty-sixth. I could go there. It's only partly furnished yet"—

"Then tell Hudson to drive there."

"Thank you, but it is not necessary"—

"Please let me. Tell Hudson or I will."

"You are very kind," he said and gave the order.

"May I ask my question?" she said.

"Ask it, child."

"Then are you happy?"

He did not answer.

"Because I desire it, Philip. I want you to be. You will be, won't you? I did not dream that I was ruining your army career when I—went mad"—

"How did it happen, Alixe?" he asked, with a cold curiosity that chilled her. "How did it come about, wretched as we seemed to be together, unhappy, incapable of understanding each other"—

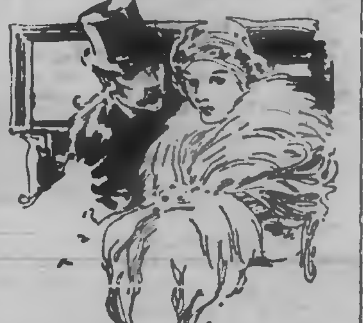
"Phil! There were days"—

He raised his eyes.

"You speak only of the unhappy ones," she said. "But there were moments"—

"Yes, I know it, and so I ask you why?"

"Phil, I don't know. There was that last bitter quarrel—the night you left for Leyte after the dance. I—it all grew suddenly intolerable. You seemed so horribly unreal—everything seemed unreal in that ghastly city—you, I, our marriage of crazy impulse—the people, the sunlight, the deathly odors, the torturing, endless creak of the punkha. It was not a question of—of love, of anger, of hate. I tell you I was stunned—I had no emotions concerning you or myself—after that last scene—only a stupefied, blind necessity to get away, a groping instinct to move toward home—to make my way home and be rid forever of the dream that drugged me! And then—and then"—



"I have your photograph," he said.

"He came," said Selwyn very quietly. "Go on."

But she had nothing more to say.

"Alixe!"

She shook her head, closing her eyes.

"Little girl—oh, little girl," he said softly, the old familiar phrase finding its way to his lips—and she trembled slightly—"was there no other way but that? Had marriage made the world such a living hell for you that there was no other way but that?"

"Phil, I helped to make it a hell."

"Yes—because I was pitifully inadequate to design anything better for us. I didn't know how. I didn't understand. I, the architect of our future—failed."

"It was worse than that, Phil. 'We'"—she looked blindly at him—"we had yet to learn what love might be. We did not know. If we could have waited—only waited—perhaps—because there were moments"— She flushed crimson.

"I could not make you love me," he repeated. "I did not know how."

"Because you yourself had not learned how. But—at times—now looking back to it—I think—I think we were very near to it—at moments. And then that dreadful dream closed down on us again. And then—the end."

For a long while they sat in silence. Mrs. Ruthven's white furs now covered her face. At last the carriage stopped.

As he sprang to the curb he became aware of another vehicle standing in front of the house, a cab, from which Mrs. Ruthven's maid descended.

"What is she doing here?" he asked, turning in astonishment to Mrs. Ruthven.

"Phil," she said in a low voice, "I knew you had taken this place. Gerald told me. Forgive me, but when I saw you under the awning it came to me in a flash what to do. And I've done it. Are you sorry?"

"No. Did Gerald tell you that I had taken this place?"

"Yes. I asked him."

Selwyn looked at her gravely, and she looked him very steadily in the eyes.

"Before I go may I say one more word?" he asked gently.

"Yes, if you please. Is it about Gerald?"

"Yes. Don't let him gamble. You saw the signature on that check?"

"Yes, Phil."

"Then you understand. Don't let him do it again."

"No. And—Phil?"

"What?"

"That check is—is deposited to your credit—with the rest. I have never dreamed of using it." Her cheeks were afire again, but with shame this time.

"You will have to accept it, Alixe."

"I cannot."

"You must. Don't you see you will affront Gerald? He has repaid me. That check is not mine, nor is it his."

"I can't take it," she said, with a shudder. "What shall I do with it?"

"There are ways—hospitals, if you care to. Good night, child."

She stretched out her gloved arm to him. He took her hand very gently and retained it while he spoke.

"I wish you happiness," he said. "I ask your forgiveness."

"Give me mine, then."

"Yes, if there is anything to forgive. Good night."

"Good night, boy," she gasped.

He turned sharply, quivering under the familiar name. Her maid, standing in the snow, moved forward, and he motioned her to enter the brougham.

"Home," he said unsteadily and stood there very still for a minute or two, even after the carriage had whirled away into the storm. Then, looking up at the house, he felt for his keys, but a sudden horror of being alone arrested him, and he stepped back, calling out to his cabman, who was already turning his horse's head: "Wait a moment. I think I'll drive back to Mrs. Gerard's. And take your time."

Chapter 6

IT was still early—lacking a quarter of an hour to midnight—when Selwyn arrived home. Nina had retired, but Austin sat in the library, obstinately plodding through the last chapters of a brand new novel.

"This is a wretched excuse for sitting up," he yawned, laying the book flat on the table, but still open. "I ought never to be trusted alone with any book." Then he removed his reading glasses, yawned again and surveyed Selwyn from head to foot.

"Very pretty," he said. "Well, how are the yellow ones, Phil? Or was it all debutante and slop twaddle?"

"Few from the cradle, but bunches were arriving for the dance as I left."

"Eileen went at half past 11."

"I didn't know she was going," said Selwyn, surprised.

"She didn't want you to. The playful kitten business, you know—frisks apropos of nothing to frisk about. But we all fancied you'd stay for the dance." He yawned mightily and gazed at Selwyn with ruddy gravity.

"Whisk?" he inquired.

"No."

"Cigar?" mildly urgent.

"No, thanks."

"Bed?"

"I think so. But don't wait for me, Austin. Is that the evening paper? Where is St. Paul?"

Selwyn unfolded the paper. So his brother-in-law moved ponderously away, yawning frightfully at every heavy stride, and the younger man settled back in his chair, a fragrant cigar balanced between his strong, slim fingers, one leg dropped loosely over the other. After awhile the newspaper fell to the floor.

He sat there without moving for a long time. His cigar, burning close, had gone out. The fire having burned low, he rose, laid a pair of heavy logs across the coals, dragged his chair to the hearth and settled down in it deeply.

Long after his cigar burned bitter he sat with eyes fixed on the blaze. When the flames at last began to flicker and subside his lids fluttered, then drooped, but he had lost all reckoning of time when he opened them again to find Miss Erroll in furs and ball gown kneeling on the hearth and laying a log across the andirons.

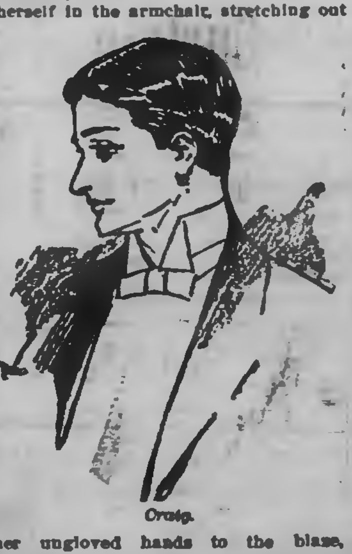
"Upon my word!" he murmured, confused; then, rising quickly: "Is that you, Miss Erroll? What time is it?"

"Four o'clock in the morning, Captain Selwyn," she said, straightening up to her full height. "This room is icy. Are you frozen?"

Chilled through, he stood looking about in a dazed way, incredulous of the hour and of his own slumber.

"I don't know how I happened to do it," he muttered, abashed by his plight.

"I rekindled the fire for your benefit," she said. "You had better use it before you retire." And she seated herself in the armchair, stretching out her ungloved hands to the blaze, smooth, innocent hands, so soft, so amazingly fresh and white.



Craig.

He moved a step forward into the warmth, stood a moment, then reached forward for a chair and drew it up beside hers.

"Do you mean to say you are not sleepy?" he asked.

"I? No, not in the least. I will be tomorrow, though."

"Did you have a good time? You danced a lot, I dare say," he ventured.

"Yes—a lot," studying the floor.

"Decent partners?"

"Oh, yes."

"Who was there?"

She looked up at him. "You were not there," she said, smiling.

"No, I cut it. But I did not know you were going. You said nothing about it."

"Of course you would have stayed if you had known, Captain Selwyn?" She was still smiling.

"Of course," he replied.

"Would you really?"

"Why, yes."

There was something not perfectly familiar to him in the girl's bright brevity, in her direct personal inquiry, for between them hitherto the gayly impersonal had ruled except in moments of lightest badinage.

"Was it an amusing dinner?" she asked in her turn.

"Rather." Then he looked up at her, but she had stretched her slim, silk shod feet to the fender, and her head was bent aside, so that he could see only the curve of the cheek and the little, close set ear under its ruddy mass of gold.

"Who was there?" she asked, too, carelessly.

For a moment he did not speak. Under his bronzed cheek the flat muscles stirred. Had some meddling, malicious fool ventured to whisper an unfit jest to this young girl? Had a word or a smile and a phrase cut in two awakened her to a sorry wisdom at his expense? Something had happened, and the idea stirred him to wrath, as when a child is wantonly frightened or a dumb creature misused.

"What did you ask me?" he inquired gently.

"I asked you who was there, Captain Selwyn."

He recalled some names and laughingly mentioned his dinner partner's preference for Harmon. She listened absently, her chin nestling in her palm, only the close set, perfect ear turned toward him.

MACKENZIE AND MANN DID NOT GIVE DEFINITE ANSWER

To Deputation From Peterborough Who Asked That Canadian Northern Come to This City—Advantages of Coming Here Strongly Presented.

No definite answer was given to the deputation from Peterborough that went to Toronto yesterday to interview Mackenzie and Mann with a view to having the new Canadian Northern line from Toronto to Ottawa, touch Peterborough. The advantages of having the road touch this city was very strongly presented and there is a possibility that a new survey may be made and the line brought north to Peterborough. There is little doubt but that the road would come here were it not for the rocky country east of this city and the resultant bad grades. The deputation were told that at some future date the Canadian Northern might build a road from Georgian Bay to connect with the Toronto-Ottawa line. The Midland branch would pass through Peterborough.

The deputation went to Toronto on the C.P.R. local and was composed of Mayor Rush, Ald. Morrow, Ald. Duncan, Ald. Gill[illegible], president of the Board of Trade, Messrs. W. H. Denne and Mr. Richardson, of Chicago, representing the Quaker Oats Company, Mr. B. F. Ackerman, and Messrs. Geo. Lenton and John Thomson, of the Peterborough Lumber Co.

The interview took place between eleven and twelve o'clock in the offices of Mackenzie and Mann.

Mayor Rush, who introduced the deputation, pointed out the many advantages of Peterborough as a distributing point and the fact that cheap electrical power was going to make this city one of the largest manufacturing centres in Canada.

Messrs. Richardson, Lenton and Ackerman all spoke of the large amount of shipping done by the factories at Peterborough and spoke of the great field here for the company to draw business from.

Other members of the deputation also presented the claims of the city and Messrs. Mackenzie and Mann, who were both present, seemed much impressed. They gave no definite answer but promised consideration of the request.

W. T. ROGERS, V.S. OPENS PRACTICE

In Peterborough — Comes Here With Splendid Reputation

Dr. W. T. Rogers, a veterinary surgeon of long standing, who comes to the city with the reputation of being a very skilful practitioner, has opened two offices here. He has an office in his house at the corner of Maitland avenue and Charlotte street and his down town office is at George O'Neill's livery barns, 193 Simcoe street.

LAKEFIELD HAD AN EXCITING RUNAWAY

Lakefield, Sept. 23.—An exciting runaway occurred on Monday last about six o'clock. A horse and buggy belonging to Mr. Frank Hayes of Douro, was standing near the town hall, when an automobile came along and scared the animal causing it to run away. The horse took over the bridges and on the high level bridge broke away from the buggy. Mr. Hayes held onto the lines as long as he was able, but finally had to jump from the [illegible]. The shafts were broken from the [illegible], but the horse escaped injury.

MONTREAL DESPATCHES ARE CONFLICTING REGARDING PLANS OF CANADIAN PACIFIC

One Report Says New Line Will be Built From Peterborough to Toronto and Another Despatch Intimates That Branch Will be Built From Myrtle Eastward, Taking in Lake Shore Towns.

Montreal, Que., Sept. 23.—[illegible] announced this morning at the head office of the C.P.R. that the management had [illegible] decided not to [illegible] the line beyond Peterborough. [illegible] the intention to build a new [illegible] from that point to Toronto along the lake shore, taking in all the principal towns along the lake.

There was some doubt as to whether the line would be duplicated as far as to Toronto, and this announcement practically settles the question.

An official of the Canadian Pacific stated that the work of double-tracking their line from Montreal to Toronto was [illegible] being accomplished.

"We are within twenty-five miles of Smith's Falls now, and by next season we will have the double track thrown open for traffic that far."

Widening a right-of-way is not an easy matter, infinitely more difficult than building a new roadbed, for the reason that bridges have to be altered, culverts enlarged or taken out, cuts widened, rock canyons blasted out to accommodate another track without endangering the other during [illegible] off trains and last, but not [illegible] the acquiring of additional land [illegible] highway.

The [illegible] Witness has a different [illegible] the plans of the C.P.R. [illegible] that the C. P. R. [illegible] early date upon the construction of a new line eastward from Toronto in order to reach a number of important lakeshore towns and agricultural and industrial centres. This line is to be built under local charters already owned by the C.P.R., and over a route surveyed by the company's engineers a couple of years ago.

The idea is to build a belt line from Myrtle, thirty-seven miles east of Toronto, south to Whitby, and then run east to Cobourg, and north again to the Canadian Pacific line. A line of this kind would get right into one of the Grand Trunk's most important apple districts where that railway today has a monopoly. It would take in Whitby, Oshawa, Bowmanville, Newcastle, [illegible] Newtonville, important fruit [illegible] and Port Hope and Cobourg [illegible] manufacturing centres. There is also a line projected from a point further east on the C.P.R. which would bring them into the Belleville district.

DAY OF ATONEMENT WILL COMMENCE THIS EVENING

Commencing this evening the Day of Atonement will be celebrated by the Hebrews of this city and elsewhere. The Day of Atonement is supposed to be the only day in the year when man is free from the influence of Satan. The word Satan in Hebrew is equal to 361, according to their language, each letter of which is equivalent to a certain numeric value. The letters of the word sum up 364, and the Hebraic law has it that on so many days of the year Satan has influence over one man, but on the 365th day of the year, which is the Day of Atonement, they are free.

A Wonderful Musical Treat

There is a probability that the people of this city will have a rare opportunity of hearing one of the most famous singers and vocal teachers in the world for negotiations are in progress that Madame Marchesi and her excellent company of European artists may be brought here on Thanksgiving Day. Madame Marchesi is so famous in the world of song, that this announcement will be received with pleasure by all music lovers in the city.

The majority of the best vocal teachers on this continent use the Marchesi method in teaching, and for this alone, if nothing else, it would be a much desired opportunity.

The New York Herald, in a recent issue, speaks in terms of loudest praise of the singing of Madame Marchesi and says in part, as follows: "Possibly, too, there were many music teachers in the audience bent upon acquiring the Marchesi method at the price of a ticket. Apparently these enthusiasts forget that the truest art is the art which simply produces results, and that when a work of art is well done one cannot see how it is done. And so, when Madame Marchesi began to sing she simply sang. Anyone who went to her concert expecting vocal tricks and pyrotechnics must have been sadly disappointed. You simply saw a handsome woman, who came forward with a quiet dignity that other artists might well copy, and sang well. She is the nearest approximation to perfection of any songstress that we have ever listened to."

To judge from this notice, it would be too bad if the opportunity to hear this wonderful singer was not taken advantage of. As the concert would be given in the opera house on the holiday, Thanksgiving Day, there is likely to be a crowded house. Further announcement will be made later on, when definite arrangements have been made.

A SUGGESTION.

F. C. Cubitt, bookseller and stationer, takes this opportunity of thanking the many pupils of the Collegiate who have favored him with their orders for school supplies, and regrets exceedingly that he has been unable to supply the various books asked for the last few days, owing to not having been given the slightest intimation that they were to be used. In fact, he was only given information regarding one subject for the current term. He suggests that pupils ask the teachers where they had better purchase their books.

In a Tropical Forest.

Chief Engineer Burgess of the Honduras National railway, giving advice to engineers working in the tropics, says emphatically, "Don't get lost!" He adds that a man should no more think of going into a tropical forest without a compass than of going alone to sea without one. Without a compass one has no way of getting his direction. In a few minutes he is turned round. The sun can only be seen, if at all, when directly overhead. There is no moss on the trees to serve for a guide. Distant elevations or mountains, if any exist, cannot be seen on account of the density of the forest. Even on the treeless llanos of South America, where the mountains are too distant to be seen, the compass is the only guide. One can tell the direction of east and west at sunrise and sunset, but in the middle of the day the sun is useless as a guide because it is almost directly overhead, and often one may stand in the shadow of his own hat.

WEST INDIES COMMISSION

Members of Body Headed by Lord Burleigh Arrive in Toronto

Toronto, Sept. 25.—With the object of promoting trade between Canada, Great Britain and the West Indies, the Royal Commission appointed by the British Government arrived in Toronto yesterday.

The members of the commission are: Lord Balfour of Burleigh (chairman), Hon. George Gordon, Sir J. Poynder Dickson-Poynder, M.P.; Sir Daniel Morris, imperial commission West Indian Agricultural department; Hon. Wm. Paterson, Minister of Customs; Hon. Wm. S. Fielding, Minister of Finance; R. H. McCarthy.

Lord Balfour of Burleigh is no novice at the work he has undertaken. He has served in a similar capacity in connection with economic enquiries, and in 1903 presided over a commission appointed to consider the important question of keeping the people of the British Isles supplied with food in war time.

Discussing the work of the commission yesterday Lord Balfour said they hardly had time to measure the difficulties before them. The meeting at Ottawa was in the nature of a conference with the Government. "Our first meeting for business will be held on Monday when we desire to get from the manufacturers and merchants of Toronto all the information we can," he observed.

SIR WILFRID AND LABOR COUNCIL

Vancouver, B.C., Sept. 25.—The Labor Council recently sent a telegram to Sir Wilfrid Laurier saying in part: "We will not peacefully stand for the proposed further wholesale importation of Oriental labor into this province at the behest of merciless profit-seeking railway contractors. We demand fulfilment of election promises and such as will disprove that the Government is but the executive committee for corporate interests. Further importations will aggrevate a serious menace. We refuse to be reduced to an Oriental standard of living. Answer."

In reply, the Premier says: "Quite disregarding the offensive language, I beg to inform you that no request has been made to this Government by anybody for the importation of Asiatic labor."

TWO BLACK HAND LEADERS CAUGHT

Montreal, Sept. 25.—Antonio Mittage and Guiseppe Cartino were arrested at midnight Thursday night while they were attempting to take what they thought was a package containing $1,000 from under a stone by a solitary house in St. David's lane, blackmail which they had demanded from Leonardo Saora under the masquerade of the Black Hand. The package they unearthed was a wad of newspaper placed there as a bait.

By this capture Chief Carpenter claims to have unferreted the headquarters of a Black Hand gang in Canada, and other arrests are expected shortly.

TWO PRISONERS HAVE ESCAPED

North Bay, Sept. 25.—Two burglars sentenced from Sudbury to terms in the Central Prison escaped from Provincial Bailiff Ryan at North Bay station, while leaving the C.P.R. express. The prisoners were handcuffed together, but slipped away in the darkness.

Two men were run down and killed by trains while walking on the tracks. An Italian employe of the C.P.R., Tony Federoink, was killed near Donfield, and the body of an unknown man was picked up near Sturgeon Falls.

THE BRITISH GOVERNMENT MUST GO TO THE COUNTRY

Political Agents in Old Land Are Satisfied That There Will be a General Election in December or January—If Lords Reject Budget Liberals May Win on Reform of Upper House.

London, Sept. 25.—The agents of both political parties now are convinced that a general election will take place, either in December or January, the date depending upon whether the House of Lords shall reject the budget outright, or take a more temporizing course. The House of Commons will conclude its discussion of the budget and send it to the House of Lords about October 21.

Meantime the political campaign, which is proceeding throughout the country, is approaching dimensions of a general election campaign. The Conservatives are well organized and claim to be fully prepared. With four hundred new candidates, both sides appear equally confident, but it is evident that the leaders of the Conservatives are far from agreed as to the best course to pursue.

Should the House of Lords reject the budget, it would be extremely probable that the Liberals might win on the double issue of reform of the House of Lords and the budget. For this reason the shrewd moderate men on the Conservative side are anxious to make the election struggle, as Mr. Balfour recently put it down, tariff reform versus socialism, keeping the question of the House of Lords in the background, and it is believed that Mr. Balfour and Lord Lansdowne are in favor of the House of Lords accepting the budget, on the understanding that the Government will immediately dissolve Parliament and appeal to the country.

B. C. ELECTIONS THIS AUTUMN

Vancouver, B.C., Sept. 25.—It is understood that the Provincial Government (Conservative) will go to the country between Nov. 15 and Dec. 8. The Government will in October announce their policy of assistance to the Canadian Northern Railway to enter this province, and then go to the people for their approval of that policy.

Attorney-General Bowser and Minister of Works Taylor are leaving today on a speech-making tour of Lilloet and Cariboo, Liberal strongholds.

WALTER BLYTHE AGAIN REPRIEVED

Toronto, Sept. 25.—Walter Blythe, twice reprieved from the death sentence, will not be hanged Friday next, the date set for his execution, and to-day his chance for the commutation of his death sentence is brighter than it yet has been since his sentence.

Yesterday the Court of Appeal directed that T. C. Robinette, K.C., his counsel apply to Justice W. R. Riddell for a stated case on the ground that he should have specifically charged the jury that if Blythe, at the time the crime was committed, was in such a state of intoxication as not to be capable of forming an intention of killing his wife that it would then be the duty of the jury to find him guilty of manslaughter and not of murder.

MANY LIVES ARE LOST IN STORM

HOTEL BURNED AT HEPWORTH

Hepworth, Sept. 25.—The Royal Hotel, an up-to-date temperance house owned and managed by J. J. Downs, was completely gutted by fire early yesterday morning. The fire is supposed to have originated in a frame cook house in the rear. R. Morrison, traveler for W. B. Sherring & Co., Winnipeg, lost his clothes, samples and $200 in cash, and got out by dropping from a side window. F. S. Clark, another travelr, crawled through his bedroom window to a balcony and then dropped. Two daughters of Mr. Downs were not missed until nearly every person was out. Their brother made a dash for their rooms, and found them overcome by the smoke, and dragged them out.

PETERBORO' CANOE CO. WILL NOT ENLARGE THEIR PREMISES

Proposed Lease of Property on the Water Front is Not Favorable to the Company—Will Utilize Former Store House Building.

The Peterborough Canoe Company will not enlarge their premises as a result of the Council granting a lease on the property on the water-fronts in the rear of their present buildings.

In conversation with Mr. Claude Rogers this morning the Review learned that the proposition of the Council was not a favorable one to the company. Last spring, when the lease was asked for, and when the company were ready to build, no action was taken by the Council and the fact of the proposed lease being subject to termination at the end of each year does not give the company the necessary confidence to build. Then again considerable expense would be incurred in filling in part of the property, and then by the time twenty feet were taken for a roadway, the size of the property would be considerably lessened. Instead, the north building, which has been formerly used as a storehouse, will be used to relieve the overcrowded conditions existing at the present time and probably sometime in the future the company will acquire other property to meet the demands of their flourishing business.

Yesterday morning, the Dominion Trades and Labor Congress passed a long resolution censuring ex-President Hobson of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association for recent remarks condemning certain officers of international trades unions as "professional agitators," and adding:

"Therefore, be it resolved, That this congress offer up a sincere prayer that the light of common-sense may yet reach the C.M.A., and protest in the most vigorous manner against the unwarranted tactless partisanship and unprecedent action of the Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario in interfering as the crown's representative with the affairs of Ontario citizens, and that the proper authorities be petitioned for the removal of Hon. Mr. Gibson on the ground that his usefulness is gone."

Union Thanksgiving Service.

Sudbury, Sept. 25.—At a meeting of the Town Council, a deputation of clergymen from the English, Presbyterian, Methodist and Baptist churches, presented a proposal that the citizens should celebrate Thanksgiving Day in service en masse in a purely non-sectarian manner. It was proposed that the opera house be secured and a prominent public speaker invited. Premier Whitney was suggested.

MULAI-ABD-EL-HAFID SULTAN OF MOROCCO

FROM LONDON ILLUSTRATED NEWS

Recent troubles of the Sultan of Morocco have brought him and his country into prominence. His success in overpowering El Raghi, the pretender to the throne, was followed by charges of such cruelty to the pretender's captured followers that representatives of other powers warned him he must be more human. El Raghi was fastened into an iron cage and, exposed to the gibes and jeers of the Sultan's faithful subjects, was carried to Fez on the back of a camel, guarded by fifteen hundred soldiers.

SPAIN-MOROCCO COMPLICATIONS

Madrid, Sept. 25. It is generally believed here that the complications which have arisen between Spain and Mulai Hafid, the Sultan of Morocco, are likely to result in a Spanish-Moroccan war, as distinct from the present conflict with Moorish tribesmen.

Spain to-day has over 60,000 troops in Northern Africa, with 11,000 more mobilizing for service there, and the Government feels that only the brilliant completion of the work begun can defeat the plans of political enemies at home. Bomb explosions on the streets of Barcelona are almost of daily occurrence.

Mulai Hafid recently despatched a note to the powers protesting against Spain's course of action in the Riff country, declaring it to be contrary to the terms of the Algeciras agreement, and asking for intervention by the powers. Spain demanded that this note be withdrawn, but Morocco insisted that the appeal stand.

MADE A HEROIC SEVEN-HOUR SWIM

Vancouver, B.C., Sept. 25.—A gasoline launch caught fire on Tuesday night in Calm Channel, 100 miles north from here, and three men on board had to take to the water. The boat which was carried on the launch was filled with water, and while two clung to the gunwale one, named W. Norton, swam ahead towing it. For seven hours he bravely swam to the shore, but one of his companions gave up owing to the coldness of the water and drowned. Both survivors were badly burned on the arms and hands.

COOK MEETS HUNTINGTON

New York, Sept. 25.—For the first time since his arrival here, Dr. Frederick A. Cook, the Arctic explorer, took into his confidence yesterday, one of the leading American geographical authorities, Archer M. Huntington, president of the American geographical society, with whom he had an hour's private conference.

Dr. Huntington refused to comment on the meeting, but Dr. Cook's friends announced that just before his departure, he had expressed perfect confidence in the statements of the explorer.

Most of Dr. Cook's waking hours yesterday were devoted to preparing the literary steps which lead to the lecture platform, which he will mount next Monday at the Carnegie Institute.

TWELVE YEARS IN PENITENTIARY

Hamilton, Sept. 25.—Twelve years in Kingston Penitentiary was the sentence given David Irvine by Judge Monck, who was found guilty of assaulting and attempting to rob Fred Porteous. Mark Tomkins, captured at the time of the assault, is now doing a ten-years' term. The judge said he thought Irvine deserved more, because Tomkins had attempted to lead an honest life until led astray by Irvine, and in addition, Irvine had assaulted a crown witness in court. Although not an old man, the judge said that Irvine had spent 25 years in prison. Irvine attempted to correct this remark, but the judge paid no attention. The prisoner took his sentence gamely.

SENTENCED TO DEATH

Mrs. Robinson Gets Limit of the Law at Sudbury

Sudbury, Sept. 25.—Mrs. James Robinson of Warren, who murdered the infant born to her own daughter Jessie, because of her husband's infamy, was sentenced by His Lordship Justice Magee last night to be hanged on the 24th day of November at 8 a.m., in the district of Sudbury.

When asked by the judge if she had anything to say before sentence was passed upon her, she broke out, in sobs, "I have not."

Immediately after the sentence, she fainted and had to be carried out of the court-room in the arms of her brother, Rev. Peter Matheson.

The Court of Appeal will, in the interval, decide on the merits of a reserve case granted after Mrs. Robinson's conviction on the first charge of slaying a child born to another daughter. The jury in this case twice voted for acquittal on grounds of temporary insanity, but were sent back by the presiding justice.

MR. MONK MAKES AN EXPLANATION

Montreal, Sept. 25.—F. D. Monk, M.P., puts himself straight in connection with the claim that the Conservative leader has sacrificed the party interests in allowing the County of Montcalm to go by default, as far as the opposition are concerned.

Mr. Monk declares that he was in the fight from the start, but that every local leader in the county was opposed to it. They even opposed a contest when a friend offered to put up the deposit.

As regards party inactivity here, Mr. Monk states that the last interview he had with Mr. Borden, the leader expressed the wish that nothing should be done here before his return.

WORK TO START ON CANADIAN NORTHERN

Toronto, Sept. 25.—Next week the contractors will start building the Canadian Northern Railway line from Toronto to Trenton, a distance of 104 miles. The contract was let yesterday afternoon, but a good deal of reticence was observed at the offices of the company with regard to the details.

The name of the contractor was withheld until final papers had been signed. The amount of the contract is a matter of estimate, and it is understood the work will be proceeded with in sections.

LUSITANIA BEAT THE INFLEXIBLE

New York, Sept. 25.—The passengers on the steamer Lusitania, which arrived yesterday from Liverpool and Queenstown, were treated to an inspiring sight Thursday afternoon when at four o'clock the ocean liner overtook the British battleship Inflexible, the flagship of the British vessels here to take part in the Hudson-Fulton celebration. The war vessel manned her decks and the band played British and American national anthems, while the Lusitania's passengers cheered.

The Lusitania left the Inflexible astern after two hours' steaming side by side, and arrived at the Ambrose lightship at 9.57 Thursday night.

SUFFRAGETTES FED WITH PUMP

London, Sept. 25.—Wild scenes are reported to have taken place in the prison at Birmingham as the result of the forcibly feeding with a stomach pump of the suffragettes who are on a hunger strike.

The women resisted the efforts of the keepers, smashed windows and assaulted the wardresses, and finally had to be handcuffed and placed in solitary confinement.

The leaders of the suffragettes here are indignant over the attempt to feed the women. They contend that forcible feeding is illegal, and intend to bring actions against the medical authorities of the prison concerned in it.

WHAT THE PLENARY COUNCIL MEANS

The Mail and Empire.

The Plenary Council of the Roman Catholic Church, now being held in the City of Quebec, is the most important gathering of that communion ever witnessed in Canada. It has at its head the Apostolic Delegate, and is composed of eight archbishops and thirty bishops, with the principals of the various theological institutions. There have been Provincial Councils in the past. But this is the first time that a Plenary Council—a council representing the entire Church within the Dominion—has been called. What is the meaning of the new departure?

At the outset, the Church in Quebec was a branch planted by France. Its bishops—Bishop Laval, the first of the number, for example—came from that country, under the auspices of the religious authorities there. Its missionaries were sent by the religious orders in France, these same orders being anxious to direct affairs of an ecclesiastical nature in the new colony. During the French occupation the questions which from time to time disturbed France affected the colonial population. Whether the Church was Gallican or Ultramontane was a point in respect of which much discussion took place. After the cession, the Church, no longer in touch with France, was cared for by the Propaganda at Rome, and became a part of the missionary work of the central authority. For more than a hundred years the Canadian portion of the Church, both French and English, occupied a relation to Rome that was different to that held by the churches of the other countries, as, for instance, Austria, France and Spain. The European churches were national; that of Canada as, indeed, was the case of the United States, was missionary. The difference in the situation was very marked. Matters which in Europe were settled locally were in Canada referred to the Propaganda for adjustment. The coming of the Apostolic Delegate to Canada marked the beginning of a new era. The delegate was a direct representative of the Pope, and could do in a multiplicity of matters that which in the past the Pope alone would undertake. Thus, the reference to Rome was abridged. The Plenary Council points to another change. Plenary Councils, which include all the prelates of the country in which they are held, have wide authority in matters of doctrine, worship, polity and discipline. They can determine, subject to the endorsement of the Pope, questions which in countries where no such council is held must be decided at Rome.

The Plenary Council means, therefore, that the Church in Canada has emerged from the missionary condition, and has become a self-governing entity within the jurisdiction allowed to the various churches. Under the new conditions the Church has more of the self-governing element in it than it has hitherto possessed, and it is within the powers of its rulers to associate it more closely with the national idea. For these reasons the council, the first of its kind, a new legislative body, dealing with Canadian questions only, becomes a most important factor in the religious world, and the results of its deliberations will be looked for with much interest.

B. C. LABOUR AND SIR WILFRID

Sir Wilfrid is "insulted." He says that the recent wire to him from B. C. labour men was too hot. But what does he expect? Instead of foreseeing the lower level to which Oriental immigration would reduce the workers of Canada, he allowed the all-powerful financiers and money men to put up the pitiful, but contemptible bluff that Oriental labour was necessary to the development of this country. Canadian labour waked up one morning to find Hindoos, Malays, Chinese and the coolies of the beggarest pouring through the gateway of the Pacific. It sprang to arms and by dint of protest and threats saved Canada for the moment. Since then every effort has been made by the moneyed men to repeat the offence, thinking, no doubt, that weight and governmental favour would work the trick yet. The moment came, but Labour was on the watch. The result was a wire to Sir Wilfrid, which is published in another column. He found it too hot for comfort. The Laurier "other than white" labour policy is an act of treason to Canada. What if certain works for the moment can't go on? Is Canada to be the lamb led to the feeding of Money-god regardless of life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness? The B.C. men evidently think not so. Who will not agree with them that does not think money of more consequence than men.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The battle-cry of the week for the next local general elections is to be: "The administration of the provincial public domain by the people of the Province."

Attention is called to the "starvation wages paid in Government shipyards at Sorel." It was said that the Dominion Government had purchased three ships outside the Dominion last year that could have been constructed either at Collingwood or Toronto. It was claimed that the price paid for the Earl Grey ice crusher was enormous and could have been "made in Canada" for half price.

Senator McMullen was denounced as a man unfit to be called "Honorable."

Resolutions were passed condemning white slavery and gambling on race tracks. The Congress also went on record as being opposed to war of every description.—Labor Congress at Quebec.

WILL NOT PAINT THE AMBULANCE

Property Committee Has no Money to do the Work

The Dan Spence ambulance will not be painted this year.

The Property Committee so decided last night, although all the members agreed that the coat of paint is needed. The committee has no money to do the work and as a result it will be done.

"The ambulance should be painted," said Ald. Duncan.

"I know that," said Ald. Bradburn, "but what are we going to paint it with?"

"Paint," suggested Ald. Duncan.

It was stated that it would cost about sixty dollars to paint the ambulance. The committee, however, cannot spare this much.

Dufferin County Fair.

Orangeville, Ont., Sept. 25.—The Dufferin Agricultural Society held the annual fair here yesterday and, in spite of the rain, a large crowd was out. The exhibits in the main hall were exceptionally good, especially the art and fancy goods. The live stock show was excellent. W. H. Hunter's cattle, which carried off many prizes at the Toronto Exhibition, being among the number.

Hon. Mr. Duff, Minister of Agriculture, opened the fair, and delivered an address in which he entirely won the hearts of Dufferin tillers of the soil. In the evening a splendid concert was given in the town hall, at which Mr. Duff again spoke.

Bail Bonds Disappear.

Chicago, Sept. 25.—Indictments charging conspiracy to corrupt the jury lists were returned by the grand jury yesterday against John J. Holland, secretary of the jury commissioners; Willis J. Rayburn, a real estate dealer, and Nicholas Martin, secretary to Ald. ("Hinky Dink") Kenna. The indicted men were arrested several days ago.

Bonds aggregating $75,000, under which the accused men have been at liberty, have disappeared. The papers were in Judge McEwen's desk, which was broken into and the bonds stolen. Two women are said to be connected with the theft.

HUNTERS
Something About Moose and Deer

It is now pretty well known among hunters that the best deer hunting country in Ontario is on the line of the Canadian Northern Ontario and that hunters receive special attention. Mr. C. Price Green, Passenger Agent of the line is a hunter himself who goes right with the parties and looks after them, in fact he located most of them. This year the line will be opened north of Sellwood into the midst of the Moose Country, they are reported very thick, the Engineers say that they have never seen anything like it, the Moose season up there opens October 15th, fifteen days before the Deer. We have something special on a new place that will take three parties of deer hunters.

THE LABOR RECORD OF THE LAURIER GOVERNMENT RAKED BY ITS OWN FRIENDS

Alien Labor Law a Cover for Crookedness—A Government Legislating Only for the Rich—An Injustice to Workingmen and Workingwomen.

Quebec, Sept. 22.—Mr. John G. O'Donoghue, parliamentary solicitor of the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada, presented his report at this morning's session of the Congress. He denounced the Alien Law law as a "legislative farce." He said that when it suited the Government to deport aliens, brought to Canada as strike breakers, the machinery of the bill was made operative, but when it was not in the interests of the Government no action whatever was taken. Mr. O'Donoghue said that no notice had been taken by the Government regarding the resolutions passed at the Halifax convention last year asking amendments to the Lemieux Trades and Disputes Act. Amendments had been proposed, but they had been left on the order paper.

The speaker added; "For some years the Government has had two very weak spots in its record of labor legislation, namely, its treatment of letter carriers and its attitude towards the Alien Labor Act. This congress has been annually requesting better treatment for the letter carriers, and such amendments of the Alien Labor Act as would make it more than the legislative farce that it is at the present time. If the Government thinks there is no necessity for improving the act, then it is simply because it will not see, and so far as the Government's policy on the act is concerned that is something that does not exist, in its proper sense. Its policy was first declared when it appointed Mr. Ed. Williams, Alien Labor officer, upon whose report aliens were deported without formality of court prosecution. Subsequently the Government under its new policy, required court prosecution before any deportation could take place. Still later it reverted to its original policy, without any change in act, simply because the late E. F. Clarke protested most vigorously in the House about the employment of alien engineers on the Grand Trunk Pacific. Now the Government has forsaken its old policy and is again at a do-nothing stand.

Delegate Francq, of Montreal, reported to the effect that he had organized the Quebec and Levis Federated Trades and Labor Council during the year. The National Unions of the city had been hostile, but despite their objections the movement was a success. The fact that more than fifty delegates from the Province of Quebec were attending the Congress supplied the evidence.

A lively discussion arose regarding the disposition of the report during which which Delegate Simpson, Toronto, declared that it was apparent that the national movement in Quebec was practically dead.

Vice-President Simpson, Toronto, made his report as delegate to the social and reform association. He referred to the question of saw-offs after the Dominion elections and condemned the practice in language that could not be misunderstood. Mr Simpson referred to what he called the inhuman treatment of men confined in the Canadian prisons. He claimed they were treated more like brutes than human beings and as a result were turned out more vicious than before they were sentenced.

He dealt with the white slave practice, declaring that thousands of girls had been forced into lives of shame owing to the starvation wages paid by managers of departmental stores and factories. Mr. Simpson said that the congress had made no mistake when it joined the Social and Moral Reform Association of Canada, which, he said, was doing excellent work in the interests of the working classes of the Dominion.

Solicitor O'Donoghue said that the Social and Moral Reform Association of Canada was a second trades union congress. He had no hesitation in saying that it was greatest influence for good we have in Canada to-day and congratulated the Labor Congress upon its affiliation.

Mr. Simpson's report was referred to a special committee to suggest recommendations. The following were named by President Verville: Messrs. O'Donoghue, Gibbins, Brown, McCarthy, Bartlett, Legerance, Dunn and Ainey.

Delegate Obermeyer, Hamilton, called attention to the statements made by the ex-President of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association at Hamilton last week, and asked that a special committee be appointed to reply to the allegations and misrepresentations made by him. The following were named;—Messrs. Glockling, Simpson, Bartlett, Obermeyer, Mouthriant and O'Donoghue.

Before the noon adjournment a special committee was appointed to deal with the Oriental immigration question. A ballot will be taken in Congress to-morrow morning.—The Montreal Star.

RHEUMATISM DRIVEN FROM THE BLOOD

A Remedy Which Assists Nature Makes a Cure Which is Permanent as This Case Proves.

Every sufferer from rheumatism wants to be cured and to stay cured. The prospect of the frequent return of the trouble is not attractive to anybody who has gone through one siege. Most treatments aim simply to "keep down" the rheumatic poisons in the blood. The tonic treatment by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills has proved by hundreds of cures that it builds up the blood to a point that enables it to cast out these poisons through the regular channels of excretion—the bowels, the kidneys and the skin. When this is done the rheumatism is permanently cured, and as long as the blood is kept pure and rich the patient will be free from rheumatism. Mr. Thomas McNeil, Rechibucto, N. B., says—"Permit me to bear testimony to the worth of Dr. Williams Pink Pills as a cure for acute rheumatism. My son, Frederick, was subject to this painful trouble for a period of eight or ten years, and during this time periodical attacks would regularly occur. His last attack was a most severe one, and the pains were excruciating in the extreme, shooting through the various parts of the body to such an extent that even the approach of any person would cause him to cry out with fear, and he had rest neither day or night. Our family doctor, a man of skill and experience, applied many remedies without avail and could give no encouragement other than that the warmer weather then approaching might prove beneficial. Just at this time we noticed where some person similarly afflicted had been cured by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and decided to try them. He kept on using the Pills, each succeeding box showing improvement, until he had taken ten boxes, when all the pains and aches had completely disappeared, and although his mode of life is that of a fisherman, and consequently exposed to both wet and cold, he has had no return of any of the symptoms whatever. The cure is complete, and is entirely due to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills."

You can get these Pills from any medicine dealer or they will be sent by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 by the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

THE "LOST ORCHID."

It Was Rediscovered Only Through War and Bloodshed.

In 1902 only five of the precious cypripedium plants were left, not counting the home bred hybrid named for Mrs. L. F. Ames of Massachusetts. Four were in France, in the Jardin de Luxembourg; one was in England, in the conservatories of Sir Trevor Lawrence. These were fast declining, and the next year one alone in the known world gave forth a flower. Despairingly, Opoex, the Luxembourg gardener, tried to breed from it and waited in ardent and hopeful impatience. But you cannot make a high class, decent orchid germinate its own pollen. This orchid was no exception. It was bent on race suicide.

In such a plight were the orchidists when they offered $10,000 reward to any one who would find a hale and virile wild specimen of the Cypripedium fairrieneum.

England had long desired to open up Tibet to the range of commerce. Opportunity did not come till Russia was busy with war in Manchuria and Korea. Captain Younghusband was hurriedly dispatched by the English from India with a military force to penetrate to the sacred city of Lassa. The penetration was made—at cost of blood, life and treasure. Attached to the expedition was G. L. Searight of Darjeeling, surveyor in his majesty's service. Being, like many Englishmen, an amateur gardener, he botanized along the way, and one afternoon, 7,000 feet above sea level, he came upon the lost orchid.

He sent a thousand plants back to Calcutta by a native to be examined. News of this reached England. Indian botanists verified the specimens as the long vanished fairrieneum. That news also was cabled to Europe. "Events," commented the Orchid Review excitedly, "follow each other with such startling rapidity as to make one almost breathless!" These events—the arrival, the testing and the decision on the genuineness of the find—produced among the cognoscenti a tremendous sensation. Indeed, among orchidists the historic expedition, even the Russo-Japanese war itself, will be chiefly memorable for having led to the reclamation of this little "lady's slipper."

When 170 of Searight's plants arrived in London they brought $2,750—and $10,000 reward besides. At this rate Mr. Searight's discovery must have yielded him nearly $25,400—and not one of the plants yet in bloom.—Franklin Clark in Everybody's.

Debarred From Canada.

The Countess of Aberdeen is now in Canada in connection with the quinquennial gathering of the international council of women. "Lord Aberdeen, even if he had not been lord lieutenant of Ireland," says the Manchester Guardian, "would not have been free to accompany the countess to Canada, for the Dominion has a curious unwritten law. It is that no one who has held the position of governor general should ever return. This is because a returning governor general would have to take an inferior rank to that he had formerly held. There are four former governors general still living—the Duke of Argyll, the Marquis of Lansdowne, the Earl of Aberdeen and the Earl of Minto—and by this law they are forever debarred from revisiting Canada."

A Necessary Precaution.

Those invited to a certain college function held the other day included a number of distinguished foreign professors. It was remarked that the invitations gave explicit directions as to the proper garments to be worn. Somebody inquired why it was considered necessary to give such directions.

"Because," answered one of those in charge of arranging the function, "the last time we gave a similar entertainment there was so much doubt among some of the foreigners invited as to what should be worn that one German savant actually appeared in a dress suit and carpet slippers."—New York Times.

A Warship Target.

Warships, unlike war horses, stand small chance of being turned out to grass when their work is over. The old British battleship Edinburgh, which is on the sale list, is to be used as a target. If the vessel survives the gun fire it is probable that she will be subjected to an attack of torpedoes to discover what would be the effect of a well placed shot with a Whitehead on the bottom of a ship of the Dreadnought type, which a section of the Edinburgh's bottom can be made approximately to represent.

A New Gun Silencer.

Colonel Humbert, a retired officer of the French artillery, has invented a gun silencer like that of Hiram Maxim, as it employs the principle of muffling the sound by confining the gases of the explosion and allowing them to escape gradually. Colonel Humbert, however, uses simple horizontal cells, whereas the cells in Maxim's device are arranged on the principle of the gyroscope. Colonel Humbert's silencer is much heavier than Maxim's.

Locusts in Panama.

The method of exterminating locusts most generally adopted in Panama has been to dig a trench about fifty feet in length, two feet wide and one foot deep, with perpendicular sides, in which the locusts are driven by men beating the grass and trees with switches. In this way millions are collected and are destroyed with a solution of strong lye soapsuds. The trench is then refilled with earth so as to allay the odor.

Calgary's municipally owned street railway had a revenue of $9,285 in August and a surplus of $2,754.

Ask Her This Question

"Do you know of any woman who ever received any benefit from taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?"

If any woman who is suffering with any ailment peculiar to her sex will ask her neighbors this question, she will be surprised at the result. There is hardly a community in this country where women cannot be found who have been restored to health by this famous old remedy, made exclusively from a simple formula of roots and herbs.

During the past 30 years we have published thousands of letters from these grateful women who have been cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and never in all that time have we published a testimonial without the writer's special permission. Never have we knowingly published a testimonial that was not truthful and genuine. Here is one just received a few days ago. If anyone doubts that this is a true and honest statement of a woman's experience with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound write and ask her.

Canifton, Ont.—"I had been a great sufferer for five years. One doctor told me it was ulcers of the uterus, and another told me it was a fibroid tumor. No one knows what I suffered. I would always be worse at certain periods, and never was regular, and the bearing-down pains were terrible. I was very ill in bed, and the doctor told me I would have to have an operation, and that I might die during the operation. I wrote to my sister about it and she advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Through personal experience I have found it the best medicine in the world for female troubles, for it has cured me, and I did not have to have the operation after all. The Compound also helped me while passing through Change of Life."—Mrs. Letitia Blair, Canifton, Ontario.

Any woman who is sick and suffering is foolish surely not to give such a medicine as this a trial. Why should it not do her as much good as it did Mrs. Blair.

JOE. HUNTER MAY NOT STAND TRIAL

Lindsay, Sept. 25.—That an effort was being made to have Joseph Hunter declared insane and to commit him to an asylum without a trial was the pith of a statement made to a Warder reporter to-day.

Hunter is to be tried on Monday next at the Fall Assizes. If he were to be declared insane at the present time by specialists who have examined him it is probable that the judge would grant an order committing him to an asylum.

TENDERS ASKED FOR THE NEW ISOLATION HOSPITAL

Will be Received Up to Four o'Clock on Monday, October 4th—Property Committee Decided the Matter Last Night.

In another column of the Review to-day will be found an advertisement calling for tenders for the new isolation hospital. They must be in the hands of the city clerk before four o'clock on Monday, October 4th, and each tender must be accompanied by a marked cheque for one thousand dollars. The Property Committee will meet at five o'clock on October 4th, and will make a report to the Council at the meeting to be held that evening.

The above arrangements were made at a meeting of the Property Committee held last night, at which Ald. Bradburn, chairman; Aldermen Duncan, McIntyre, Morgan and Hicks were present. The mayor was also present for the first part of the meeting. After some discussion Ald. Duncan and Ald. Morgan moved that tenders be called for as stated above, and the resolution was carried.

Architect Blackwell was present and a few minor changes were made in the specifications. It was decided to have the outer walls of red clay brick and all other walls of sandstone brick. Ald. Morgan and Ald. McIntyre made a motion to this effect and it was passed. That portion of the foundation above the ground will be built of stone. It could be done for about a hundred dollars less by the use of cement, but the committee thought that it would be better to use stone.

The hospital, the estimated cost of which is $12,000, will be located on the Hilliard farm, but the exact site has not yet been picked out. The committee will choose the site within the next few days. In fixing the site the disposal of sewage and the lighting of the building have to be taken into consideration.

The building will be practically fireproof and up-to-date in every particular, although built along economical lines.

CONSTANT CONGESTION OF BOATS AND SCOWS SHOWS THE NEED OF NEW WHARF

Is there immediate need of a new wharf at the foot of Wolfe street? The congestion of boats and scows there this morning was a convincing answer to that question.

The Ajax, Water Lily, Monarch, Bessie Butler, Dawn, Rainbow, and six scows were the dozen callers which found the accommodation altogether too inadequate. It is impossible for half this number to make single line landing at the wharf, and with so much freight and other cargo to be landed and the many passengers awaiting an opportunity to make the wharf, the great inconvenience and delay can easily be imagined.

A Review reporter happened to be at the wharf this morning when the passengers of one of the boats wanted to land, and, as is often the case, they had to work through a boat ahead of them before they could reach the wharf.

"And there are often more boats than this at the wharf at one time," said a steam-boat man.

With such a crowding a common occurrence during the whole navigation season the passengers complain of the service, and the proprietors of the boats find the delays costly and annoying. In the best interests of the public it is to be hoped that the government will have a modern and considerably larger wharf constructed at Wolfe street for next season's traffic.

GENERAL MANAGER VISITED MICA MINES---BIG SHIPMENT

Mr. H. G. Chamberlain, general manager of the Toronto Mica Company, and president and general manager of the Mica Products Company, of New York, was in the city yesterday on his way to his mica mines located at Tory Hill, Ontario, from which point two carloads of mica have been shipped to his Toronto factory during the last few days. It is said by those who understand mica that this is the largest shipment of mica that has ever been shipped in Canada at one time.

Mr. Chamberlain is, perhaps, overly modest, but we are inclined to the belief that it is a truism when they call him the Mica King. He owns and controls some 2,100 acres of mica, probably in Canada, not mentioning his holdings in iron, copper, graphite and some silver. We understand that two of his most trusted men left for Cobalt on the 22nd to secure for him a valuable silver claim which is said to be nearly three inches wide native silver, and better than 60 feet in length.

Mr. Chamberlain has just returned from New York City, where he has had a most successful business trip.

CHARLES DICKENS IN LAUGHTER AND TEARS

"The Debtors," at the Grand, Will Portray the Well-Known Characters From Dickens's Masterly Novel, "Little Dorrit."

William Dorrit, Esq., 'Father of the Marshalsea,' came among us this week—there could be no mistake about the strange old man of exalted ideas and unceasing selfishness—with the real Little Dorrit in constant, loving attendance.

They introduced themselves to the wondering people in the Princess Theatre, and, of course, created quite a stir, the news of which will travel far, wherever, indeed, lovers of Dickens cherish mind pictures of his immortal creations.

The old man cut a quaint figure with his white hair and autocratic mien, his stovepipe hat, stuck at a jaunty angle, his worn old coat with the red handkerchief hanging saucily over the edge of a pocket, his tight breeches, the white cravat that was so carefully arranged by Little Dorrit.

Little Dorrit seemed to step straight out of the book. She was really very small, but the great heart beat in the delicate frame. The sweet face peeped out of the poke bonnet, illuminated with the love of loving all her fellow creatures. She wore the shawl, too, and the simple, home-made skirt. In one hand she carried a carpet bag and in the other the bird cage.

It was odd indeed to find Amy Dorritt and her father here in Montreal. There is quite a story attached to the thing, and, strange to say, it is not Dickensian on the face of it.

Fritz von Shoenthan, the German comedy writer, wrote "The Debtors," a comedy based on "Little Dorrit." In Germany it was popular on its own merits apart from the associations of Dickens. "Little Dorrit" was not a comedy. Margaret Mayor translated "The Debtors" from the German. She has proved that the Dickens atmosphere, the Dickens savor, the quaint and characteristic humor of the great writer, can be thoroughly preserved in a play which is simple and direct enough to convey its own appeal.

"The Debtors" is not to be considered, first, as a 'dramatization' of "Little Dorrit." It is a play first—out to the reader of Dickens a play of peculiar charm for its Dickens atmosphere, not, confessedly, a dramatization of anything which Dickens wrote, but a play such as Dickens might have written had his marvelous pen been employed in the creation of dramatic works instead of books and yet weakest only in those parts which do not bear the imprint of Dickens' genius: the compression and conjunction of incident, the elaboration of humor. A clever imitation of Dickens as he would be in the role of playwright. Here is an intimate presentation for the analyst of the stage to pore over.

There are three acts and one scene to each. The first scene is the living room of the debtors in the Marshalsea Prison; the second is the courtyard of the prison, and the third is a fashionable hotel at Brighton. To the person who goes to see a play with Dickens' characterization, all three acts are pleasing.

Digby Bell, as Mr. Dorrit, is Mr. Dorrit. One might imagine a Bronsby Williams or a Willard as a Mr. Dorrit, just a trifle more real, but then he would not be Mr. Dorrit of "The Debtors." Yet, Mr. Dorrit of "The Debtors" is perfectly recognizable as "Mr. Dorrit" of "Little Dorrit."

And Amy Dorrit—Little Dorrit! Miss Kathleen Clifford is not only Little Dorrit on the stage—but Little Dorrit off it. She is English, to begin with, and that means a tremendous lot when careful English characterization is demanded. She would still be Little Dorrit in ordinary walking-out attire on St. Catharine street, in physique, face and manner. She is quite natural on the stage.

It seems no exaggeration to say that the stage may find in her a new Maude Adams, although she is still a very humble little actress, with a name not widely known. "You like Little Dorrit?" she says, as she clasps her hands. "Oh, I am so glad! I want you to believe, if you would, that I am pleased simply because the people in front like Little Dorrit." That is Little Dorrit off the stage.

"Do you know," she goes on, "that I was mistaken for Evelyn Thaw in New York, because I was so small and child-like, I suppose. The newspapers made a story of it. I didn't like that at all. I had quite a cry over it."

Then there is Chivery, the jailer, who has a warm corner in his heart for Little Dorrit, and adopts a very respectful attitude towards her father. St. Clair Bayfield, in this part, could hardly be improved upon. Sir Arthur Clennam, the handsome, courtly lover of Little Dorrit, and the means of restoring the Dorrit fortunes, is Dickensian in streaks. He is a brighter, gayer fellow than Arthur Clennam in Little Dorrit, and he is none the worse of it.

All the other members of the cast are excellent in their respective parts, indeed, it is most unusual to find a company in which every character so completely fills the allotted niche. There is Tip, the naughty brother, whose ears are cuffed by Little Dorrit, as portrayed by Francis Fay. Fanny, too, the flighty, selfish sister, the role sustained by Della Knight. And John Chivery, the jailer's son, who nurses a hopeless love for his little Amy, delineated by Edward H. Kelly. The debtors in the Marshalsea are also very careful studies. One might have liked to have seen Mr. Prancks, the little steam engine, who puffed and snorted around London.

Montreal has had the honor of being the second city to receive "The Debtors." The play commenced its run in Buffalo last week, and has yet to be submitted to New York, Boston and Chicago. Charles Dickens' grand-daughters will come from England to witness its production in New York, and there is little doubt that it will obtain the hall-mark of their approval, and that of Dickensites and other critics who await its arrival in the big cities of the United States.

It seems safe to say, thus early in its career, that it will score one of the hits of the year, for itself and for the manner in which it is staged and played.

PICTURES CLEAR AND INTERESTING

Superior Operator Gives Great Satisfaction at "Crystal"

That the public of Peterborough is generally interested in and amused by motion pictures is beyond dispute. This modern system of showing the action and 'motif' of comedies, tragedies, dramas, etc., by means of the continuous reels of little photographs giving pleasure to thousands. However a wide difference between the ways in which the moving pictures are presented to different audiences. It is a revelation to see the clear plain pictures thrown on the screen at the Crystal by the operator, who has recently taken charge of the operating rooom there. The pictures seen by the audience throb with mimic life. Every feature in the actors' faces, every change of expression, every detail is as clearly shown as though in actual life. Mr. Bartleman has shown the public the possibilities of moving pictures and Mr. Edwards, the proprietor, is to be congratulated on the successful way his pictures are shown. The comedies for to-night are very laughable and the drama, "Fatal Love," is very touching.

THAT WATCH OF YOURS

Is in many respects similar to a railway engine. Let an engine be run without oil or cleaning and before long it will stop dead. Upon examination it will be found that the friction and wear and tear has ruined the machinery, and it is fit only for the scrap iron heap. Likewise your watch. You put it in your pocket, and while there is a kick in it, you, in your mistaken economy, do not consult the watchmaker, and consequently rob your watch of years of good service and also much of its former accuracy. The time-keeping qualities of a good watch are maintained and often improved by timely and skilful attention. If you have been one of the neglectful ones call around and see us.

DIFFICULT TO UNDERSTAND

While we appreciate the intention of the Examiner in its articles upon beautifying the city, we must take strong issue with it in some of its conclusions. In a recent issue it speaks of Peterborough as having dirty, ill-kept streets. This is not correct. Travellers have frequently remarked upon the cleanness of our streets, and the generally tidy appearance of the city. This year the lawns, villas and houses generally of the city have looked very pretty, while in no place will a greater number of the more humble abodes show such signs of floral taste and general neatness.

MR. LEARY AT LINDSAY FAIR

Talks About the Drilling for Gas on Kincaid Farm

Mr. R. H. Leary, president of the Peterborough Industrial Fair, was a visitor to town to-day. He was asked by a Post reporter how the drilling operations for gas and oil were progressing on the Kincaid farm. "We are down a depth of over 500 feet at present, but operations have been temporarily suspended until Mr. Dettman returns from the States with a new drilling machine. We feel confident that we will secure gas in abundant quantities—in fact we have already struck a flow of gas yielding many thousand cubic feet every twenty-four hours."

"When will you begin operations in Lindsay?" queried the reporter.

"We had intended boring here the same time we started operations in Peterborough," said Mr. Leary. "You will hear from us pretty soon."—Lindsay Post.

NORMAL SCHOOL OPENS MONDAY

Full List of Students Who Will Attend Not Yet Secured—No Change in Teaching Staff

The Peterborough Normal School will open for its second session on Monday morning at nine o'clock. During the past week fifteen students who came from approved schools, have been trying examinations, and those successful will go on with the coming session. The full list of students who will attend has not yet been secured. The teaching staff will be the same as that of last year. The walks around the school have been completed, considerable of the ground graded and sodded, and these changes have added a decided improvement to the building and property.

Normal School Art Portfolios, Kindergarten Books and Sewing Books on sale at Cubitt's, Stratton's, Soden's and Review Office.

LINDSAY CHEESE AT 11 1-4 CENTS

Ald. G. A. Gillespie one of the Largest Buyers

Lindsay, Sept. 24.—Cheese sold at 11 1-4 cents a pound at the meeting of the Lindsay Cheese Board this morning. 1061 boxes were boarded in all. The buyers were Messrs. W. Flavelle and J. Brown, of Lindsay, and Ald. A. G. Gillespie, of Peterborough. These secured cheese as follows;—Gillespie — Dunsford, Star, Mariposa; Flavelle—Pine Grove, Reaboro, North Ops, Maple Leaf, Bobcaygeon and North Verulam; Brown—Omemee, North Harvey and Red Rock.

The bidding started at ten cents and rose to the selling price when Mr. Brown took the first selections.

A REMICK ROUND UP

Some of the biggest coups in the song writing world are pulled off by the publishing house of J. H. Remick & Co., which firm's almost innumerable popular numbers are widely sold throughout Canada. The current issue of the Clipper states that Mr. Remick has signed a contract with Sam H. Harris, of the firm of Cohan & Harris, the terms of which will give Mr. Remick the sole right to act as selling agent for all the songs in the Cohan and Harris productions. This will include the songs and musical productions of George M. Cohan.

THE BIG HUSTLE

One thing about this everlasting rush and hustle with electric trams and automobiles, there is no time for forming friendships. People don't make friendly visits, and take an interest in each other's doings. They call and exchange formalities. A nodding acquaintanceship may be found on a street car, but friendships are never made. The human puddle is kept so everlastingly stirred up, that the individual atoms never get a chance to stay together. It is as much as most men can do to get a week end with their wives.—Bobcaygeon Independent.

OBITUARY

MRS. JACOB BROWN.

Mrs. Jacob Brown passed away last night at her home, 399 Homewood Ave. She had been ill for several months and her death was not unexpected. Her demise will be learned of with the deepest regret by a large number of friends, to whom she had endeared herself by her sterling qualities.

The late Mrs. Brown was forty-five years of age and was a native of Brighton, her maiden name being Henrietta Tillotson. She is survived by her husband, one son, Blake, and two daughters, Maud and Mabel.

The funeral service will be held at the house on Monday afternoon, at two o'clock, and will be conducted by Rev Mr. Henderson, pastor of Charlotte street Methodist church, of which the deceased was a member. The cortege will leave the house for Little Lake cemetery at 2.30 o'clock.

KNOX CHURCH BOYS' CLUB HELD MEETING

The first meeting of the Knox Church Boys' Club last night proved a great success. There was a large turnout. After the business part of the meeting Miss Barr opened the programme with a recitation. Mr. Roland Common was present with his lantern to give the boys some humorous and instructive views, which were well shown on the sheet. During the interval Mr. Wm. Lorimer and Mr. Dixon favored the gathering with a song. A few more slides were shown, which brought an enjoyable meeting to a close. The club had received during the evening a purse containing three games, given to the members by Miss Hall, sister of the president, Mr. Gordon Hall. Thanks were justly extended to the donor and also to Miss Maggie Flowers as pianist, and the others who took part in the programme. Next Friday's meeting will be a social feature, when new members will be received.

WHEN YOU NEXT VISIT BUFFALO

The Right Place to Stay --- The Lenox Hotel for the Ladies

To those who purpose visiting Buffalo in the near future, a hint as to where to stay while in that city might not be amiss. Ladies who are travelling alone or without male escort are often perplexed as to a suitable place to stay where they will be comfortable and perfectly sure that they will not be subject to such annoyances as are likely to occur in the hotels in a big city. The Lennox Hotel in Buffalo is one of the most up-to-date and well equipped of modern hotels, and special attention is given to the comfort of the ladies. The hotel is in the most beautiful residential portion of the city on Delaware and North streets, and is away from the noise and bustle that is so annoying in the centre of the city. An auto 'bus from the hotel meets all the trains, and rooms may be reserved by mail or 'phone in advance if desired. The Lennox is run on the European plan, there being a beautiful and well-equipped grill room in connection, where the service is all that can be desired. An advertisement of the hotel appears in another column, and intending visitors to Buffalo should decide to stay there while in the city.

BOBBY BURNS IN THE TOILS AGAIN

And to add to His Misfortune Has to Breathe Lindsay Air For Fifteen Days

The spirit of the fall fair had an overwhelming effect on "Bobby" Burns, who got badly drunk in town yesterday. Bobby is hardly a descendant of the Ayrshire shepherd, but he has the name. By occupation he is a peddlar of some description—a cure-all. Magistrate Jackson imposed a fine, but Bobby, very unfortunately, was not supplied with the wherewithal, and now he has worked out the first of a fifteen day sentence.—Lindsay Warder.

CURVE PITCHING.

Radbourne Used the First "Rise" or "Jump" Ball.

Curve pitching got its greatest development after 1883, in which year the artificial restraints were removed and the pitcher was allowed to deliver the ball as he pleased, which means overhand. At that period the "out," easiest of all curves to throw, was falling into disrepute among major leaguers. The incurve, by the limitations of the human arm a smaller but quicker deviation than the out, was temporarily much in vogue. The drop remained, as always, a favorite. Scientific change of pace, the standby of such great early day pitchers as Harry Wright, Asa Brainard and Al Spalding, was temporarily lost. Radbourne, a tremendously speedy overhand pitcher, came along with the first "rise" or "jump" ball. He had wonderful development of the wrist, the thumb and the two first fingers. The limitations of the arm, as well as the hostile attraction of gravitation, make the rise difficult. Many believe it to be impossible. This curve can be delivered only with a straight overhand throw, and the only way to give the ball a back spin is to jerk the fingers down its surface as the hand passes down to release it. But Radbourne had the speed, the flexibility and the grip to do it. So has "Old Cy" Young of this day. When Young gets it to working right his teammates recognize it by the number of men who go out on little pop flies and fouls, for it has only a slight jump, two or three inches.

There is a jump ball, however, which does not depend on spin and which may be called the "false rise." A very tall, long armed pitcher, like Addie Joss of the Cleveland Americans, gets it when he throws an overarm ball toward the batter's knees. The ball, coming downward with great speed, packs the air below it. Just when the ball begins to lose speed the elastic air cushion for a fraction of a second has equal power with the attraction of gravitation. This air cushion carries the ball horizontally for a few feet until further loss of motion brings it to the ground. This parallels the old exemplar of the schoolbooks—the windows broken by an exterior explosion fall outward because of pressure from the air cushion within.—Collier's.

Costly Time.

"The statement that it cost the Standard Oil company $48,000 to cease operations during the funeral services of H. H. Rogers is an apt illustration of the value of time in an industry," said the professional photographer. "If it wasn't for that we would do double our business.

"The officers of a concern may be enthusiastically in favor of having a set of pictures of the works, but they chill when the general manager hands them a little slip showing just how much time we use costs and how much net profit they are going to lose, etc., balanced against the speculative value of the pictures as business getters. Our price, no matter how high, cuts no ice. It's the postage stamp account comparatively. For instance, we took a set of pictures of the Armour stockyards and plant. We were there an hour. The company paid only $200 to us for the pictures, but it lost in time just $4,000, making the cost of the pictures $4,200 for about ten photographs. Four hundred and twenty dollars each is a pretty good price for pictures of beef."—New York Sun.

Rose That Changes Its Color.

White in the shade, red in the sun—such is the twofold character that has given a name to the chameleon rose. At night or when it is carried into a dark room it assumes a waxlike whiteness. This does not occur abruptly, but the petals first pass through a blush tint, which rapidly changes into a very pale rose and finally ends by becoming the purest white. Then if it is taken into bright sunlight with the greatest rapidity it resumes the scarlet tint of the most brilliant peony.

This horticultural phenomenon comes from Japan, that country of magic gardens and wizard horticulturists.—Petit Jardin.

Bomb explosions in Barcelona streets are daily occurrences.

ON THE WAY TO AYLWIN.

A Reconciliation For Which Both Were Evidently Longing.

By M. MACLEAN HELLIWELL.

The train stopped with a jolt, and the passengers thronged out, filling the station with bustle and confusion.

Chatterton, who was on his way to Halifax, was looking idly out of the smoker window when suddenly there passed across his range of vision a certain well cut profile which he knew could belong to only one woman in the world. Without an instant's hesitation he picked up his hat and left the car, clearing the steps just as the train started heavily forward.

The small station was crowded with people, and Chatterton looked some time for the lady of the profile before he espied her sitting quietly in one corner of the dingy waiting room.

She had thrown open her coat and was leaning back against the wall with closed eyes, evidently prepared to wait some time. Chatterton seated himself in the opposite corner of the room and, drawing out a paper, pretended to read the while he watched her furtively.

People passed and repassed between them. The noise and confusion ebbed and flowed as train after train came in and departed.

Then all at once a lull came. Silence reigned on the platform, and Chatterton suddenly realized that he and the lady were alone in the waiting room. He rose and went out abruptly, and as he passed through the door he stopped for a moment before a time table that hung beside it, one name having caught his eye.

"Aylwin," he muttered. "Of course going home for the dear old people's anniversary dinner. How could I have forgotten it? I don't believe she ever traveled alone before, and it's a whole hour to wait in this hole. Don't I know the long, interminable dragging on of the minutes, don't I know—ah, but it did not seem long last year when we waited here together"

He passed out on to the deserted platform and, lighting a cigar, smoked furiously while he paced up and down, revolving many things in his mind.

At last, throwing back his head with a sudden resolution, he tossed aside his cigar and re-entered the waiting room.

As the door closed behind him the girl in the corner opened her eyes, and a sudden wave of color touched her cheeks. Her cool gray eyes regarded his steadily for a moment; then she turned her face slowly from him. But the man, lifting his hat, advanced quickly.

"Margaret," he cried as he stood before her, "I want to talk to you." Her baffling gray eyes met his with no trace of embarrassment.

"I know of nothing you can have to say to me. You were very explicit. Nothing of importance was omitted, but if something else has occurred to you you have my lawyer's address and can communicate with him."

He made no answer for a moment. Then he said abruptly:

"You are going home for the anniversary dinner tomorrow. I can just see the table blazing with lights and flowers, the dear old pater beaming with pride and the little mother all soft smiles and tender happiness. Tomorrow will be the first time there has ever been an empty place at the anniversary dinner. I am afraid the little mother will not like that. She has always had perfect faith in her sons-in-law."

"It is easy to deceive old people," she interrupted, "particularly such dear, guileless, trustful old people as they. Will you kindly leave me? Under existing circumstances no gentleman should have to be reminded that he has renounced his right to inflict his company upon his—the woman"—

"His wife," he finished gently. "Why hesitate? Is the word so hateful to you? A separation is not a divorce, you know. I don't want to force myself upon you, Margaret. But I cannot get the little mother out of my mind. Do they know at home of our trouble?"

The girl was silent for a moment. Then she faced him suddenly, her eyes blazing.

"No," she cried; "they don't. You are not the only one who loves them! You have been the cause of my doing much that I regret, and now you are making me do the one thing I have always loathed with all my soul. You have forced me to lie to them for the first time in my life! I have told them nothing yet of the truth. In my letters I have always added your love and such messages as you used to send. They expect you tonight. I shall tell them that just as we were starting an urgent telegram came from the Halifax branch demanding your immediate presence. Oh, I shall get through! I have had my schooling." The last words were rather faint, but she threw back her head and added almost fiercely, "And it will not be acting to show them how happy I am!"

He did not tell her that her face, her voice, her very attitude, belied her words, for something was teaching him wisdom. Instead he answered gently:

"It will be impossible to deceive the little mother. When those clear blue eyes look into yours and her soft voice asks, 'Why, Madda, where's our Teddy?' all lies will shrivel up and die. You will have to tell her everything, and that will mean that all joy will go not only out of the anniversary dinner, but out of her life. You know how she regards such things. Margaret, don't you think that for her sake and the pater's I had better go down with you just for the dinner? I can make my excuses and leave on the midnight train tomorrow. I shall not trouble you, believe me. They must not be allowed to suspect anything, but when we are alone we shall be as strangers. I shall not even talk to you if you do not wish it. There is plenty of time for you to decide. I am asking nothing for myself—I know that that is fruitless—but I am pleading for the little mother and the pater."

He turned as he finished speaking and left her alone.

It seemed scarcely five minutes before she heard his voice again. "The Aylwin train is coming," he said. "Shall I get a ticket?"

"Yes," she answered simply.

The cars were crowded, but he found a seat, and, putting her in it with the old air of proprietorship that had always been so sweet to her, he seated himself beside her in silence.

The train rattled on, and as they sat so near together, yet so very far apart, the thoughts of each turned to the last time they had traveled that road together on their first visit home after their honeymoon.

How happy had they been then! How happy they might have been now if only that little rift within the lute—

Through the mind of each the same questions rang—had there been just and sufficient cause? A little patience, a little forbearance, a little sacrificing of pride at the beginning—

Chatterton looked down at the slight figure beside him. They would not be able to deceive the little mother after all. Happy? With the old sparkle all gone from her eyes and those pathetic little lines about her mouth! And he had sworn to love her, to cherish her and protect her through good and ill till death should part them. Instinctively his hand closed over hers as it lay listlessly on the seat beside him.

At the touch of his fingers she turned, and something shone in her eyes as she drew closer to him.

"Dear," she said softly, "I'm so lonely, so tired and so sorry. Will you"—

"Hush," he whispered. "It was all my fault, little girl. I have been a brute, but all the rest of my life I shall make atonement, for we'll start all over again, and—we won't have to act a lie to the little mother, will we, Madda?"

And, though she answered nothing in words, each understood and was happy.

A White Tigress.

A white tigress eight feet eight inches in length has been shot in Dhenkanal state, Orissa. The ground color was pure white, and the stripes were of a deep reddish black. The skin has been presented to the rajah of Dhenkanal, who has had it mounted and placed in his palace. The shikaris (hunters) of this country say that it is the only white tiger they have seen.—London Standard.

KELSEY

Zig-Zag Heat Tubes

Make the KELSEY WARM AIR GENERATOR the most powerful apparatus.

¶ The "Kelsey" warms fresh air by the best method; warms large volumes of air properly and forces to exposed or distant rooms; has double the weight and heating surfaces of the ordinary furnace, and utilizes all the heat to much better advantage; does not heat the cellar or waste heat up the chimney.

¶ The "Kelsey" does not warm the same air over and over like steam or hot water systems with radiators; costs less to install, and for management and repairs; and is more efficient, healthful and economical.

¶ These are a few of the reasons why the Kelsey Fresh Air System has been installed in so many of the finest class of City and Country Homes, Churches and Schools, and why it is being specified in preference to other systems.

The Younger Set

By ROBERT W. CHAMBERS,

Author of "The Fighting Chance," Etc.

COPYRIGHT, 1907, BY ROBERT W. CHAMBERS.

"Who led the cotillon?" he asked.

"Jack Ruthven, dancing with Rosamund Fane."

She drew her feet from the fender and crossed them, still turned away from him, and so they remained in silence until again she shifted her position almost impatiently.

"You are very tired," he said.

"No; wide awake."

"Don't you think it best for you to go to bed?"

"No, but you may go."

And as he did not stir, "I mean that you are not to sit here because I do." And she looked around at him.

"What has gone wrong, Eileen?" he said quietly.

He had never before used her given name, and she flushed up.

"There is nothing the matter, Captain Selwyn. Why do you ask?"

"Yes, there is," he said.

"There is not, I tell you"—

"And if it is something you cannot understand," he continued pleasantly, "perhaps it might be well to ask Nina to explain it to you."

"There is nothing to explain."

"Because," he went on very gently, "one is sometimes led by malicious suggestion to draw false and unpleasant inferences from harmless facts"—

"Captain Selwyn"—

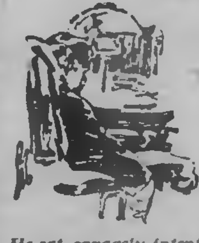
"Yes, Eileen."

But she could not go on. Speech and thought itself remained sealed; only a confused consciousness of being hurt remained—somehow to be remedied by something he might say, might deny. Yet how could it help her for him to deny what she herself refused to believe—refused through sheer instinct while ignorant of its meaning?

Even if he had done what she heard Rosamund Fane say he had done it had remained meaningless to her save for the manner of the telling. But now; but now! Why had they laughed? Why had their attitudes and manner and the disconnected phrases in French left her flushed and rigid among the idle group at supper? Why had they suddenly seemed to remember her presence and express their abrupt consciousness of it in such furtive signals and silence?

It was false anyway, whatever it meant. And, anyway, it was false that he had driven away in Mrs. Ruthven's brougham. But, oh, if he had only stayed, if he had only remained—this friend of hers who had been so nice to her from the moment he came into her life, so generous, so considerate, so lovely to her and to Gerald!

For a moment the glow remained; then a chill doubt crept in. Would he have remained had he known she was to be there? Where did he go after the dinner? As for what they said, it was absurd. And yet—and yet—



He sat, savagely intent upon the waning fire.

He sat, savagely intent upon the waning fire; she turned restlessly again, elbows close together on her knees, face framed in her hands.

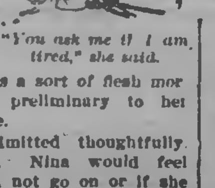
"You ask me if I am tired," she said. "I am—of the froth of life."

His face changed instantly. "What?" he exclaimed, laughing.

But she, very young and seriously intent, was now wrestling with the mighty platitudes of youth. First of all she desired to know what meaning life held for humanity. Then she expressed a doubt as to the necessity for human happiness, duty being her discovery as sufficient substitute.

But he heard in her childish babble the minor murmur of an undercurrent quickening for the first time, and he listened patiently and answered gravely, touched by her irremediable loneliness.

So when she said that she was tired of gayety, that she would like to study, he said that he would take up anything she chose with her. And when she spoke vaguely of a life devoted to good works—of the wiser charity, of being morally equipped to aid those who required material aid—he was very serious, but ventured to suggest that she dance her first season through as a sort of flesh mortifying penance preliminary to her spiritual novitiate.



"You ask me if I am tired," she said.

"Yes," she admitted thoughtfully. "You are right. Nina would feel dreadful if I did not go on or if she imagined I cared so little for it all. But one season is enough to waste. Don't you think so?"

"Quite enough," he assured her.

"And—why should I ever marry?" she demanded, lifting her clear, sweet eyes to his.

"Why, indeed?" he repeated, with conviction. "I can see no reason."

"I am glad you understand me," she said. "I am not a marrying woman."

"Not at all," he assured her.

"No, I am not, and Nina—the darling—doesn't understand. Why, what do you suppose? But would it be a breach of confidence to anybody if I told you?"

"I doubt it," he said. "What is it you have to tell me?"

"Only—it's very, very silly—only several men—and one nice enough to know better—Sudbury Gray"—

"Asked you to marry them?" he finished, nodding his head at the cat.

"Yes," she admitted, frankly astonished. "But how did you know?"

"Inferred it. Go on."

"There is nothing more," she said without embarrassment. "I told Nina each time, but she confused me by asking for details, and the details were too foolish and too annoying to repeat. I do not wish to marry anybody. I think I made that very plain to everybody."

"Right, as usual," he said cheerfully. "You are too intelligent to consider that sort of thing just now."

"You do understand me, don't you?" she said gratefully. "There are so many serious things in life to learn and to think of, and that is the very last thing I should ever consider. I am very, very glad I had this talk with you. Now I am rested, and I shall retire for a good long sleep."

With which paradox she stood up, stifling a tiny yawn, and looked smilingly at him, all the old sweet confidence in her eyes. Then, suddenly mocking:

"Who suggested that you call me by my first name?" she asked.

"Some good angel or other. May I?"

"If you please. I rather like it. But I couldn't very well call you anything except 'Captain Selwyn.'"

"On account of my age?"

"Your age!" contemptuous in her confident equality.

"Oh, my wisdom, then? You probably reverence me too deeply."

"Probably not. I don't know. I couldn't do it—somehow"—

"Try it—unless you're afraid."

"I'm not afraid!"

"Yes, you are, if you don't take a dare."

"You dare me?"

"I do."

"Philip," she said, hesitating, adorable in her embarrassment. "No! No! No! I can't do it that way in cold blood. It's got to be 'Captain Selwyn,' for awhile anyway. Good night."

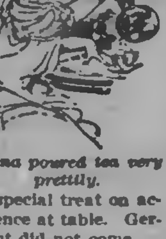
He took her outstretched hand, laughing. The usual little friendly shake followed. Then she turned gayly away, leaving him standing before the whitening ashes.

He thought the fire was dead, but when he turned out the lamp an hour later under the ashes embers glowed in the darkness of the winter morning.

Chapter 7

"FID-LENT, and the enemy grins," remarked Selwyn as he started for church with Nina and the children. Austin, knee deep in a dozen Sunday supplements, refused to stir. Poor little Eileen was now convalescent from grip, but still unsteady on her legs. Her maid had taken the grip.

Boots Lansing called to see Eileen, but she wouldn't come down, saying her nose was too pink. Drina entertained Boots, and then Selwyn returned and talked army talk with him until tea was served. Drina poured tea very prettily. Nina had driven Austin to vespers. The family dined at 7 so Drina could sit up; special treat on account of Boots' presence at table. Gerald was expected, but did not come.



Drina poured tea very prettily.

The next morning Selwyn went downtown at the usual hour and found Gerald, pale and shaky, hanging over his desk and trying to dictate letters to an uncomfortable stenographer.

So he dismissed the abashed girl for the moment, closed the door and sat down beside the young man.

"Go home, Gerald," he said with decision. "When Neergard comes in I'll tell him you are not well. And, old fellow, don't ever come near the office again when you're in this condition."

"I'm a perfect fool," faltered the boy, his voice trembling. "I don't really care for that sort of thing, either. But you know how it is in that set"—

"What set?"

"Oh, the Fanes, the Ruth"— He stammered himself into silence.

"I see. What happened last night?"

"The usual, two tables full of it. There was a wheel too. I had no intention— But you know yourself how it parches your throat—the jollying and laughing and excitement. I forgot all about what you—what we talked over. I'm ashamed and sorry, but I can stay here and attend to things, of course"—

"I don't want Neergard to see you," repeated Selwyn.

"W-why," stammered the boy, "do I look as rocky as that?"

"Yes. See here, you are not afraid of me, are you?"

"No"—

"You don't think I'm one of those long faced, blue nosed butters-in, do you? You have confidence in me, haven't you? You know I'm an average and normally sinful man who has made plenty of mistakes and who understands how others make them. You know that, don't you, old chap?"

"Y-es."

"Then you will listen, won't you, Gerald?"

The boy laid his arms on the desk and hid his face in them. Then he nodded.

For ten minutes Selwyn talked to him with all the terse and colloquial confidence of a comradeship founded upon respect for mutual fallibility—no instruction, no admonition, no blame, no reproach, only an affectionately logical review of matters as they stood and as they threatened to stand.

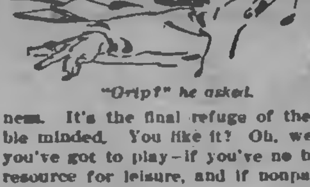
The boy fortunately was still pliable and susceptible, still unalarmed and frank. It seemed that he had lost money again, this time to Jack Ruthven, and Selwyn's teeth remained sternly interlocked as bit by bit the story came out, but in the telling the boy was not quite as frank as he might have been, and Selwyn supposed he was able to stand his loss without seeking aid.

"Anyway," said Gerald in a muffled voice, "I've learned one lesson—that a business man can't acquire the habits and keep the infernal hours that suit people who can take all day to sleep it off."

"Right," said Selwyn.

"Besides, my income can't stand it," added Gerald naively.

"Neither could mine, old fellow. And, Gerald, cut out this card business. It's the final refuge of the feeble minded. You like it? Oh, well, if you've got to play—if you've no better resource for leisure, and if nonparticipation isolates you too completely from other idiots—play the imbecile gentleman's game, which means a game where nobody need worry over the stakes."



"Grip?" he asked.

"But—they'd laugh at me!"

"I know. But Boots Lansing would not, and you have considerable respect for him."

Gerald nodded. He had immediately succumbed to Lansing like everybody else.

"And one thing more," said Selwyn. "Don't play for stakes—no matter how insignificant—where women sit in the game. Fashionable or not, it is rotten sport, whatever the ethics may be. And, Gerald, tainted sport and a clean record can't take the same fence together."

A little later the boy started for home at Selwyn's advice. But the memory of his card losses frightened him, and he stopped on the way to see what money Austin would advance him.

Julius Neergard came up from Long Island, arriving at the office about noon. The weather was evidently cold on Long Island. He had the complexion of a raw ham, but the thick, fat hand, with its bitten nails, which he offered Selwyn as he entered his office, was unpleasantly hot, and on the thin nose, which split the broad expanse of face, a bead or two of sweat usually glistened, winter and summer.

"Where's Gerald?" he asked as an office boy relieved him of his heavy box coat and brought his mail to him.

"I advised Gerald to go home," observed Selwyn carelessly. "He is not perfectly well."

Neergard's tiny, mouselike eyes, set close together, stole brightly in Selwyn's direction, but they usually looked just a little past a man, seldom at him.

"Grip?" he asked.

"I don't think so," said Selwyn.

"Lots of grip round town," observed Neergard, as though satisfied that Gerald had it. Then he sat down and rubbed his large, membraneous ears.

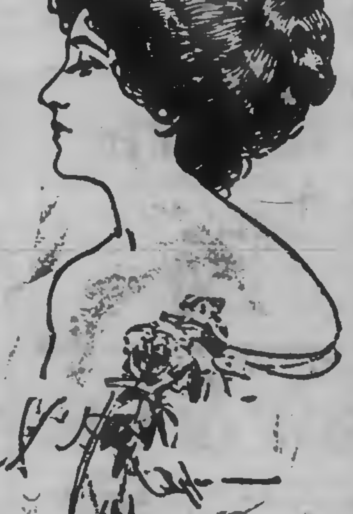
"Captain Selwyn," he began, "I'm satisfied that it's a devilish good thing."

"Are you?"

"Emphatically. I've mastered the details, virtually all of 'em. Here's the situation in a grain of wheat. The Siowitha club owns a thousand or so acres of oak, scrub, pine scrub, sand and weeds and controls 4,000 more—that is to say, the club pays the farmers' rents and fixes their fences and awards them odd jobs and prizes for the farm sustaining the biggest number of bevies; also the club pays them to maintain millet and buckwheat patches and/to act as wardens. In return the farmers post their 4,000 acres for the exclusive benefit of the club. Is that plain?"

"Perfectly."

"Very well, then. Now, the Siowitha is largely composed of very rich men, among them Bradley Harmon, Jack Ruthven, George Fane, Sanxon Orchil, the Hon. Delmour-Carnes—that crowd—rich and stingy. That's why they are contented with a yearly agreement with the farmers instead of buying the 4,000 acres. Why put a lot of good money out of commission when they can draw interest on it and toss an insignificant fraction of that interest as a sop to the farmers? Do you see? That's your millionaire method, and it's what makes 'em in the first place."



Eileen.

He drew a large, fancy handkerchief from his pistol pocket and wiped the beads from the bridge of his limber nose. But they reappeared again.

"Now," he said, "I am satisfied that, working very carefully, we can secure options on every acre of the four thousand. There is money in it either way and any way we work it. We get it coming and going. First of all, if the Siowitha people find that they really cannot get on without controlling these acres, why"—and he snickered so that his nose curved into a thin, ruddy beak—"why, captain, I suppose we could let them have the land. Eh? Oh, yes, if they must have it!"

BABY'S TEETHING TIME IS A TROUBLOUS TIME

When baby is teething the whole household is upset. The tender little gums are swollen and inflamed, and the poor child often cries day and night, wearing the mother out and keeping the rest of the family on edge. In the homes where Baby's Own Tablets are used there is no such worry. The Tablets allay the inflammation, soothe the irritation and bring the teeth through painlessly. Mrs. Jean Boutin, St. Marguerite, Que., says:—"When I sent for Baby's Own Tablets my nine months' old baby was suffering greatly from teething troubles and I hardly got any rest. A few doses of the Tablets relieved her, and the teeth seemed to come through painlessly." Sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Kidney Disease For Years

This Well Known Gentleman Strongly Recommends "Fruit-a-tives" to all Sufferers.

JAMES DINGWALL, ESQ.

"I have much pleasure in testifying to the almost marvellous benefit I have derived from taking "Fruit-a-tives." I was a lifelong sufferer from Chronic Constipation, and the only medicine I ever secured to do me any real good was "Fruit-a-tives." This medicine cured me when everything else failed. Also, last spring I had a severe ATTACK OF BLADDER TROUBLE WITH KIDNEY TROUBLE, and "Fruit-a-tives" cured these complaints for me, when the physician attending me had practically given me up.

I am now over eighty years of age and I can strongly recommend "Fruit-a-tives" for chronic constipation and bladder and kidney trouble. This medicine is very mild like fruit, is easy to take, but most effective in action."

FOR THE LADY WHO CALLS

The lady who has a large circle of acquaintances always finds it a difficult matter to keep track of the reception days of her friends and often mistakes are made, that might have been avoided if care were taken to make a record of such days. And then there are the teas, at homes, and parties to be remembered too and when a hostess is planning an affair, she is always worried lest she overlook some one who has extended hospitality to her some time previous. To avoid these mistakes, a social register has been issued by the Review, that will be a boon to the busy lady. There are pages for each day of the month on which the record of the calls received and paid with the address of the visitor appear, then there are pages for social engagements, visits paid, addresses and memoranda, all of which prove very valuable data to have. These books are on sale at all the book stores and at the Review Office for 50 cents and there has already been a good demand for them.

AN INVESTIGATION OF STEAMBOAT COLLISION

Was Held To-day at Court House—Several Witnesses Testified—Judgement Will be Made Public in a Week or so.

An investigation of the collision which took place between the steamers "Otonabee" and "Rainbow" on August 31st was held at the Court House by Commissioner Captain Demars, of Kingston, with Capt. Naish, Montreal, and Capt. Jones, superintendent of the Dominion line of steamers as assessors. It will be remembered that some time ago the "Otonabee" and "Rainbow" collided just below Hale's Bridge, the last named steamer being somewhat damaged.

The investigation opened this morning and six witnesses were examined at this morning's session, three from each boat. This afternoon the captain of the "Otonabee" was among the witnesses whose testimony was taken.

Captain Demars told a Review representative to-day that he was not at liberty to state anything about the outcome of the investigation until it had been formally passed upon by the Marine Department at Ottawa. The result will be ready for publication in a week or so.

CHURCH WILL BE OPENED AROUND END OF OCTOBER

The Church of the Sacred Heart, the Catholic Church in the south end of the city, will be formally opened about the last of October, it is expected. His Lordship Bishop O'Connor, could not be seen in reference to the opening, as he is in Quebec, attending the Plenary Council there.

The church will be conducted as a mission church at first, until some priest is appointed to take charge of it and reside near the church. The opening of the church will mean the beginning of a new parish, with a congregation, it is expected, of about seven hundred.

LABOR CONDITIONS HERE

The Labor Gazette for September contains the following report from Mr. J. A. Sharp, the Peterborough correspondent:

GENERAL CONDITIONS OF THE LABOR MARKET.

Active conditions prevailed in the labor market during August, the building trades being as brisk as last month. The Peterborough Lumber Company is building a new sawmill in place of the one destroyed last month by fire; it will cost about $25,000. The city is about to build a bridge across the Otonabee river at Smith street. Work on the erection of the waterworks dam has been commenced; a large number of men are at work installing machinery for handling concrete. Mr. Jas. "Roger" has received the contract for grading and sodding the Peterborough drill hall. W. Hickey and Sons are building a new steamer at No. 6 lock, for use at Fenelon Falls. The factories were all busy; the Canadian Electric Company was working some of the departments until ten o'clock at night. Merchants reported business very good.

CONDITIONS OF LOCAL INDUSTRIES.

Agriculture.—The condition of all crops is very promising, and prospects are bright for an abundant harvest. With very few exceptions the farmers were well supplied with help.

Lumbering.—The lumber mills were very busy, and big cuts are expected. The Peterborough Lumber Company expects to be running night and day as soon as it gets its new machinery properly installed.

Manufacturing.—All branches were very busy.

CONDITION OF PARTICULAR

The building trades were all busy. Moulders and coremakers had a good month, and machinists were busy with woodworkers active. Patternmakers also had a good month, and bakers and confectioners reported business very good. Cigarmakers reported a slight improvement over last month, but on the whole trade was not good. Railway employees were very busy, also steamboat men, teamsters and expressmen. Unskilled labor was very active.

HOME AFTER TWO MONTHS TRIP

Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Reid Returned to the City Last Night

Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Reid, of this city, returned last night after a two months' trip to the Pacific Coast. They visited Winnipeg, Vancouver, Victoria, Seattle, Tacoma and other Canadian and American cities.

Mr. Reid stated to the Review to-day that he met several former Peterborough boys while he was away among them Mr. J. J. McBain, whom he saw in Vancouver. Mr. McBain showed him all the points of interest in the great western city.

Mr. and Mrs. Reid travelled an average of nearly 1,000 miles a week during their trip.

Physicians Who Know Recommend Algonquin Park

Many people have chosen resorts by the sea for their vacation this summer, others the mountains, and many, the inland waters of the "Highlands of Ontario" for that much-needed rest that one should take at least once every twelve months. In many cases the desired haven was found, but in others, the more fashionable resorts did not give the restful quiet which in most cases is needed, and return to the office with only half the good accomplished. There is one place, however, which offers unlimited inducements to those whose health is run down or those who are in need of relaxation from worry and work. This place is known as the Algonquin National Park of Ontario, situated 205 miles north of the city of Toronto and 168 miles west of Ottawa. Here the conditions are ideal. The altitude at the park station, your objective point, is 1,700 feet above the sea level. "Highland Inn," built for the accommodation of 100 people on a bluff overlooking Cache Lake, is a comfortable hotel set on one of the beauty spots of this charming reserve.

Modern plumbing, with bathrooms with hot and cold water, large, bright sleeping rooms, cosy lounging rooms with large bright open fire-places are a few of the special features. The Inn is also heated by furnace.

The months of October and November are ideal in this locality, and a sojourn there is recommended.

A Skewer of Frogs.

In the Paris Halles more than 4,000 pounds of frogs' legs are sold daily. They come mostly from the Vendee, where the soil is flat and swampy. Frogs are exported now in large numbers to London clubs and hotels, where they occasionally figure on the bill of fare as "nymphes en brochette." The best frogs fetch along about a dollar, more or less, for a skewer of ten. The new frog season closely follows the snail season, which finishes with May for the time being.—Argonaut.

THE WALKING CRAZE STILL CLINGS TO THESE JUVENILES

Two boys of about 15 or 16 years of age, whose homes are in Peterborough, are out seeing the world. They carry their baggage in their vest pockets and forsake the railways for shank's mare. They are seeing the world, a little bit of it at a time. This morning they saw Guelph, and were seen by the Guelph police, who ran them in, and when going through their pockets the authorities failed to find any bowie knives or bombs; they did not do any worse than take sixty cents out of their pocket money to pay the telephone tolls for a message to their parents in Peterborough. The parents answered that the boys were all right and were simply making a journey on foot to satisfy the adventurous spirits with which they were possessed. They were allowed to go on and see a little more of the world.

Verdi and the Critics.

No outsiders, not even members of the press, were allowed to be present at rehearsals of Verdi's operas. "A production of a work of mine," said Verdi, "is an affair between that work and the public. I do not write for the press, but for the public, who will support me if my work is good or who will execute me if it is not. I do not care for aught else." M. de Nevers thus describes Verdi's attitude at a dress rehearsal of "Otello" in Paris, when the press was present against his wishes:

"The critics were all placed in the corbeille of the amphitheater, some ten rows of stalls having been cleared away to make room for a table and chairs for Verdi, Boito and the directors. MM. Sardou, Meilhac, Halevy, Obin, the director of fine arts, and two or three dignitaries and officials of the opera sat behind in the remaining rows of stalls. Among the critics were MM. Reyer, Bruneau, Joncieres, Bellaigue, Pessard, Corneau and Sarcey. The foreign press was represented by M. de Blowitz and myself, and as Verdi came in all stood up, with hats off, and cheered the wonderful man. The orchestra joined, of course, in the ovation, and it was to the musicians that the master went, and, bowing his venerable head very low, he thanked them for the kind demonstration and shook hands with the nearest, but never once did he turn our way except for one moment, when he took us all in with a side glance—an ugly one—and then for the rest of the evening, some five hours, ignored our presence completely."

Whitey.

Instances are common enough where dogs and horses and even cats have been instrumental in saving human life, but this is the first instance in the writer's knowledge of such remarkable actions by a rat.

One of the two boys of a Danish family of four named Nelson living in southern Wisconsin was given a white rat, named Whitey, which became so contented that it never attempted to run away, notwithstanding that it was given the run of the house.

Before retiring one night the husband filled the bedroom stove with soft coal. At about 3 o'clock in the morning Mrs. Nelson was disturbed by something pulling and scratching at her hand and wrist and awoke to find the room filled with gas and Whitey squealing and jumping on the floor beside her. She was so nauseated and weak that she could do no more than roll off to the floor and crawl to the stairs. When attempting to descend she fell to the bottom, her head resting near the front door. The cold draft entering under the door finally roused her, and her screams for help brought the neighbors, who revived her husband.

Whitey died peacefully a year later, and a friend of the family diagnosed the case as one of gout.—Chicago Record-Herald.

Never Again.

"I took my wife fishing yesterday. But never again."

"What's the matter?"

"She insisted that I kill the minnows before I put them on my hook."—Detroit Free Press.

Father and Son.

Some years ago, when the custom of sending small boys up chimneys to sweep them was still in vogue, a well known sweep and his son started to work on a very tall chimney belonging to a mill. To reach the chimney it was necessary to crawl through a flue thirty feet long. The father covered the boy's face with a bag and sent him in. In a few minutes he called "Billy!" No answer. "Billy!" Still no answer. And he called again and again, but no voice replied, and at last he began to be frightened and said: "Oh, Lord, the poor boy is smothered! Whatever will his mother say?" At the same time he was using all the pious expressions he could think of. At this moment a voice was heard from the top of the chimney, "Feyther, feyther, mun I come down the lightning rod or mun I come down inside?" The father gasped for breath a moment, then shouted, "Come down, thou young imp, inside or out, and when I catch thee I'll break every bone in thy body!"—London Telegraph.

DISPATCHING TRAINS BY TELEPHONE

Winnipeg, Man., Sept. 22.—The adoption of the system of dispatching trains by telephone instead of telegraph on the Canadian Pacific Railroad has proved that fully 50 per cent more traffic can be handled by the former than by the latter.

In June of last year the company put in operation a telephone circuit between Montreal and Farnham, Que., and it proved satisfactory in every way. Since that the company has strung other telephone lines, and in western Canada to-day it has 531 miles.

It is the intention of the company at once to string a telephone line between Winnipeg and Brandon, 133 miles, and within a year it will have 1,000 miles of its system operated by telephone. The system is operated by telegraphers, who have their keys handy in case of emergency.

It is understood that the company will string 'phone wires from the Pacific to the Atlantic as rapidly as possible.

PEARY WOULDN'T HELP COOK REFUSED TO BRING RECORDS

Sportsman Wires Cook to Say That all the Records and Instruments are Cached Near Etah, Because Peary Declined to Transport Them.

New York, Sept. 27.—Commander Robert E. Peary refused absolutely to allow any of the records or instruments of Dr. Frederick A. Cook to be brought aboard the steamer Roosevelt, and was thus instrumental in causing these records to remain in a cache at Etah, Greenland, according to Harry Whitney, the New Haven sportsman, in a despatch received in this city by Dr. Cook yesterday.

Dr. Cook was questioned yesterday as to his view of the situation created by the action ascribed to Commander Peary, but he declined to say anything derogatory of his rival.

"It may be that the instruments will arrive this year after all," he said, "and as for the records and observations, their non-arrival here makes no difference whatever, as I have ample duplicates, so that there will be no delay in compiling my story with all its details."

Dr. Cook did not appear to be greatly perturbed by the news he had received from Mr. Whitney. He hopes to see him soon and hear a complete explanation of the occurrences at Etah.

Dr. Cook denied the report that he was to bring suit for slander against Peary. "There is no truth in the report," he said. "I have no intention of bringing suit. Naturally, I am taking measures to have everything in order in case of necessity; but I have never even thought of filing a suit, and I wish to contradict such reports at once."

If they are still at Etah, Dr. Cook's instruments may not arrive in New York until the spring months of 1910. There is a possibility, however, of their reaching here this year, as another vessel may have touched at Etah after the Roosevelt left.

On Saturday Cook wired Whitney, "You are at liberty to tell all you know."

Peary's Defence.

Portland, Me., Sept. 27.—It was learned from a source close to Commander Peary last night that the commander justifies his action of refusing to allow Dr. Cook's instruments, or records on board the homeward bound steamer Roosevelt on the theory that he had been aware for some time of Cook's intension to claim the discovery of the North Pole, and that Peary, therefore, would sanction nothing to aid this project.

Peary's forthcoming statement concerning Cook, it was also learned, will charge that the Brooklyn explorer cannot produce shoes, sledges or other equipment which will show the wear and tear that comes from traveling over the Arctic ice.

Cook May Bring Action.

New York, Sept. 27.—Dr. Frederick A. Cook contemplates the bringing of a suit against Commander Peary to recover damages for slander and defamation, according to friends of the Brooklyn explorer.

Dr. Cook himself had nothing to say Saturday regarding the proposed suit, but his secretary, Walter Lonsdale, admitted that the idea was seriously entertained both by Dr. Cook and by John R. Bradley, Cook's backer. He said that affidavits had already been prepared in case it was definitely decided to bring the suit.

"But certainly nothing will be done just at present in the matter," said Mr. Lonsdale, "and as a matter of fact it is doubtful if anything will ever be done unless it is in retaliation."

Abruzzi Congratulates.

New York, Sept. 27.—The Duke of Abruzzi, who led a notable Canadian Arctic expedition in 1900, on Saturday sent a message of congratulation to Commander Peary through The New York Times. The message was as follows: "Turin, Sept. 24, 1909. Commander R. E. Peary. May I congratulate you on the result of your expedition. Am very glad you have succeeded.—Abruzzi."

MUST ASSUME THE BURDEN

Brodeur Declares That Canada Must Help Britain

Montreal, Sept. 27.—When Hon. L. P. Brodeur arrived in Montreal Saturday morning, he made the following statement: "Personally I am of the opinion that we owe it to ourselves to defend our own territory. I believe we have reached a period of national development which no longer permits us to shirk this grave duty, and having received from Great Britain every liberty which goes to make a truly independent nation, it would be, in my opinion, quite unworthy of our country if we look any longer to the Mother Country for our exclusive protection." The Minister, who came up with Mrs. Brodeur on board the Lady Grey, was received at the Victoria wharf by a large crowd of friends, who cheered lustily as the Minister stepped once more on Canadian soil.

Hon. Mr. Brodeur said that when England granted responsible government to Canada there were people who thought it all up with the Empire, and even to-day, when the question of naval defence is on the tapis, the same kind of people are seized with mortal fear, but I have no hesitation in saying that the future will abundantly prove that the people of the Dominion will not only show the world that they know the art of self-government, but that if the time ever comes they will show their gratitude to the Mother Land in a very practical manner.

WANT WIRE COMPETITION

Cobalt, Sept. 27.—The business interests of the mining camp are preparing to send a formal petition to the C.P.R. Telegraph Co. within a few days asking for the extension of that company's line to Cobalt. The rates charges by the T. & N. O. Co. have led the business men of Cobalt to believe that the town would be the better for a little competition. The telegraphic business between Cobalt and the outside world probably exceeds that of any town of similar size in the world, and it must be a veritable mint for the T. & N. O. Co. at the prevailing rates.

The route proposed for the Cobalt extension is up the Quebec side of Lake Temiskaming to a point opposite the Montreal River and thence to the mining town over the power companies' right of way.

QUEBEC TEACHERS ARE PLEASED

Montreal, Sept. 26.—There is great rejoicing in educational circles in this province over news from Saskatchewan that the department of public instruction of that province will accept teachers from the Quebec Province normal schools, this action on the part of the western province being necessary in order to secure men and women capable of teaching both languages.

As there are a good many French-Canadian children in Saskatchewan, the Roman Catholic religious authorities have been endeavoring to secure the admission of Quebec teachers with the above result.

$13,000,000 ARE STILL UNCLAIMED

Rome, Italy, Sept. 27.—It is estimated that $2,000,000 in coin, $6,000,000 in bonds and other securities, and $1,000,000 worth of jewels recovered from the ruins of Messina are still unclaimed.

In addition to the foregoing there is a further deposit of 100 strong boxes and 4,000 sealed packages, known to contain valuables, which have not been opened, representing at least $4,000,000. This total of $13,000,000 does not include the treasures from the cathedral, churches and vaults of banks.

The valuables were simply excavated and were sometimes found clutched in the dead hands of unidentified men and women. The excavations will be commenced again on Oct. 1, when the unclaimed deposits will naturally increase.

As it is generally impossible for survivors to establish claims to the property, the state will benefit largely

WORK WILL BE DIVIDED

Montreal, Sept. 27.—There is great interest here in religious communities over a report that before the plenary council rises, they will promulgate a decree stipulating that certain religious communities will carry on educational work while others will confine themselves to hospital and other charitable work.

It may be remembered that the diocese of Halifax was stirred many years ago over the right to teach claimed by the "Sisters" being contested by the friends of the ladies of the Sacred Heart, supported very warmly by the then Archbishop Hannan.

URGES GOVERNMENT TO BUY WHEAT

St. Petersburg, Sept. 27.—Chairman Karyakin of the Douma agricultural committee, called upon Premier Stolypin Saturday evening to urge the Government to sustain the price of grain, which threatened to break heavily in consequence of the abundant harvest.

M. Karyakin asked that the Government make immediate purchase. He pointed out that large quantities of grain would be needed in the spring for the commissariat and for provisioning the northern regions where the harvest would be bad, and he suggested that the Government take over $50,000,000 worth. This plan had been previously approved at a conference of the members of the Bourse, the Government grain specialists and members of Parliament.

Premier Stolypin strongly opposed the scheme because, he said, the Government should not engage in trade, as it had no organization for this purpose. Finally, however, the Premier agreed to submit the matter to the Cabinet.

TRIAL OF ELECTION PETITION WAS COMMENCED THIS MORNING

Before Justices MacMahon and Magee at the Court House — Taking of Evidence Was at Once Proceeded With—Joseph Picard Was Called After Sheriff Hall Had Given Formal Testimony.

Before Justices McMahon and Magee, the trial of the election petition of J. H. Burnham against the return of J. R. Stratton to the House of Commons was commenced this morning at 11.30 o'clock at the court house. The petitioner, Mr. Burnham was Mr. Stratton's opponent at the election for the riding of West Peterborough for the Dominion House, held on the 26th of October, 1908. The main petition, that of Mr. Burnham against Mr. Stratton, is being proceeded with first. Mr. Stratton's cross-petition against Mr. Burnham will be taken up afterwards.

The court room was nearly filled with interested spectators when the trial commenced.

Messrs. DuVernet, K.C., and Jones, of Toronto, and Mr. W. H. Moore, K.C., of Peterborough, appeared for Mr. Burnham and Mr. Geo. K. Watson, K.C., of Toronto, and Mr. R. R. Hall, of Peterborough, are counsel for Mr. Stratton.

Mr. H. S. Wood, of Peterborough, has been appointed clerk of the court for the trial.

The trial will be followed with deep interest all over the province. Representatives of the Toronto Globe, World, News, Mail and Empire and Star were in attendance, in addition to the representatives of the local press.

Nearly five hundred witnesses have been summoned in connection with the main petition and the cross-petition.

Immediately after the formal opening of the court the taking of evidence was proceeded with.

Sheriff J. A. Hall was first called. He stated that he was the returning officer for West Peterborough for the election held last October, and, upon request, he produced certain papers in connection with the election. The official return showed that the total vote polled was 2,851 for Mr. Stratton, and 2,518 for Mr. Burnham, giving a majority for Mr. Stratton of 333. There were thirty-nine polling sub-divisions in the riding.

"Do I understand that the petitioner claims the seat?" asked Justice McMahon.

"No, certainly not," Mr. Watson put in hastily.

Justice McMahon announced that the main petition would be taken up first, and the cross-petition afterwards.

Sheriff Hall, in answer to a question from Mr. Watson, stated that the total number of voters on the list for the riding was 7,040.

"Can you say how the vote on October compares with that polled at previous elections?" asked Mr. DuVernet.

"I cannot say," was the answer.

JOSEPH PICARD.

Joseph Picard was called after Sheriff Hall, and was examined by Mr. DuVernet.

"You live in Peterborough," said Mr. DuVernet.

"Yes."

"Your occupation?"

"Clerk or salesman."

"By whom are you employed?"

"H. LeBrun & Co."

"I believe you are a supporter of Mr. Stratton?"

"Yes."

"Were you at the meeting at which he was nominated?"

"No."

Mr. DuVernet asked witness to describe the Liberal committee rooms on Simcoe street.

Mr. Picard said they were located in a building that was formerly used as a store, and were in a central part of the city. There were two flats, the downstairs was used for holding meetings and the upstairs apartment for committee rooms.

Witness said he was a member of a ward committee and his work was to go over a list of voters' names.

"That was your duty, was it?" Mr. DuVernet asked.

"It was not a duty; it was a pleasure," said the witness.

"Well, we won't squabble over terms," Mr. DuVernet remarked. "You were there doing something at any rate."

"Yes."

"Who were the leading workers there?"

Mr. Watson objected to the question in the form it was put.

"I suppose they were all workers?" Justice McMahon said and Mr. DuVernet proceeded with the examination of the witness.

In answer to suggestions of Mr. DuVernet, as to whom witness saw at the committee rooms, Mr. Picard mentioned the names of A. H. Stratton, Walter Davidson, R. H. Leary, J. P. Bryson, Jack O'Brien, Michael O'Brien, E. G. Cherry, Geo. E. Elliott, R. M. Glover and Wm. Taylor. He was not sure whether he had seen S. D. Hall, G. L. Hay, Hugh Darke, Stabler, Jesse Irvine, J. W. Boyers, Frank Fairen and Jas. Johnston.

Witness was at the committee rooms at night only, and had been there for a couple of weeks before the election. He gathered information and was at the rooms three or four nights a week.

"What committee were you attached to?"

"A ward committee."

"What ward?"

"Ward Two or Three, I don't know which."

Witness afterwards said that it was Ward No. Two.

Mr. Picard said he did his work alone.

"Who appointed you to the committee?" Mr. DuVernet asked.

"No one."

"Did you appoint yourself?"

"No."

"Did any one tell you to act on the committee?"

"No."

"It seems to be a self-appointed committee of one," Justice McMahon remarked.

WEALTHIEST WOMAN IN WORLD

MRS. E. H. HARRIMAN

New York, Sept. 27.—Edward H. Harriman's will has been filed for probate with the Surrogate of Orange county, at Goshen, N.Y. The entire estate, variously estimated at from $50,000,000 to $200,000,000, is bequeathed to the widow, Mrs. Mary Harriman, who is also named as executrix. The disposition of the colossal fortune caused no surprise, as it was generally believed Mrs. Harriman would fall heir to the property.

The filing of the instrument makes Mrs. Harriman one of the wealthiest women in the world. The property which she has inherited is thought to be valued at more than the estate which Russell Sage left to his widow.

LATE TICKS FROM WIRES

Charles Smith of Ottawa was drowned at Buckingham, Que.

There was a small fire in the executive offices of the White House, Washington, on Saturday.

M. R. Smith & Co.'s biscuit factory was destroyed by fire at Victoria, B.C., yesterday with a loss of $50,000.

Already 200 bodies of drowned persons have been recovered as a result of last week's storm in the southern states.

Ald. J. H. A. Beattie has announced his candidature for the London mayoralty. Ald. Ferguson and C. M. R. Graham are possible opponents.

Charles J. Bell, former governor of Vermont, died suddenly of heart failure, in a train in the Grand Central station at New York, as he was about to leave for Boston.

Mrs. Pankhurst, the English suffragist leader, will probably speak in Toronto on November 2. The date has not been finally settled, but it is to be in the first week of November.

Busy Gang of Burglars.

Windsor, Sept. 27.—Thirteen burglaries in three nights is the record of housebreakers who began their operations in Leamington last Monday and have since been working east through Ontario, with stops at Tilbury and Ridgetown.

The thirteenth on the list was at the home of Phil. Bowyer, member of the Ontario Legislature for one of the Kent ridings. All they got was a handful of cigars.

NEW YORK CELEBRATES; FIVE MILLION PERSONS AT HUDSON-FULTON PARADE

Replicas of Explorer's Vessel, the Half Moon, and Inventor's Steamboat; the Clermont, Lead Parade Around the Harbor.

New York, Sept. 27.—The boom of guns aboard the warships in the North River awoke New York Saturday morning to the first day of the celebration, long planned and long awaited, which honors the deeds of Henry Hudson and Robert Fulton. The river that Hudson found and where Fulton set his steamboat was the place toward which the eyes of five million persons turned for the most impressive pageant that ever floated in the New York harbor.

Business was comparatively at a standstill. The Stock Exchange was closed and many of the big mercantile establishments did not open. New York abandoned itself without reserve to the spirit of the day.

The day's first spectacle was the assembling of the naval pageant in the upper bay. Between 10 and 11 o'clock the squadron of four American cruisers and five submarines assigned to escort the Half Moon and the Clermont, met in the Kildon Kull between Staten Island and the New Jersey shore. The Clermont was towed from its night anchorage to Stapleton, Staten Island, to join the Half Moon, which had spent the night off St. George, Staten Island. Then, with the escort trailing to rear, the two little craft which epitomize the celebration cruised along the Brooklyn [illegible] the spectators that shore in sight of the [illegible] blackened every street and housetop in view.

Meanwhile the rest of the parade was assembling, and when the Half Moon and the Clermont finished their round of the upper bay and sailed into the mouth of the Hudson, they fell into line. The assembling of the 500 or more boats that followed Hudson's and Fulton's craft up the river occupied the whole morning, and it was not until after one o'clock that the mass straightened out into something like procession formation.

The two little ships, once so weighty with achievement before a marveling world, and now mere toys for an older and more sophisticated civilization, made their rounds of the warships assembled to do them honor, with a thousand merchant ships and pleasure craft trailing behind them in a parade 15 miles long; saluted the national and international flags of peace; were officially received by the city and the Hudson-Fulton commission, with other visiting notables.

Their progress was marred by but one accident—a slight collision early in the morning, by which the Clermont lost a little paint and the Half Moon an anchor chain.

It is estimated that at least five million people witnessed the display.

DR. ROCHE SAYS CHURCH IS BEING ROBBED IN THE WEST

Worker in Extension Movement Declares That Bogus Priests Are Being Sent Among Ruthenians in the West to Wean Them From Catholic Faith.

Toronto, Sept. 27.—From the steps of the altar of St. Ann's Church, Rev. Dr. J. T. Roche of Chicago, who is at present assisting in the production of The Catholic Register, and is a prominent worker in connection with the Catholic Church Extension Society, denounced Protestant missionary methods, particularly of the Presbyterian Church, in the prarie provinces among the Ruthenian settlers. Among other statements he made was a most emphatic one with regard to The Ranok, the Ruthenian paper published in Winnipeg, towards the support of which he claimed the Presbyterian Mission Board contributes. Dr. Roche stated that if the same statements appearing in The Ranok with respect to Roman Catholicism were printed in English the paper publishing them would be denied the mails.

In opening his address, Dr. Roche said that about seven weeks ago Father Canning and himself, visited Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta to investigate conditions. From Winnipeg they went to Sifton, the centre of one of the largest of the Ruthenian settlements. From that place they drove forty miles with a young priest who was ordained by the Ruthenian Church. The Ruthenian Church, he explained, was in communion with Rome, having the same ceremony, administering the same sacraments, and acknowledging the doctrine of the real presence, "which," he added, "has kept Christianity from falling back into paganism." He found the people true Catholics, many having suffered in their own country under the Czar and the Greek Church.

Agitators Bogus Priests.

In that forty-mile drive they saw half a dozen little churches, and the priest who accompanied them stated he was to no longer say Mass there. "Because," proceeded the speaker, "agitators have come into the country, bogus priests who have gone through some process of ordination, who worked on these people and raised the race cry by saying that the Catholic Church was trying to rob them of their race."

They found that amongst the people vile and villainous literature was being circulated. The Ranok, published at Winnipeg, and towards the support of which they had it over the signature of the president of the Presbyterian Mission Board funds were contributed, printed articles which, if they were reproduced in English in The Register, as he had intended, would render the paper liable to be denied the privilege of the mails. It was so indecent that the girls at the Catholic school refused to translate it for him. "This Ranok," he said, "as a vile, villainous indecent paper, published with the aid and support of the Presbyterian Home Missionary Society. I don't believe Presbyterians will stand for it, for among them are decent, law-abiding people."

The Catholic Church, however, had no intention of allowing her people to be taken away, and an active campaign would be carried out.

RESCUED EIGHT MEN

New York, Sept. 27.—Capt. Samuel W. Bartlett of the Arctic steamer Jeanie, now at Indian Harbor, Labradoor, has sent a wireless message to Secretary Bridgman of the Peary Arctic Club, saying:

"Rescued eight men belonging to the steamer Snowdrop last year at Frobisher. All well."

The despatch is confirmatory of reports already received. Chief interest in the presence of the Jeanie at Indian Harbor is centered in the fact that Harry Whitney, to whom Dr. Cook says he delivered part of his records and his instruments and related his story of reaching the Pole, is aboard.

AUTO TURNS TURTLE OCCUPANTS INJURED

Kingston, Ont., Sept. 27.—Traveling at a fast rate of speed, an automobile owned by Felix Benjamin of Yarker, upset near Cataraqui Saturday afternoon, and five occupants received serious injuries.

Mrs. Benjamin is now in Hotel Dieu with a compound fracture of the thigh and other injuries.

The rim of the wheel worked off and the tire blew up. The car turned a complete somersault. Mr. Benjamin received severe cuts on the face and hands, and his thigh and hip are badly bruised. Miss Benjamin escaped with a severe shaking up and bruises. Mrs. Connolly and daughter of Toronto, guests of Mrs. Benjamin, were also hurt. Mrs. Connolly had her right wrist sprained, and was badly bruised, and Miss Connolly suffered a wound over the left eye, and also injuries to the thigh and hip.

"O LORD, DON'T DISAPPOINT US"

West Duxbury, Mass., Sept. 27.—"O, Lord, don't disappoint us," prayed the Triune Immersionists at intervals during the meeting which they held throughout Friday night, but their prayers remained unanswered to-day, for the Lord had not appeared in person to them and the world was still intact.

A large proportion of the "elect" nevertheless remained firm in their conviction that the wicked would be destroyed by the peeling off of the earth's crust at sometime between 6 p.m. Friday and the same hour on Saturday.

Early Saturday the exhausted believers dispersed to various places nearby for rest and food.

RICH WOMAN ELOPES AT 64

New York, Sept. 27.—The handicap of sixty-four years mattered not to Miss Jeanette Suffern, oldest surviving descendant of one of the oldest families in the Ramapo Valley, when Robert Hiscock, twenty-three years old, proposed marriage.

At first Miss Suffern, who is worth $1,000,000, was undecided, fearing that her neighbors in Ridgewood, N. J., would crowd the Episcopal Church during the marriage ceremony and make unkind remarks. Hiscock suggested that they elope, so the pair drove to the office of Justice of the Peace John Keep in Paterson and were wedded. Then they returned to the Ridgewood home of the bride. Saturday the couple went to Suffern, N.Y., where the aged bride maintains another home. A long honeymoon trip also is planned. Miss Suffern had held herself aloof from the townspeople and has been called eccentric. She is noted for her gifts to charity.

NO STRIKE ON THE T. & N. O.

North Bay, Ont., Sept. 27.—Enquiry at the head office of the T. & N. O. Railway here elicited the statement that the report that twenty-five employes of the railway at Cobalt station had left their work in sympathetic strike, protesting against the appointment of a new agent there, was an error, and had its origin from the fact that five employes of the station staff failed to report for duty one morning recently, but from an entirely different reason. They returned to work next day. The present agent, Mr. Herbert, is ill in bed, threatened with typhoid fever.

Andy Lubice, aged 15, of Matheson, has been missing for several days.

E. W. Kiser, a prospector, is alleged to have been seen at North Bay, accompanied by a boy, and the police are searching for him.

CREW MURDERED BY MORO PIRATES

Manila, Sept. 27.—Official despatches from southern ports say it is rumored that the revenue cutter Sora has been captured by Moro pirates and the crew murdered. The authorities have been unable to secure confirmation of the rumor, although despatches have been sent to all adjacent points.

The Sora was used as a patrol boat against the Moro pirates of the Southern Archipelago in the general campaign against smuggling inaugurated by the insular government a short time ago. It was commanded by Capt. E. A. McGorty and carried a crew of fourteen, all Filipinos.

PLANS OF THE LABOR PARTY

Bristol, Sept. 27.—James Kier Hardie, member of Parliament for Merthyr-Tydvil, outlining the policy of the Laborites in the general election, said on Saturday that he believed the Liberals would emerge from the conflict with a working majority.

The Laborites, he said, were confident of increased strength in the House of Commons, from 54 members to between 65 and 70, although supporting the budget.

They will follow their usual course in the election running a Laborite wherever they think they have a chance of defeating either or both of the opposing political parties.

SPANISH TROOPS ARE ADVANCING

Larestinga, Morocco, Sept. 27.—Gen. Orozco's division advanced Saturday in the direction of Selouan, using a captive balloon to direct the movements.

The Moorish villages were set on fire by the advancing troops.

Heavy resistance was encountered at several points, but the Spanish displayed great gallantry and keeping the Moors under a rain of shells from the batteries, drove the enemy steadily back with considerable loss.

Where Women Vote.

Greenwich, Conn., Sept. 27.—Forty women appeared before the registrars of voters and board of select men here Saturday and qualified for suffrage privileges in the coming school election.

Miss Belle Mead, a settlement worker, has been named by the [illegible] organised Greenwich Equal [illegible] League as a candidate for [illegible] on the board.

THE CRY FOR YELLOW HELP

The Mail and Empire.

Mr. Collingwood Schreiber is reported to have said that the mountain section of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway will be many years in building unless the contractors are able to get other than white labourers. White men he says, want pay in excess of what the contractors can afford to give them. Doubtless the same point might be made in respect to the raw materials and supplies contractors must use in the construction of the road. Like wages, commodities of all kinds have of late risen greatly in market value. Why is it not protested in behalf of the contractors that because of the advance in the prices of things named in the specifications they should be allowed to use substitutes?

Apparently the reason is that there happens to be no "yellow" cement, or stone, or steel or machinery. But there is "yellow" labour, labour that will work for wages on which the white man of superior civilization and efficiency could not keep himself, not to mention keeping his family. If the contractors find they have undertaken to build sections of the Grand Trunk Pacific for amounts so low as to preclude the payment of current wages, and are therefore unable to afford white labour, they should ask to be released from their contracts. Men who undertake great contracts for construction at a price below the ascertainable cost must be lacking in business capacity, and must expect to suffer the fate that usually overtakes bad managers. If the Dominion Government can find contractors to build the Eastern Division of the National Transcontinental line by white labour, there is no reason why contractors should not be found to build the Grand Trunk Pacific's division of that line by white labour. Mr. Collingwood Schreiber says white men will not stay on the British Columbia section of the work. We should suppose that if white men can be induced to stay on the Winnipeg-Lake Superior Junction section they can be induced to stay on the mountain section, for the piece of road from Winnipeg eastward is not naturally more attractive to workers than the mountain section. As a matter of fact, white men have been obtainable for the building of the first hundred miles from the Pacific. What reason is there to suppose either that they cannot be obtained or cannot be afforded for the building of the remainder of the mountain stretch of the road? In the agreement between the Government and the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway Company provision is made for the company's preferential employment of our own people on the work.

Further, Asiatic labour is practically barred from Canada by a head tax of $500 on Chinese and by an understanding with Japan. Knowledge of these two facts leaves the Grand Trunk Pacific without excuse for counting on yellow labour on the working force of its construction contractors, and it likewise leaves the latter without excuse for estimating at too low a figure the cost of the labour element of its undertakings. And it would be in the highest degree regrettable if work that should go to the labour that makes its home in Canada were to be given to Chinese or Japanese coolies. Canadian workers have surely some claim to consideration at the hands of a corporation in whose behalf Canadian public credit is so heavily pledged.

THE SPREAD OF COLLECTIVISM

"Seemingly correlate with the decay of Monarchism," continues Dr. Dillon, "is the spread of Socialism, collectivism, or, say, of that regime which transfers to the community continuous power over the individual, subordinating his interests to its own. And this new social force must be reckoned with in any forecast of the future, social or political. It is impossible, for instance, to blink the fact that in this country we have already accepted the principle of State Socialism, which it will be the duty of every succeeding Government to maintain and develop. In Russia the same principle flourished even when autocracy was at its height, for the two things, though apparently conflicting, go together quite harmoniously.

"In Germany we have for years had an opportunity of witnessing the same phenomenon. France, the most conservative nation in Europe, is governed to-day by a Cabinet presided over by the Socialist, Aristide Briand, and composed of Radicals and Socialists. In Sweden the population awoke a couple of weeks ago to the astonishing fact that the Socialists had silently and insensibly gained a firm hold of the most powerful elements of the nation, and the masterful way in which the 'general' strike has been organized and partially carried out is a revelation alike to Swedes and foreigners. But the new independent realm of Norway is ahead of all Scandinavia on the way to collectivism and all that that principle involves."—Public Opinion, England.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The Presbyterian Church, through Dr. McLaren, has imported thirty-seven ministers from Great Britain for North-West Missions. Has the church lost its lure for young men? Has commercialism captured the Canadian people and blinded them to the dignity and honour that were once attached to the ministry?—Kingston Whig.

It is proposed to have a Back to Ireland excursion or excursion season, and the idea is taking. When a million of Irishmen get back to the soil of their fathers, and take in its scenic beauty and fresh air they will want to stay there and shout "Ireland for the Irish." It will be like bottling up the honey that will never lose its sweetness.—The Kingston Whig.

"I know there is an element among employers of labour and investors of capital which is utterly opposed to the organization of labour. I cannot sympathize with this element in the slightest degree. I think the employer who declines to deal with organized labour and to recognize it as a proper element in the settlement of wage controversies is behind the times. Of course, when organized labour permits itself to sympathize with violent methods it is not entitled to our sympathy."—President Taft.

Sir Spencer Pocklington Maryon Maryon-Wilson, of Eastbourn, Sussex, England, is a gentleman who considers himself considerable pumpkin. He has sent a circular to his tenantry, the poor common slaves, informing them that when writing him they should address him as Sir Baronet and not Dear Sir. The noble Sir Spencer Pock, etc., still has it a trifle off color. The really correct manner of addressing him would be Dear Sir Chump.—Bobcaygeon Independent.

"We are entering now upon an era of prosperity which I hope will be long continued. But this prospect of prosperity must not blind us to the necessity for carrying out certain great reforms advocated by Mr. Roosevelt, recommended in the Republican party platform, which I believe are needed to prevent a return to the abuses which all men recognize the evil of in our previous business methods and the management of our great corporations. I expect to consider these questions more at length at another stage in my journey as I do also the character of the tariff bill which has been adopted and which has been subjected to much criticism.—President Taft.

TUMOR OF YEARS GROWTH

Removed by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Winnipeg, Man.—"Eleven years ago I went to the Victoria Hospital, Montreal, suffering with a growth in the uterus. The doctors said it was a tumor, and could not be removed, as it would cause instant death. They found that other organs were affected and said I could not live more than six months in the condition I was in. After I came home I saw your advertisement in the paper and commenced taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I took it constantly for two years, and still take it at times, and both my husband and myself claim that it was the means of saving my life. I highly recommend it to suffering women."—Mrs. ORILLA BRADLEY, 284 Johnson Ave., Winnipeg, Manitoba.

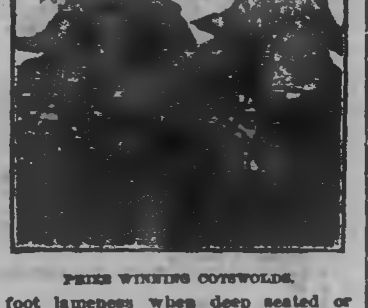
One of the greatest triumphs of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the conquering of woman's dread enemy—tumor. If you have mysterious pains, inflammation, ulceration or displacement, don't wait for time to confirm your fears and go through the horrors of a hospital operation, but try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at once.

For thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ills.

SUCCESS WITH SHEEP.

Some Points on the Management of the Flock in Summer.

A man should see his sheep at least once every day. There are so many little things that will come up, things that need not worry him at all if he will but take them in time, like finding an old ewe on her back in a hollow, or an udder with too much milk therein, or a lamb with maggots, or the beginning of scours in the lambs (which is one of the signs of stomach worms), or a sheep going lame, the sure sign of trouble and to be attended to on the spot. The best thing to treat foot lameness when deep seated or when the sheep is to be treated in the field is butyrin of antimony. It is very sure and quick, which is the essential of a good remedy for this disease.



PRIZE WINNING COTSWOLDS.

Salt is necessary for sheep, and they should have plenty of it. If the flock is on pasture liable to cause bloat mix salt with air slaked lime, a little more lime than salt. They will eat it, and it seems to act favorably on the stomach and prevents bloat. Tobacco stems should at all times be kept before the flock. A good way to get the sheep to eating much tobacco is to dip the stems in weak brine and give no additional salt.

Now and then there will reappear within your flock that old and terrible disorder called foot rot. We have succeeded in eradicating it from our flock by causing the sheep to pass every day through a trough in which there was a solution of blue vitriol, water and quicklime. After we had seen no more of the disease for some time we left off using the vitriol and used simply the lime, making a thick whitewash. This destroys all germs that are of recent lodging, and when once the sheep are well and kept off the infected ground sufficient time for the germs in the soil to perish you will never again see the disease in your flock unless you bring to it a diseased sheep or allow them to trespass upon infected soil.

We do not find it necessary to feed grain to ewes on grass or green foods. We do find it profitable to feed grain to the lambs when we wish to market them fat in the early summer. We have found pumpkins a great help in feeding the flock in the fall. There is a great deal of nutriment in the pumpkin, and, besides this, the seeds themselves are stored with nutriment and are also quite efficient vermifuges, so that one will undoubtedly effect a considerable increase in the health of his flock by feeding liberally of pumpkins. In our practice we do not remove the seeds, but haul the entire pumpkins to the pasture in large quantities, letting the sheep gnaw their way into them as best they can. They will in this way eat the pumpkins clean, while if they were broken the seeds would all be eaten first and perhaps the flesh left to decay.—Joseph E. Wing in Breeder's Gazette, Chicago.

THE SWINEHERD

Lice will worry off flesh about as fast as you can put it on your hogs. Kerosene emulsion is good for a wash. But clean the pen out from one end to the other. If you don't, back the lice will come worse than ever.

Preventing Hog Ills.

It is more easy to prevent disease in animals than it is to cure. Hog cholera prevails more or less in all sections of the country, but in the majority of cases it is due more to the condition of herds and mismanagement in feeding than to any other cause. Hogs must have green or bulky food, also salt and charcoal. These substances are not in a direct way preventives of cholera, but they keep the animals in a more thrifty condition and render them less liable to disease.

Cement Feeding Floors.

If corn stays anywhere near its present price it is expensive to feed and very little should be wasted. The cement feeding floor is a convenience and a necessity. In very soft weather hogs will often root up their lot, but a cement floored pen will put a stop to it all. These floors can be made under shelter or out in the open, at the option or convenience of the feeder. A long house with a feeding floor in one end and a bedding department in the other is preferable.

Paralysis in Swine.

This affection most often follows overfeeding of rich nitrogenous foods to animals that are closely confined. Pigs do best when allowed a considerable range and not fed too highly. As this affection involves the spinal cord it is not only liable to prove fatal, but is not, as a rule, satisfactorily treated. First remove the cause. Cut down feed and allow plenty of range, and if not fed too liberally they will forage about and get exercise. Young pigs only partially paralyzed will often come right treated as above advised. Old animals will not often respond to any form of treatment.

CANADIAN NORTHERN
HUNTERS
Something About Moose and Deer
It is now pretty well known among hunters that the best deer hunting country in Ontario is on the line of the Canadian Northern Ontario and that hunters receive special attention. Mr. C. Price Green, Passenger Agent of the line is a hunter himself who goes right with the parties and looks after them, in fact he located most of them. This year the line will be opened north of Sellwood into the midst of the Moose Country, they are reported very thick, the Engineers say that they have never seen anything like it, the Moose season up there opens October 15th, fifteen days before the Deer. We have something special on a new place that will take three parties of deer hunters.

FOR THE LADY WHO CALLS

The lady who has a large circle of acquaintances always finds it a difficult matter to keep track of the reception days of her friends and often mistakes are made, that might have been avoided if care were taken to make a record of such days. And then there are the teas, at homes, and parties to be remembered too and when a hostess is planning an affair, she is always worried lest she overlook some one who has extended hospitality to her some time previous. To avoid these mistakes, a social register has been issued by the Review, that will be a boon to the busy lady. There are pages for each day of the month on which the record of the calls received and paid with the address of the visitor appear, then there are pages for social engagements, visits paid, addresses and memoranda, all of which prove very valuable data to have. These books are on sale at all the book stores and at the Review Office for 50 cents and there has already been a good demand for them.

TRIAL OF JOSEPH HUNTER WAS COMMENCED THIS MORNING

Special to the Review.

Lindsay, Sept. 27.—Interest in the case of Joseph Hunter, charged with having murdered his wife at Bobcaygeon, August 8th, was increased this morning when it was made known that G. T. Blackstock, K.C., would appear for the Crown and E. F. B. Johnston along with Messrs. Stewart & O'Connor for defence. The trial commenced this afternoon before Justice Clute and the court room was crowded. Two noted provincial detectives are also in attendance. Hunter is still rather recluse and apparently is not worrying over his position to any great extent.

B. C. LABOUR MEN CLASH OVER ORIENTAL IMMIGRATION, WITH SIR WILFRID LAURIER

The Labour Men Indignant at the Twists and Tricks of the Premier—The Whole Question in a Nutshell—Government Has to be Watched—Lemieux Act Condemned

Vancouver, Sept. 24.—Recently the Labor Council passed a strongly-worded resolution protesting against any arrangement being made for the importation of Oriental labor for the more rapid completion of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway. This resolution was based upon a newspaper report from Ottawa which quoted Mr. Collingwood Schreiber on the labor difficulties east of Prince Rupert and a later dispatch which alleged that President C. M. Hays of the Grand Trunk Pacific had talked over the question with Premier Laurier. The Trades Council in an outspoken way, demanded that no arrangement be made that would permit the importation of Oriental railway workmen.

LANGUAGE OFFENSIVE.

R. P. Pettipiece, secretary of the Trades Council, received the following reply from Sir Wilfrid.

"Quite disregarding the offensive language, I beg to inform you that no request has been made to this government by anybody for the importation of Asiatic labor."

Thereupon quoth Mr. Pettipiece; "We are not concerned in the least whether Sir Wilfrid thinks the language of our telegram was offensive or not. We expressed our sentiments in as straightforward and picturesque a manner as we could and then we stopped. I think the Premier sidesteps the issue when he says that no request has yet been made. We do not care anything about quibbles; what we wish to do is to demand that the government do nothing that will allow the entrance of cheap Oriental labor."

WHAT OFFENDED SIR WILF.

The message which brought the above reply was as follows;

"The Vancouver Trades and Labor Council, representing over 6,000 locally affiliated members of organized labor, and voicing the emphatic conviction of every wage-earner in Western Canada, in regular meeting assembled to-night, desiring to notify your government that we will not peacefully stand for the proposed further wholesale importation of Oriental labor into this province at the behest of merciless profit-seeking railway contractors. If the working conditions were made fit for animals, there are lots available jobless men in Canada. We demand fulfilment of election promises such as will disprove that government is but the executive committee for corporate interests. Better no G. T. P. than to add to the huge non-voting Oriental population which already controls the fishing and lumbering resources of this province. Further importations will aggravate a serious menace. We refuse to be reduced to an Oriental standard of living. Answer."

• • •

Quebec, Sept. 24.—Drastic resolutions were passed at this morning's session of the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada. It was decided to ask the Dominion Government to abolish the alien labor law, on the ground that it was useless in its present form. The Lemieux Trades and Disputes Act was given a black eye, being characterised by British Columbia delegates as one of the most mischievous pieces of alleged labor legislation that has ever been adopted in any country.

• • •

The visit of Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux, Postmaster-General to the Mikado, relative to Oriental immigration and his alleged agreement, was said to be a complete farce, as hordes of coolies and other undesirables were pouring into British Columbia daily.

Delegate McGee, Vancouver, declared that Japanese immigrants had doubled since the Lemieux agreement. The said Oriental immigrants had already ruined the Cooks' and Waiters' and Tailors' Unions in British Columbia and had practically secured control of the fishing industry. He said there were 800 miles of border with only two immigration offices, and that hundreds of Orientals came through of whom no record could be had. The resolution was finally adopted.

MISSIONARY DISCOURSES

Rev. E. W. Morgan Preached at St. James Church Yesterday

Rev. E. W. Morgan, B.A., missionary on furlough from Chentu, China, preached two impressive missionary sermons in St. James' church yesterday. In the morning from the text Romans 1, 14, Mr. Morgan dealt with individual missionary responsibility as measured by the need of our ability to supply the need, making special reference to the field occupied by the Methodist church in West China.

In his evening discourse Mr. Morgan very comprehensively outlined the medical, press, educational and evangelistic work now done by the missionaries and told of the gracious revival given in the Renshon convention last June and now in progress through out the mission field. The congregation responded very liberally to the appeal for support for the work.

WAS KNOCKED DOWN BY HORSE

Little Boy Hurt on George Street in Front of Light and Power Office

About ten minutes after 12 to-day a little boy was knocked down by a horse and buggy on George street in front of the office of the Light and Power Company.

He did not appear to be hurt at all at first and walked to the edge of the sidewalk. He complained of pain, however, and was helped into the buggy and removed to his home, which he stated was on Harvey st. The boy's name was not learned.

Boy Murdered.

New York, Sept. 27—John McGrath, a 17-year-old errand boy, was shot and killed late Saturday night on the sidewalk in front of his home while he stood talking with two school girls, who live in an adjoining apartment house. His murderer, Vincent Stabill, resented the young girls' friendship with McGrath, shot the lad from behind, then turned and ran up a nearby stairway to the roof of an apartment house, where he was arrested.

Boy's Leg Cut Off.

Toronto, Sept. 27.—While selling papers at King and Niagara streets at nine o'clock Saturday night, Alec. McKenzie, aged 10, of 55 Tecumseh street, was run over by a King street car and his right leg was severed.

His explanation is that he thought the car was going to stop. He went in front of it in order to get on the open side of the car to cry his papers. It did not stop, and he was knocked down, falling under the wheels.

Wanted For $180,000 Theft.

Vancouver, B.C., Sept. 27.—Accused of having robbed the Postoffice Department of Finland of $180,000, Johan Vaasara, Russian, aged 40, was captured by the provincial police of Prince Rupert and brought here.

Arrangements are being made for establishing the first electric smelter plant in Canada.

SENSE OF DIRECTION.

How Bees Are Able to Find Their Way to the Hive.

The directive sense which is possessed by bees is the object of researches made by M. Gaston Bonnier of Paris, and he seems to prove that bees possess a special sense like that of carrier pigeons.

Bees can fly for two miles from the hive and are then able to return after gathering their supply of honey. Langstroth and others suppose that vision comes into play and that bees can see a great distance and can also note objects on the way so as to find their path. Others, with Dadent, suppose that the bees are guided by the sense of smell and that they can smell flowers at one and a half miles.

The author makes experiments to prove that bees can return to the hive without using either sight or odor. As to sight, he takes bees to a distance of one or two miles from the hive in a closed box. They always fly back to the hive when released. The same is true when their eyes are covered, so that sight is not essential. As regards odor, experiments seem to prove that bees perceive odors at only short distances. When a needle dipped in ether is brought near the head of the bee it shows signs of perceiving the odor, but not so when the needle is placed back of him or near other organs.

Besides, when the organs of smell (antennae) are removed entirely the bees will return to the hive. M. Bonnier makes the following experiment: At 600 feet from the hive he places a supply of syrup, and the bees soon find it, proceeding to and fro to the hive. Such bees he marks with green-colored powder. He then places a second supply of syrup at the same distance from the hive, but spaced at 20 feet from the former. Other bees are now engaged in the to and fro movement to this point, but these are not the same individuals as the green-marked bees, who are still working on the first supply, and he marks these in red.

We thus have two distinct sets of bees, and we see that they can distinguish two directions which form a very acute angle. We seem to have here a special directive sense which does not reside in the antennae, but probably in the cerebroid ganglia. Other facts may be cited in evidence of the directive sense of bees.

THE PLUSH COAT.

Sarah Jane Was Told the True Reason She Couldn't Get It.

Fifteen years ago the community of Wigglesquack Centre was startled by the report that Eben Crabshaw was going to buy his wife a plush coat. Eben didn't deny the rumor, and Sarah Jane, his wife, contented herself with replying to all queries that where there was so much smoke she guessed there must be some fire. Jared Minthorn, who kept the general store, was much exercised, and wanted to take the order, but Eben said he guessed he'd select it from the catalogue of the mail order house, which caused considerable hard feeling between Eben and Jared.

As the years went by and Sarah Jane didnt' get her plush coat, the storekeeper began to get skeptical. After ten years had elapsed he became facetious, and the thirteenth year he began to taunt her. "I hain't seen that there plush coat yit, Sar' Jane," he said.

Sarah Jane went home and told Eben, and Eben was so wrought up that he determined to trade with Harvey Stockpole over at Burnt Meadows, although Burnt Meadows was three miles farther away.

But the legend of the plush coat had penetrated even to Burnt Meadows, and after a couple of years had elapsed Harvey Stackpole said to Sarah Jane one day, "How about that there plush coat Eben's a-goin' to get you?"

But this time Sarah Jane was primed. Eben had tutored her. Drawing herself up proudly, she replied:

"Mr. Stackpole, ef you knowed as much about furs as you do about mixin' sand an' sugar you'd know that the United States Gov'ment has been compelled to perfect the species from foreign invasion, that the animal is rapidly becomin' extinct and that there ain't no more plushes bein' killed!"

She Consulted a Clock.

Girls are not noted for being strong on figures, and one of them was relating recently the mental maze into which she was introduced as the result of asking a perfectly innocent question. She was going downtown on the car one afternoon and queried the conductor as to the time. He withdrew his alarm clock of a watch from a capacious pocket, observed the dial with the care used by a mariner in taking an observation with the sextant and then remarked in a portentous tone, "It lacks three seconds of being 2:48." The poor girl was so overwhelmed with the mass of material for a short exercise in oral arithmetic that she waited until she got downtown before trying to find out really what time it was, and then she consulted a big clock, where she had plenty of time to see just where each hand was.

Sorry She Screamed.

The young man kissed her, and she screamed.

"What's the trouble, Kitty?" demanded a stern voice from upstairs.

"I—I just saw a mouse," she fibbed.

Presently the young man claimed another kiss, and the scream was repeated. Again came the stern voice:

"What is it this time?"

"I just saw another mouse."

Then the old man came down with the house cat, a mouse trap and a can and sat in a corner to watch developments.

THAT WATCH OF YOURS

Is in many respects similar to a railway engine. Let an engine be run without oil or cleaning and before long it will stop dead. Upon examination it will be found that the friction and wear and tear has ruined the machinery, and it is fit only for the scrap iron heap. Likewise your watch. You put it in your pocket, and while there is a tick in it, you, in your mistaken economy, do not consult the watchmaker, and consequently rob your watch of years of good service and also much of its former accuracy. The time-keeping qualities of a good watch are maintained and often improved by timely and skilful attention. If you have been one of the neglectful ones call around and see us.

Barrie Picture Man Brings Suit on Moving Picture Machine Purchase

A man by the name of Cooper, a picture show proprietor in Barrie, is suing Mr. W. A. Edwards, of the Crystal in connection with the sale of an Edison moving picture machine. He also claims $100 damages.

Mr. Edwards sold the machine, which was used by the Crystal Amusement Company in the Opera House, Port Hope, to Mr. Cooper at a very reasonable figure. He states Cooper saw the machine in operation and was apparently pleased with the pictures it produced.

Mr. Edwards thinks that inefficient operators have been handling the machine and put it out of gear, hence the dissatisfaction of Mr. Cooper.

BEAVER GETTING VERY PLENTIFUL

May Prove Source of Revenue to Province

Toronto, Sept. 27.—The rapid increase of the beaver in Algonquin Park, as a result of the protection that is afforded them has suggested a new source of revenue for the province. Mr. Thomas Southworth, former Director of Colonization, thinks that the superintendent of Algonquin Park and his gang of rangers might be allowed to kill off a number near equal to the increase each year. The beaver, he points out, is not a game animal, and is only useful for its fur and as an instructor in engineering.

A sum of $30,000 to $40,000 could easily be obtained yearly from this source without exterminating the beaver, and this would provide a fund for park purposes much needed, said Mr. Southworth.

The park staff, he declared, could be entrusted with this work, as they were an intelligent, earnest and honest body of men.

BILL BAILEY AT TORONTO

Made an Unsuccessful Attempt to Win Dunlop Bicycle Race on Saturday

To-day's Mail and Empire has the following to say of Bill Bailey's unsuccessful attempt to win the Dunlop bicycle race at Toronto, Saturday:

It was a close finish for first place. Kingbul was being closely pressed by Egan and he in turn by the others. One of the most interesting sights of the race was W. A. Bailey, of Peterborough, a whiskered and bespectacled man of forty years. He said he had ridden in from Oshawa and rented another wheel for the race. Although he finished away behind, several others were in his rear. He stuck in 11th place until the van reached the Half-way House returning to the Beach.

SUNDAY SCHOOL RALLY DAY AT MARK STREET

Large Congregations at Both Services—Deaconess Spoke in the Morning

Yesterday was Sunday School Rally day at Mark street Methodist church, and both morning and evening services were attended by large congregations. In the morning a responsive service was held, the Sunday school scholars filling the centre pews of the church. This was followed by an address by Miss E. Elliott, a deaconess from Fort William. Miss Elliott gave an interesting talk on the work of the Deaconess Order. She described a deaconess as a woman who was giving her services to the church. Often she has duties to perform that are not adapted for a man. The first deaconess mentioned in the Bible is in Romans 15th, where it tells of a deaconess being sent to Rome. The distinctive garb worn by the members of the order is found to be a great protection, and none have ever been interfered with while dressed in the prescribed dress.

The becoming a deaconess is woman's voluntary contribution to the church work. There is no salary in connection with it, but there is an allowance, just sufficient for the deaconess' needs. Miss Elliott said emphatically that the deaconess' work was not a fad, but a distinct branch of the work, and a long-felt want. It began as a grain of mustard seed, but the order now numbers over 7,000. The meaning of the name deaconess is "help," found in the 2nd chapter of Genesis, where woman is termed "help."

Miss Elliott concluded by relating a number of her own and others' experiences in the work.

Mr Gibbons, lately from Woodstock, where he was prominently connected with Sunday School work, also addressed the scholars, endeavoring in a clear and simple way to impress the thought on their minds, "What am I going to do for Jesus this year?"

Special music was given at both services, the evening service opening with a half hour of song.

AXLE BROKE AT BURKETON

Early Morning C.P.R. Train Met With Mishap Saturday and Was Delayed

The early morning train on the Canadian Pacific Railway met with an accident Saturday and did not reach Toronto until three o'clock in the afternoon.

The delay was caused by the breaking of the axle of the tender close to Burketon Junction. The accident occurred about 5.30 a.m., and the tender, leaving the tracks, tore up the sleepers for some distance until the engine was stopped. The engine and cars fortunately kept the tracks, and beyond a slight shaking up the passengers were in no way injured.

The train was going slow at the point, and the moment the accident occurred the brakes were applied. The lines were at once blocked by signal, and an auxiliary from Havelock was soon on the spot and the work of clearing the track and replacing the broken sleepers was carried out with as much speed as possible.

P.C.I. EASY WINNERS IN FIRST CITY LEAGUE GAME

Defeated Rough Riders by 21-1 at Riverside Saturday Afternoon—Winners Had the Better of the Play Throughout the Game.

Before a small but enthusiastic number of spectators, the Collegiates defeated the Rough Riders by the score of 21—1 at Riverside Park on Saturday afternoon in the first game in the Junior City Rugby League. The winners had the better of the play and gave every indication of becoming a clever aggregation of pig-skin chasers. Considering the small amount of practice either team has had, and also of it being the first game played this season, the players and particularly those of the P.C.I., did splendid work, and the fans went away thoroughly pleased with the afternoon's programme. The Rough Riders looked good during the warming up period, their weight standing out in striking contrast to that of their lighter opponents, but it could be readily seen in the early stages of the game that this advantage would avail them but very little as they lost ground on almost every scrimmage.

For the winners Richardson at centre half, played the most effective game, and he was well supported by Burritt and Gibson. Geale at quarter, performed creditably and the scrimmage and wing men were too big a proposition for their opponents.

Fortye at centre half for the Rough Riders, worked hard and made some dangerous looking runs, but he was a marked man, as the opposing wing men were always laying for him. Jimmie O'Brien although it was his first game, surprised himself and the rooters, by his work on different occasions.

In the first quarter the Collegiates had the better of the argument but both sides lost ground by offsides. The students looked good to score, but the Rough Riders were saved by the whistle for the end.

Richardson made the first touch in the second quarter, but Matthews failed on the converting end. The Rough Riders made their first and only point in this period by a kick over the dead line. Score 5—1.

In the third quarter the Collegiates made the score look big by a safety touch, a convert and a rouge, they having things pretty much their own way. Score 14—1.

Richardson made his second touchdown of the game in the last quarter and Geale converted. Another rouge gave the P.C.I. team another point, and the last one of the game. Score 21—1.

FAST FRIENDS FOR YEARS ARE RIVALS FOR A WALK

Rivals, but rare good friends, are De Wolf Hopper and Digby Bell. For many years they "chummed" it, playing in the same company, with Hopper as the star and Bell as his chief support.

But time brings many changes.

This week the turning of the theatrical wheel brings the friends to Toronto as rivals—one on each side of the big theatre war.

It's like a game of chess between the Shuberts and the Klaw and Erlanger forces, with De Wolf Hopper and Digby Bell as the men on the board, moved about as the master players see fit.

Hopper and Bell were last seen in Toronto together in "Mr. Pickwick," with the former as the fat philosopher and the latter as the inimitable Sam Weller.

Curiously enough, it is another Dickensonian role in which Digby Bell returns to Toronto, and there are no better men in the business when it comes to putting Dickens across the footlights.

Mr. Bell and his company were the guests of De Wolf Hopper at the Princess matinee on Wednesday and on Thursday afternoon Mr. Hopper and his leading players sat in a box at the Royal Alexandra as the guests of Mr. Bell.

Each enjoyed the other's performance, and said so when they met afterwards.

And they couldn't help remarking that it was a curious coincidence that two old comrades should be sent to Toronto for the same week and pitted against each other as rival attractions.

Incidentally it might be mentioned that each star has a big following in this city, and as both houses drew good business—many people going to see both their old favorites.

SHOWING OF ATHLETICS DUE TO COLLINS' WORK

The recent series of games between the Detroit and the Philadelphia teams in the Quaker City was unquestionably the most sensational in the history of baseball. The exciting race between these clubs for the American League pennant has stirred up the whole country. The four games played between the Tigers and the Athletics drew 117,208 paid admissions, which is a record breaker. The biggest attendance at any of the games was on last Saturday when 35,409 people were registered. This is the biggest paid crowd in the history of the sport in America. The lowest attendance at any of the games of the series was 24,710. Philadelphia was surely baseball mad while feeling ran pretty high. Hundreds of policemen swarmed the ball grounds in anticipation of an outbreak, it being charged against some of the Detroit players, particularly Cobb, that they had deliberately spiked Philadelphia men during the series in Detroit. Monday Cobb severely spiked Barry, the shortstop of the Athletics, while the Detroiter was sliding to second, but there was no demonstration as the crowd realised that it was purely an accident.

The player who has been responsible for bringing the Athletics to the front this season above any other, is Eddie Collins. Eddie is the hero of the baseball season. He was not regarded as anything more than a mediocre player up to this year, but this season he has shown himself to be a star of the first magnitude. His all-around work has not been surpassed by any other player in the country. He is now having a hot race with Ty. Cobb for the batting championship of the American League, the two running a neck-and-neck race. Collins is a former Columbia University boy and was secured by Connie Mack two years ago. He graced the bench during the whole of the season in 1907. Eddie is still a youngster and is a popular player. He has a splendid diamond career in prospect.

YOUNG BOYS SHOULDN'T RUN LONG DISTANCE RACES

An interesting article on distance running is contributed by Frank W. White, M.D., Professor Physical Education, Temple University, Philadelphia, to "Physical Training," the official organ of the Physical Directors' Society of the Y. M. C. A.'s of North America.

Dr. White went to a great deal of trouble to get at facts which, it was hoped, would be of assistance in solving the problem as to the age at which boys should be allowed to enter endurance races. Eighteen years, he fixes, positively as the minimum age.

The running of a "Marathon" race from Villa Nova College to the City Hall, Philadelphia, a distance of fourteen miles gave him an opportunity to examine the physical condition and after-effects of the strain upon seventy of the contestants.

Only six of the seventy admitted the use of tobacco and only two the use of alcohol in any form. Three out of the six failed to finish. A greater number of those competing who were engaged in outdoor or muscular occupations were able to finish than those engaged in light indoor occupations.

Fifteen of the first twenty-five finishing were examined minutely, their average age being twenty-two years. They averaged five weeks spent in training. All those finishing averaged 20.6 years of age; those failing to finish 18.6 years.

From the results the following conclusions were drawn—

1. The proportion is about sixteen to one in favor of those contestants not using tobacco or alcohol.

2. The most successful contestants averaged twenty-two years of age and all who finished averaged two years more in age than those failing.

4. The percentage of failures among those under eighteen years of age with the same preparation, was greater than that of those eighteen and over.

Dr. White adds: "The fact that the heart is smaller to pump the blood through the arterial area during the period of adolescence than it is when maturity is reached is a very important feature in bringing about these conditions and should cause us to think twice before entering boys of less than eighteen at least to say nothing of boys of fourteen, as was done in this contest."

SPORTING NOTES

The Strathcona rugby team had a good workout at the Oval Saturday afternoon. A large number of men attended practice.

Now that the baseball season is almost over, it is up to the big stars and a few of the lesser ones, to announce that they are through with the game and intend going into business.

Billy Parker, of Hiawatha, has entered in the Ward Marathon in Toronto.

Detroit took both games from New York Saturday, thereby bringing the bunting a little closer.

Who said that lights would be installed at Riverside Park? Somebody get busy.

A number of the seniors were out to practice Saturday afternoon, and had a good practice.

Shamrocks beat Tecumsehs Saturday 7—2, and are now tied with Montreal for the N.L.U. championship.

H. Wood, of the Victoria Harriers, ran in the 100 yards handicap event at Bobby Kerr's meet at Hamilton Saturday.

RUGBY

Capt. Ben Simpson, of the Tigers, is very enthusiastic over his team, and sees no reason why the boys should not carry off the Grey cup. Ben feels, however, that some real hard work will have to be put in at the cricket grounds before the team is ready, and he is of the opinion that this team will need the extra week which they secure through the arrangement of the schedule, which has Montreal and Ottawa playing the first game a week ahead of the other teams. Ben realizes that Ottawa will have a pretty strong team, and that his men go to the capital city for the first fixture, but this is not haunting him as much as the fact that the boys have had but one real hard practice. However, Wally Barron, Lobster, Art Moore, Pfeifer and perhaps Husky Craig are at last turning out, and with these delinquents in line the hard work will commence.—Hamilton Spectator.

SOME CLASS TO THIS UMPIRE

Baltimore, Md., Sept. 26.—For acting in a disorderly manner Saturday morning, Wm. F. Finneran, an Eastern League umpire, was fined $100 and costs by Justice Loden.

Finneran is a powerful man, standing about six feet and weighing probably 190 pounds. When arrested he gave the name of Joseph Murray. The arrest was the culmination of a small banquet attended by Finneran, three well-known actors and one bartender, at a house in the Western section. Patrolmen V. H. Duerr and Geo. W. Hennick were attracted to the place by cries of murder, and found that one of the women had been thrown down the steps, another woman had been beaten, and a man who had come in had been very badly used. As soon as the policemen secured their prisoner he began to fight. From that moment until he was landed in a cell he fought like a tiger with all the giant strength that he possesses. Before he was placed in a cell the reserve squad had to be called from their beds, and then, powerless physically, the prisoner cursed Lieutenant Street and all the other officers in charge of the station. When brought before Justice Loden, the prisoner declined to tell his age or his occupation, merely giving his name as Joseph Murray, and saying he was from Pennsylvania. Umpire Phyle, another of the Eastern League umpires, took $101.45 to the Western Police Station to pay the fine. At the hotel where Finneran was seen later, he admitted his identity. Finneran umpired the two games scheduled at Oriole Park Saturday.

CHARLIE THORPE WON MILE HANDICAP IN HAMILTON

Hamilton, Sept. 25.—The second Bobby Kerr games opened at Brennia Park this afternoon and weather conditions, which, while cold, were very near the ideal.

A crowd of some three thousand were present. The meeting had an international flavor owing to the presence of Emil Lunghi, the Italian half miler, and H. Wilson, the English miler.

First heat—220 yards handicap—Cohoe St. Patrick's, B.A., Hamilton, 15 yards; H. Wood, Victoria Harriers, Peterborough, 10 yards.

Second heat—Ruttenbury, Hamilton.

One mile handicap—Chas. Thorpe, Victoria Harriers, Peterborough, 220 yards; Chas. Cooke, Ninety-first A. A., Hamilton, 200 yards; Chas. Neilson, West End Y. M. C. A., Toronto, 100 yards.

Winner's time—4.13.

EXCITING HORSE RACES AT THE LINDSAY FAIR

Lindsay, Sept. 25.—The horse races at the fair furnished excellent sport yesterday. Two races were run off, the green race and the 2.22 event. Both were hustling races and afforded exciting finishes. It took five heats to settle the green race, but the customary three heats were sufficient for the 2.22. Forest Pointer winning in straights. The Pointer horse is owned by McPhee, Toronto, and has a mark of 2.19 1-4. The other horses pushed him hard.

THE 2.22 RACE.

The driver of Bourbon Brook used a chain in the first race, which the driver behind Patterson claimed was shaken in his horse's face.

"You had a chain?" Starter Sinclair asked.

"I won't lie, I did," replied the Bourbon Brook driver, "but I did not use it."

"You know the consequences?" Dr. Sinclair asked again.

"No, I don't," was the reply.

"Well, you should; ignorance is no excuse," remarked the starter, and the judges decided to put Bourbon Brook back a notch.

Forest Pointer finished first and Bourbon Brook finished second in reality, but was put back to third, Patterson getting second place.

The second and third heats were, like the first, battles from the start to the finish.

The six horses came around all bunched up, the drivers stinting neither whip or voice. Patterson was pocketed in the second heat and when Bourbon Brook went down coming around the corner, had to be pulled up. The driver of the Brook horse was dragged for a piece along the ground but uninjured. Danny Bright finished this heat on the dead run, a nose ahead of Wallace W.

THE SUMMARY.

1	Forest Pointer, b.g., McPhee, Toronto	1	1	1
2	Planet, ch.s., McDowell, Toronto	4	2	2
3	Patterson b.g., Jones, Peterborough	2	5	5
4	Bourbon Brook, Elliott, Keene	3	6	3
5	Danny Bright, Walker, Orillia	6	3	6
6	Wallace W., McArthur, Toronto	5	4	4

Best time—2.21 1-4.

THE GREEN RACE.

After losing the first two heats Ned Wilkes, a Lindsay horse, owned by W. A. Fanning, came back and won three heats in succession, and the green race.

There were four good horses in this race and they mixed the event up enough to make it decidedly interesting. Dr. Cowan's Gertie K looked good enough to win at one time, but went back in the last two heats. Village Girl, a neat little mare owned by Fee, of Omemee, got second money and deserved it. Gertie K was third and Teenie G. McGee, Omemee, was last.

THE SUMMARY.

1	New Wilkes, Fanning, Lindsay	3	2	1	1	1
2	Village Girl, Fee, Omemee	1	3	2	2	2
3	Gertie K, Cowan, Lindsay	4	1	3	4	3
4	Fanny G., McGee, Omemee	2	4	4	3	4

CREAM ON THE FARM

By EDWARD H. WEBSTER.

The dairy industry is not the main business of farmers, but rather a side issue forced upon them by adverse conditions or aggressive creamery agents. The farmer seldom gives serious attention to the careful handling of his cream. He has the cows and the separator, and the market that takes his cream asks but little of him in the way of quality. Naturally but little has been done to keep the product pure from the time the cow is milked. Now, however, times are changing rapidly in this respect. The creameries are requiring quality tests to be made of the patron's cream and are paying for it on that basis. This is going to bring the farmer face to face with a new proposition. He must learn how to care for his cream in such a way that he may deliver it to the creamery in perfect condition.

The milking is the starting point of most of the trouble. The milker sits down with a pail open at the top and begins to milk. Any dust, straw or manure that may be hanging to the udder is gradually dislodged and finds its way into the milk. Thus while the dairyman milks he unconsciously plants—he plants the seed of destruction in the very product he is going to market. The destruction begins at once and is carried on very rapidly so long as the proper temperatures are maintained.

The remedy would naturally suggest itself. Stop the dirt from getting into the milk. This can be done easily and quickly. If the milker will carry with him a damp cloth and carefully wipe off the udder and the parts immediately around it the trouble will to a great extent be prevented. All of the coarser particles of dirt will be rubbed off and the finer particles of dust dampened, so that they will not fall into the pail. This work will require but a few moments of extra time and prevent much after trouble in the way of sour and ill flavored cream. The cow should be milked in a place in which the air is free from dust. In the winter or when the cows are kept in the stable never feed or move hay or clean out the place or do anything to stir up dust or strong smells just before milking.

IN A SANITARY DAIRY.

The cream should be separated at once after milking, while the milk still has the animal heat in it. The work of the day should be so arranged that this can be done. Do not use a cloth strainer. The separator will remove all the solid dirt that may be in the milk much better than it can be done with a strainer. There never was a cloth strainer used that would not in a few days become yellow and smell bad. Under the best conditions, where steam can be used to help in cleansing, the cloth strainer is a source of danger rather than a benefit. A well made wire strainer might be used, but there is no need of any strainer. Pour the fresh, warm milk directly into the supply can and send it through as quickly as possible.

Scab in Sheep.

Symptoms of scab in sheep are intense itching, aggravated by warm weather; the loss of wool in patches; the unnatural dryness of the skin, which cracks at times; rapid loss of flesh and general unthriftiness. A veterinarian says: The following dip is excellent and does not stain the wool: Tobacco, sixteen pounds; oil of tar, three pints; soda ash, twenty pounds; soft soap, four pounds. Boil the tobacco and dissolve the other ingredients in a few gallons of boiling water and add enough water to make fifty gallons. Dip the sheep in it while lukewarm. This mixture should dip fifty sheep if each when taken out is laid on a drain board and his wool well squeezed. It will be necessary to dip a second or even a third time in persistent cases.

The Difference.

The difference between good stock and scrub stock is the difference between the animal which is adapted to a particular purpose and the one which is not. This is why the pure bred animal is ordinarily so much superior to the mongrel. The one has inherited tendencies, the result of generations of selected ancestry, to develop a certain form or certain qualities; the other has inherited in varying degrees so many conflicting lines of blood that there is no special fitness for any particular purpose.—Progressive Farmer.

Parasites on Sheep.

Some writers claim that sheep ought not to be pastured on land more than one year before it is plowed and reseeded, owing to parasites, but it has been shown that sheep have been kept free from parasites by the use of tar, turpentine and salt. Sheep soon learn to eat tar. One sheep raiser keeps it, mixed with turpentine and salt, where it is accessible at all times. About one-half pint of turpentine to one peck of salt is the proportion.

Missed Woman's Ready Wit.

"Don't always rely upon the ready wit of a woman," said the man who is sometimes pleased to consider himself an oracle. "That ready wit business is sometimes prone to get away off.

"For example, my wife and children had been staying in the country for several weeks, and I was regular with my letters, as every loving husband should be. Finally, on the day before my wife was to start for home, I concluded my letter to her with these words:

"'This will be the last letter I will write to you for a long, long time.'

"When I got down to my office the next morning I found a telegram from my wife waiting for me. 'What on earth do you mean?' read the dispatch.

"Later a registered letter came from her. She had blotted almost every line with tears. What it was all about I could not imagine.

"Then my telephone bell rang, and when I answered I heard my wife's voice speaking over the long distance phone.

"'Oh, John,' said she, 'is that really you? I thought you had committed suicide!'"

The Younger Set

By ROBERT W. CHAMBERS,

Author of "The Fighting Chance," Etc.

COPYRIGHT, 1907, BY ROBERT W. CHAMBERS.

Selwyn frowned slightly.

"But the point is," continued Neergard, "that it borders the railroad on the north, and where the land is not wavy it's flat as a pancake, and"—he sank his husky voice—"it's fairly riddled with water. I paid a thousand dollars for six tests."

"Water!" repeated Selwyn wonderingly. "Why, it's dry as a desert!"

"Underground water—only about forty feet on the average. Why, man, I can hit a well flowing 3,000 gallons almost anywhere. It's a gold mine. I don't care what you do with the acreage—split it up into lots and advertise or club the Siowitha people into subdivision, it's all the same; it's a gold mine, to be swiped and developed. Now, there remain the title searching and the job of financing it, because we've got to move cautiously and knock softly at the doors of the money vaults, or we'll be waking up some Wall street relatives or secret business associates of the yellow crowd, and if anybody bawls for help we'll be up in the air next New Year's and still hiking skyward."

He stood up, gathering together the mail matter which his secretary had already opened for his attention. "There's plenty of time yet. Their leases were renewed the first of this year, and they'll run the year out. But it's something to think about. Will you talk to Gerald, or shall I?"

"You," said Selwyn. "I'll think the matter over and give you my opinion. May I speak to my brother-in-law about it?"

Neergard turned in his tracks and looked almost at him.

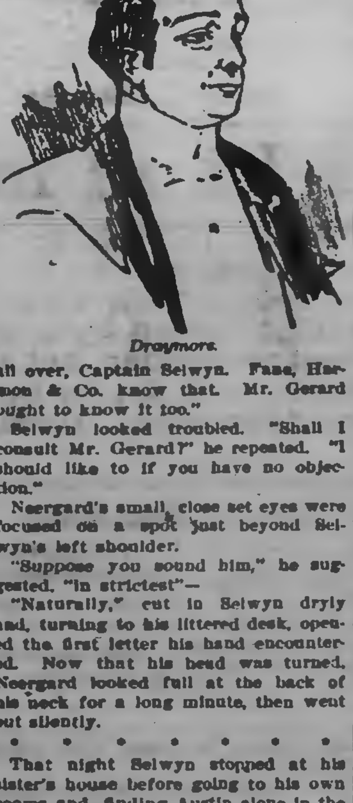
"Do you think there's any chance of his financing the thing?"

"I haven't the slightest idea of what he might do, especially"—he hesitated—"as you never have had any loans from his people, I understand."

"No," said Neergard, "I haven't."

"It's rather out of their usual, I believe."

"So they say. But Long Island acreage needn't beg favors now. That's all over, Captain Selwyn. Fane, Harmon & Co. know that. Mr. Gerard ought to know it too."



Draymore.

Selwyn looked troubled. "Shall I consult Mr. Gerard?" he repeated. "I should like to if you have no objection."

Neergard's small, close set eyes were focused on a spot just beyond Selwyn's left shoulder.

"Suppose you sound him," he suggested, "in strictest"—

"Naturally," cut in Selwyn dryly and, turning to his littered desk, opened the first letter his hand encountered. Now that his head was turned, Neergard looked full at the back of his neck for a long minute, then went out silently.

• • • • • • •

That night Selwyn stopped at his sister's house before going to his own rooms and, finding Austin alone in the library, laid the matter before him exactly as Neergard had put it.

"You see," he added, "that I'm a sort of ass about business methods. This furtive pouncing on a thing and clubbing other people's money out of them with it—this slyly acquiring land that is necessary to an unsuspecting neighbor and then holding him up—I don't like. There's always something of this sort that prevents my cordial co-operation with Neergard—always something in the schemes which hints of—of squeezing—of something underground."

"Like the water which he's going to squeeze out of the wells?"

Selwyn laughed.

"Phil," said his brother-in-law, "if you think anybody can do a profitable business except at other people's expense you are an ass."

"Am I?" asked Selwyn, still laughing frankly.

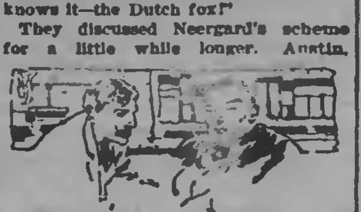
"Certainly. The land is there plain enough for anybody to see. It's always been there. It's likely to remain for a few eons, I fancy.

"Now, along comes Meynheer Julius Neergard, the only man who seems to have brains enough to see the present value of that parcel to the Siowitha people. Everybody else had the same chance. Nobody except Neergard knew enough to take it. Why shouldn't he profit by it?"

"Yes, but if he'd be satisfied to cut it up into lots and do what is fair"—

"Cut it up into nothing! Man alive, do you suppose that Siowitha people would let him? They've only a few thousand acres. They've got to control that land. What good is their club without it? Do you imagine they'd let a town grow up on three sides of their precious game preserve? And, besides, I'll bet you that half of their streams and lakes take rise on other people's property—and that Neergard knows it—the Dutch fox!"

They discussed Neergard's scheme for a little while longer. Austin, shrewd and cautious, declined any personal part in the financing of the deal, although he admitted the probability of prospective profits.



They discussed Neergard's scheme.

"Our investments and our loans are of a different character," he explained, "but I have no doubt that Fane, Harmon & Co."—

"Why, both Fane and Harmon are members of the club," laughed Selwyn. "You don't expect Neergard to go to them?"

A peculiar expression flickered in Gerard's heavy features. Perhaps he thought that Fane and Harmon and Jack Ruthven were not above exploiting their own club under certain circumstances; but, whatever his opinion, he said nothing further and, suggesting that Selwyn remain to dine went off to dress.

A few moments later he returned crestfallen and conciliatory.

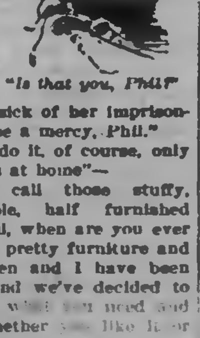
"I forgot Nina and I are dining at the Orchids'. Come up a moment. She wants to speak to you."

So they took the rose tinted rococo elevator. Austin went away to his own quarters, and Selwyn tapped at Nina's boudoir.

"Is that you, Phil? One minute. Watson is finishing my hair. Come in now and kindly keep your distance, my friend. Do you suppose I want Rosamund to know what brand of war paint I use?"

"Rosamund?" he repeated, with a good humored shrug. "It's likely, isn't it?"

"Certainly it's likely. You'd never know you were telling her anything, but she'd extract every detail in ten seconds. I understand she adores you, Phil. Eileen is furious at being left here all alone. She's practically well, and she's to dine with Drina in the library. Would you be good enough to dine there with them? Eileen, poor child, is heartily sick of her imprisonment. It would be a mercy, Phil."



"Is that you, Phil?"

"Why, yes, I'll do it, of course, only I've some matters at home"—

"Home! You call those stuffy, smoky, impossible, half furnished rooms home! Phil, when are you ever going to get some pretty furniture and art things? Eileen and I have been talking it over, and we've decided to go there and see what you need and then order it, whether you like it or not."

"Thanks," he said, [illegible]. "It's just what I've tried to avoid. I've got things where I want them now, but I knew it was too comfortable to last. Boots said that some woman would be sure to be good to me with an art nouveau rocking chair."

"A perfect sample of man's gratitude," said Nina, exasperated, "for I've ordered two beautiful art nouveau rocking chairs, one for you and one for Mr. Lansing. Now you can go and humiliate poor little Eileen, who took so much pleasure in planning with me for your comfort. As for your friend Boots, he's unspeakable—with my compliments."

Selwyn stayed until he made peace with his sister, then he mounted to the nursery to "lean over" the younger children and preside at prayers. This being accomplished, he descended to the library, where Eileen Erroll in a filmy, lace clouded gown, full of turquoise tints, reclined with her arm around Drina amid heaps of cushions, watching the waitress prepare a table for two.

He took the fresh, cool hand she extended and sat down on the edge of her couch.

"All O. K. again?" he inquired, retaining Eileen's hand in his.

"Thank you—quite. Are you really going to dine with us? Are you sure you want to? Oh, I know you've given up some very gay dinner somewhere"—

"I was going to dine with Boots when Nina rescued me. Poor Boots! I think I'll telephone"—

"Telephone him to come here!" begged Drina. "Would he come? Oh, please—I'd love to have him."

"I wish you would ask him," said Eileen; "it's been so lonely and stupid to lie in bed with a red nose and fishy eyes and pains in one's back and limbs. Please do let us have a party."

Eileen reclined with her arm around Drina.

So Selwyn went to the telephone and presently returned, saying that Boots was overwhelmed and would be present at the festivities, and Drina, enraptured, ordered flowers to be brought from the dining room and a large table set for four, with particular pomp and circumstance.

Mr. Archibald Lansing arrived very promptly, a short, stocky young man of clean and [illegible] build, with dark, keen [illegible] and humorous lips [illegible] the edge of laughter under [illegible] mustache.

His manner with Drina was always delightful, a mixture of self repressed idolatry and busily naive belief in a thorough understanding between them to exclude Selwyn from their company.

"This Selwyn fellow here!" he exclaimed. "I warned him over the phone we'd not tolerate him, Drina. I explained to him very carefully that you and I were dining together in strictest privacy."

"He begged so hard," said Eileen. "Will somebody place an extra pillow for Drina?"

They seized the same pillow fiercely, confronting each other; massacre appeared imminent.

"Two pillows," said Drina sweetly, and extermination was averted. The child laughed happily, covering one of Boots' hands with both of hers.

"So you've left the service, Mr. Lansing?" began Eileen, lying back and looking smilingly at Boots.

"Had to, Miss Erroll. Seven millionaires ran into my quarters and chased me out and down Broadway into the offices of the Westchester Air Line company. Then these seven merciless millionaires in buckram bound and gagged me, stuffed my pockets full of salary and forced me to typewrite a fearful and secret oath to serve them for five long, weary years. That's a sample of how the wealthy grind the noses of the poor, isn't it, Drina?"

The child slipped her hand from his, smiling uncertainly.

"You don't mean all that, do you?"

"Indeed, I do, sweetheart."

"Are you not a soldier lieutenant any more, then?" she inquired, horribly disappointed.

"Only a private in the workman's battalion, Drina."

"I don't care," retorted the child obstinately. "I like you just as much."

"How tall you're growing, Drina," remarked Selwyn.

"Probably the early spring weather," added Boots. "You're twelve, aren't you?"

"Thirteen," said Drina gravely.

"Almost time to elope with me," nodded Boots.

"I'll do it now," she said—"as soon as my new gowns are made—if you'll take me to Manila. Will you? I believe my Aunt Alixe is there"—

She caught Eileen's eye and stopped short. "I forgot," she murmured. "I beg your pardon, Uncle Philip."

Boots was talking very fast and laughing a great deal. Eileen's smile claimed her undivided attention. Selwyn quietly finished his claret. The child looked at them all.

"By the way," said Boots abruptly, "what's the matter with Gerald? He came in before noon looking very seedy." Selwyn glanced up quietly.

"Wasn't he at the office?" asked Eileen quickly.

"Oh, yes," replied Selwyn. "He felt a trifle under the weather, so I sent him home."

"Is it the grip?"

"N-no, I believe not."

"Do you think he had better have a doctor? Where is he?"

"He was here," observed Drina composedly, "and father was angry with him."

"What!" exclaimed Eileen. "When?"

"This morning before father went downtown."

Both Selwyn and Lansing cut in coolly, dismissing the matter with a careless word or two, and coffee was served, cambric tea in Drina's case.

"Come on," said Boots, slipping a bride rose into Drina's curls. "I'm ready for confidences."

"Confidences" had become an established custom with Drina and Boots. It meant that every time they saw one another they were pledged to tell each other everything that had occurred in their lives since their last meeting.

So Drina, excitedly requesting to be excused, jumped up and, taking Lansing's hand in hers, led him to a sofa in a distant corner, where they immediately installed themselves and began an earnest and whispered exchange of confidences, punctuated by little whirlwinds of laughter from the child.

Chapter 8

EILEEN settled deeper among her pillows as the table was removed, and Selwyn drew his chair forward.

"What is the matter with Gerald?" she asked. "Could you tell me?"

"Nothing serious is the matter, Eileen."

"Is he not ill?" [illegible]

"Not very."

She lay still a moment; then, with the slightest gesture, "Come here."

He seated himself near her. She laid her hand fearlessly on his arm.

"Tell me," she demanded. And as he remained silent, "Once," she said, "I came suddenly into the library. Austin and Gerald were there. Austin seemed to be very angry with my brother. I heard him say something that worried me, and I slipped out before they saw me."

Selwyn remained silent.

"Was that it?"

"I—don't know what you heard."

"Don't you understand me?"

"Not exactly."

"Well, then"—she crimsoned—"has Gerald m-misbehaved again?"

"What did you hear Austin say?" he demanded.

"I heard—something about dissipation. He was very angry with Gerald. It is not the best way, I think, to become angry with either of us—either me or Gerald—because then we are usually inclined to do it again, whatever it is."

They laughed a little. Her fingers, which had tightened on his arm, relaxed, her hand fell away, and she straightened up, sitting Turk fashion and smoothed her hair, which contact with the pillows had disarranged so that it threatened to come tumbling over eyes and cheeks.

"Oh, hair, hair," she murmured, "you're Nina's despair and my endless punishment. I'd twist and pin you tight if I dared. Some day I will too. What are you looking at so curiously, Captain Selwyn—my mop?"

"It's about the most stunningly beautiful thing I ever saw," he said, still curious.

TRIAL OF ELECTION PETITION WAS COMMENCED THIS MORNING

"Who else were on the committee for ward two?"

Witness mentioned Robert Leary, J. J. Duffus, Jas. O'Brien, Arthur McClellan and Robert Ross. He did not remember any others. He did not remember seeing A. Kingscote at the committee rooms, but remembered seeing George E. Elliott there. Witness went over the voters' list for ward, polling sub-division No. 8. He reported to Mr Leary when he had any new information. Mr. Leary acted as chairman for ward two.

"Who were some of the other chairmen?" Mr. DuVernet asked.

"I don't remember; there might have been eighty of them."

"Can't you give us some names out of that eighty?"

"I can't recollect any of them just now."

"Who was the general chairman?"

"I don't know."

"Was it A. H. Stratton?"

"I think it was."

"Who was the secretary?"

"I don't know for sure, but I think it was Mr. Meyers."

"Mr. Elgin Meyers," added Mr DuVernet.

"Were you asked to see any person?"

"Yes."

"Did you know anything about money being paid out?"

"No."

"There is no charge against you in this connection?"

"Not that I know of."

"Did you get any money from Mr. Leary?"

"No."

"Did you send any voters any place where they could get money?"

"No. I had nothing to do with it."

"Were you at the committee rooms on election day?"

"Yes. I was there before the polls opened to get my scrutineer papers. I was a scrutineer at polling sub-division No. 8. I got my papers from Walter Davidson, who was in one of the small rooms upstairs."

Witness said there were three rooms upstairs, one large one and two smaller ones. Mr. Davidson was in one of the smaller ones.

"I did not go back to the rooms during the day," Mr. Pickard deposed.

"Were you there at the noon hour?"

"I do not think I was, in fact I'm pretty sure I was not there." Witness did not remember making a report to anybody during the day of the election.

To Mr. Watson witness said he was a voter for and a supporter of the Liberal party. He had voted Liberal at a number of elections.

"Did Mr. Stratton ever ask you to do anything for him," Mr. Watson asked.

"Never," said the witness.

Witness described what he had done at the Liberal committee rooms and said he had done similar work at previous elections. He had been at committee rooms three or four nights a week for a couple of weeks before the election. There were seven or eight tables in the large room, one for each sub-division. He had not seen Mr. J. R. Stratton working at the committee rooms, and he could not say he had seen Mr. A. H. Stratton working there. He had not seen Geo. E. Elliott, E. S. Clarry or Dickson Hall working there, but he had seen R. M. Glover and J. O'Brien working on lists the same as witness was doing.

"Who did you make reports to?" Mr. Watson asked.

"To Mr. Leary."

"Was he the chairman?"

"I never heard of him having been appointed."

"But he acted as chairman?"

"He always sat at the head of the table."

"Who sat at the other end?" Mr. Watson asked. "You know the other end might have been the head."

"Nobody in particular sat at the other end," Mr. Pickard said.

"What was this system of 'reporting' which you speak of?" Mr. Watson asked.

Witness said he would show Mr Leary a name in his book and remark that he considered the person in question was "all right." Mr. Leary then mark the name in the large book he had.

Mr. Pickard did not know of any general meeting at which A. H. Stratton was appointed the general chairman. He knew of no meeting at which a secretary had been appointed.

Witness did not pay out any money, and he had no knowledge of any having been paid out.

"You heard Mr. Stratton say that no money was to be paid out for illegal purposes," said Mr. Watson.

"I never heard him say anything about it," was the answer.

"At the poll at which you were stationed did you see or know of any money being paid out?"

"No."

Witness said he had looked after the list for polling sub-division No. 8, at the provincial election, and that was how he had come to be in charge of the sub-division at the Dominion election last October.

Adjournment was then made till two o'clock.

"The Debtors"

THE TRAINED NURSE.

She Was So Very Different From the Old-Time Natural Nurse.

The subject on Mrs. Pry's mind was the "independence" of the young woman who had nursed her in a recent illness. "Not a thing would she do outside the sickroom; 'it wasn't customary,' she said, when I asked her if she wouldn't take hold with the washing. And she had to have her three meals reg'lar, and never once did she offer to eat 'em in the kitchen, or say, 'No matter; I'll stand up in the pantry with the rest of you,' not even when I was the sickest, and she knew Maria and Em'ly had it all to do.

"She never went into the kitchen except to cook what little I ate and to 'sterilize' everything she could lay her hands on.

"'Good land!' I said one day when I saw her grabbing up things I'd barely touched and starting for the kitchen. 'I haven't got anything catching!'

"Do you s'pose she stopped? No! She gave her head, with that doll's cap, a toss and started.

"And if I ever said I couldn't swallow my medicine she'd go right on measuring it, then under my head her arm would go, up it would come, and before I could shut my teeth down the medicine would go and I'd be back on the pillow! All without a word—that's what made her so exasperating.

"And when she did say anything it was generally impudent. I could not sleep nights I was in such pain, and when I wasn't I was lonesome and wanted to talk.

"Well, one night, 'long towards morning it was, I was telling her about Uncle Ezra Whiting courting his second wife—my mind kind o' run on the past—an' how his children held out against it, and he had to be so sly about it that he didn't dare unlatch her gate going or coming, but stepped over the fence so's not to make a mite o' noise, an' how she never saw him to the door or anything like that. I thought Miss Ames was mighty quiet, and I turned my head, and there she was—asleep!

"'I thought you were a trained nurse!' I said.

"'I am not trained to keep awake night and day!' said she, like a wasp.

"What do you think of that?" demanded Mrs. Pry.

A sympathetic murmur ran round the room, but there was no direct reply to her challenge.

"And we paid her," added Mrs. Pry, "$21 a week! We used to pay old Mis' Rogers five and her fare both ways. And she'd take right hold anywheres—sewing, preserving, anything that came up, and if anybody died she'd stay on through those first heart-breaking hours, and you felt that warm, soothing hand o' hers holding you up. And as for a thermometer and 'taking your temperature,'" concluded Mrs. Pry in a paean of praise, "she lef' that to the doctor, like the natural nurse that she was."—Youth's Companion.

High Hats and Babies.

"Did you ever," said Mr. Jurgleton, "see a man in a silk hat carrying an infant child? Never, I venture to say. You do see plenty of fathers, young fathers mostly, carrying their babies, and very willing to carry them — indeed, proud of their offspring. But you never see such a father in a tall hat. They may wear forty-leven other kinds of hats—derbies, soft hats, straw hats or as many other kinds of caps—but no father carrying an infant ever wears a silk hat.

"Of course there can't be any fashion decree about this. Refraining from wearing a silk hat on such occasions must be due just to instinctive common sense. The baby is an extremely informal thing, liable to scream or cry or wiggle or squirm at any minute, to bear itself in many ways in a manner quite incompatible with high hat dignity. And even young fathers seem to know this, and so they leave their stovepipe tiles on the shelf at home when they go out with the baby. They seem to know what is fitting instinctively, but certain it is that you never see a man in a stovepipe hat carrying a baby."

To Be a Lady.

A prize offered by The Gentlewoman, London, for the best definition of a lady was won by the following effort: "To be a lady means, rightly, to be a gentlewoman who shows by her every word and action a sweet and gentle dignity, with a gracious charm of manner—a woman whose heart is pure and true, who is tender toward all suffering, who sympathizes with those in trouble and is ever ready to give that which costs her some effort and self denial. A lady thinks no work derogatory, and no one is deemed too low to receive courtesy and kindness. She is pure and good in every detail of life, a true friend and a 'ministering angel' in sorrow and in sickness."

A SMART TRIMMING.

Crochet Motif For Use as a Dress Decoration.

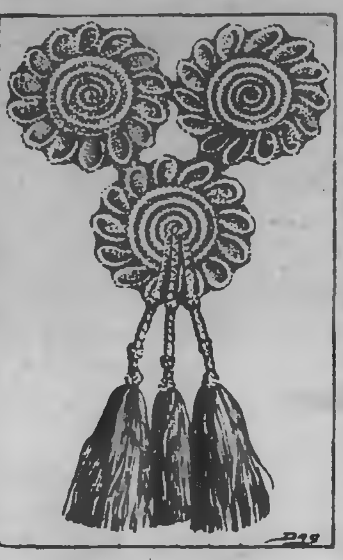
The very latest style for decoration of a costume is to be seen in the illustration, which shows the circular motif with heavy cording, arranged as a dress trimming, with tasseled end.

The motif is very simple and easily and quickly make by even the amateur.

Medium fine crochet silk was used in making the motif illustrated, but cotton or any of the mercerized threads are equally suitable, either in white or colors to match the costume.

Use a No. 5 crochet hook and a coarse knitting cotton as padding.

Make one double stitch very tightly round the end of the padding cotton, 15 d. over the p. c. Pull the p. c. to make these stitches as compact as possible, and twist them into a ring. 1 d. into the second stitch, over the p. c., 2 d. into each stitch, working round and round until five rows are completed. Over the p. c. alone make *, 1 d., 12 t., 2 d. Turn, miss the 2 d., 1 d., into the first t.; 1 t. into each t., 1 d., into last d.; 5 d. into next five on center *.



MOTIF DONE IN COTTON.

Repeat halfway round, completing the row on the center behind the first leaflet.

The tassels for the ornament are suspended by a crochet cord made by making a chain of five stitches; join in a ring and, taking up the top portion only of each stitch, work 1 d. into it. Continue working these five stitches in a row until the cord is about five inches long.

In making this cord you work from the inside of it.

The tassel is made by winding the thread several times around a piece of cardboard about two and a half inches deep. Tie through the center with the crochet cord and conceal the end of it in the middle of the tassel, then tie around the top of the tassel with a thread about a quarter of an inch below the cord. Cut the end of the tassel evenly and make two knots on the cord. Three of these tassels are used, and their cords are inserted through the center of one of the motifs and sewed securely to the back of it.

THE TEMPTING PEACH.

Try Some of These Recipes and See How Good They Are.

Peach Souffle.—Pare and rub eight fine peaches through a coarse sieve into a basin—a half pound of sifted powdered sugar and well beaten yolks of three eggs. Whip all well together for five or ten minutes. Whip up the whites of six eggs until very stiff and fold in carefully until well mixed. Turn into a souffle dish, sprinkle top with powdered sugar and bake in a hot oven for six minutes. Serve at once.

Peach Batter Pudding.—Butter a two quart pudding dish and spread on the bottom one quart of ripe peaches, pared and halved, with the stone side up. Beat four eggs until light and add to them six tablespoonfuls of condensed milk diluted with three-quarters of a pint of water, a pinch of salt and three tablespoonfuls of sugar. Pour the mixture, a little at a time, on three-quarters of a pint of flour and beat well. Pour the batter on the peaches and bake in a moderate oven for an hour. Serve with rich sauce.

Peach Puree.—Press sweet ripe peaches that have been peeled through a sieve. Measure and to each pint allow one pint of water, half a teaspoonful of almond essence and juice of one lemon. Add sugar and sweeten, bring to boiling point, add one teaspoonful of arrowroot, moistened in one gill of cold water; stir until thickened, then set aside to cool. When ready to serve pour in tumblers, fill with cracked ice or stand in small bowls packed with ice and send to the table as a first course for luncheon or breakfast.

Peach Kisses.—Have ready twelve fine ripe peaches pared and halved. Boil one point of sugar and half a pint of water until the sirup is brittle. Try it by dropping a little in cold water; it should break with a snap when tested. Dip the halved peaches one after another into the sirup and set away on an oiled dish to harden. While they are hardening whip the whites of four eggs stiffly and mix lightly in five tablespoonfuls of blanched and finely chopped almonds. Drop in large spoonfuls in a pan of boiling water and cook for a minute or two, then lift out carefully with a skimmer and place on a large plate until time to serve. Fill each of the peach halves with the mixture, rounding the tops slightly, and serve very cold.

Sir Edward Clouston is mentioned as the next High Commissioner for Canada in London.

In a Tropical Forest.

Chief Engineer Burgess of the Honduras National railway, giving advice to engineers working in the tropics, says emphatically, "Don't get lost!" He adds that a man should no more think of going into a tropical forest without a compass than of going alone to sea without one. Without a compass one has no way of getting his direction. In a few minutes he is turned round. The sun can only be seen, if at all, when directly overhead. There is no moss on the trees to serve for a guide. Distant elevations or mountains, if any exist, cannot be seen on account of the density of the forest. Even on the treeless llanos of South America, where the mountains are too distant to be seen, the compass is the only guide. One can tell the direction of east and west at sunrise and sunset, but in the middle of the day the sun is useless as a guide because it is almost directly overhead, and often one may stand in the shadow of his own hat.

RETAILERS WANT COMMERCE BOARD

Montreal, Sept. 28.—The Dominion Retail Merchants' Association of Canada meets here to-day and Wednesday, and will discuss the establishment of a board of commerce along the lines of the railway commission.

Secretary Trowern says the idea involves the formation of a permanent board of four or five chosen by the Government, to be representatives of retailers, wholesalers and manufacturers. In addition, experts in the lines involved in any case could be appointed by the parties interested.

The object of the establishment of the board is to provide a tribunal to which retailers may appeal in cases where they claim profits allowed by manufacturers are insufficient. The proceedings of the proposed board would be public.

Toronto, Sept. 28.—T. C. Mr. Robinette will also seek at this hearing to argue the whole matter of a new trial and should this be granted Blythe's case can be heard at the Criminal Assizes November 18.

Should the judgment of the Court of Appeal not be delivered before Friday the execution must again be stayed until after it is heard, even should the judges decide against him.

PRIEST ANSWERS HON. S. H. BLAKE

Winnipeg, Man., Sept. 28.—During the commemorative services in St Mary's Catholic Cemetery on the afternoon of the 18th, someone entered the vacant church and scattered broadcast, copies of Hon S H Blake's pamphlet on the "Book of Uncommon Discord."

The rector, Rev. Father Dalton, wrote Mr. Blake protesting against the action of Mr. Blake's disciple, and receiving no acknowledgement of his letter, at Sunday night's vespers said Mr. Blake was one of the last of those who endeavored to force a yoke which had resulted in the Puseyite movement early in the last century. He declared the pamphlet contained no scholarship, but was simply a denunciation in execrable taste of Catholic doctrines in language painful to Catholics.

OTTAWA YOUNG MAN DIED AFTER SPREE

Ottawa, Sept. 28.—Frances E. Cleary, aged 27, died in the hospital Sunday of concussion of the brain. On Saturday evening he was taken to the police cells by a policeman and spent the night there in a semi-conscious condition, supposedly drunk. He remained for twelve hours without medical attendance.

The chief of police denies that the constable struck the man over the head with his baton, and refuses to say whether Cleary was visited in his cell or not. An inquest will be held.

ROBT. H. SHEPPARD TOLD REMARKABLE STORY IN WITNESS BOX YESTERDAY

Was Employed to Secure Information for the Conservatives and According to His Evidence Was Playing a Double Game--Went to Mr. Stratton and Told What He Had Been Doing.

Affidavit Produced in Court---Jas. P. Bryson Gave Evidence Yesterday Afternoon---How the Money Was Exchanged.

YESTERDAY AFTERNOON

The trial was resumed at 2 o'clock James P. Bryson was then called in the question of agency. To Mr. Duvernet he said he resided in Peterborough, and by occupation an insurance agent. I was not a ward chairman. I was one of the workers for No. 1 ward and acted as secretary for that ward. I went to the committee rooms first somewhere about nomination time. The president and chairman of that ward was Mr. A. H. Stratton. I did not see Mr. Gus Hay in that committee room. I remember Mr. Leary was there, and Mr. A. H. Stratton occasionally. The candidate was there off and on, mostly on speech-making nights. Mr. W. S. Davidson was there. Ald. Kingscott was in for a while. These people were not working with any committee. They were just around, I think. The same members did not come every night.

The committees met upstairs and the speaking was downstairs in the committee rooms. Some of the names in my ward were Joseph Denn, A. H. Stratton was also around, Robt Sheppard was there quite frequently. He was pretending to be a worker then. I don't know what his politics was. I don't remember Thornton being there.

On election day I saw Mr. Stratton in the committee room. I didn't see Mr Stratton in the east room. He was standing in the centre of the big room. There were two little rooms, but he was in the big one. There were forty or fifty, perhaps a hundred people there.

I didn't see anybody going into the little rooms. I didn't pay much attention. I didn't know what was going on in the little room. I was there half a dozen times during the day. I brought nobody back with me. I was not driving anyone. I was downstairs. There was nothing doing at all there. People were coming and going and standing around gossiping.

I know of a $7 cheque and have it. The $7 cheque was given on Oct. 17, 1908, on the Bank of Ottawa, payable to Frank Pope, signed by J. P. Bryson in trust. I have a trust account, but not in connection with election. Frank Pope is a young man around town. I think he was a voter in No. 1 ward. I was acquainted with him. I knew him well. I handed the cheque, not to Sheppard, but to the man to whom it was payable. It was given to him in the large committee room. I do not know whether anyone was present except himself. He asked me to accommodate him with a loan of $7 and I gave him my cheque. I had seen him day after day. He didn't bring me an order. He was in rather hard circumstances and wanted a loan, I got it back three days after. This account was a trust account for my wife. I have no account of my own. I have have general power of obtaining from her. He asked me sometime on Saturday. I wanted him to wait till next week, as I had no cash. He asked me for cash first. He wanted $7. I paid him in the morning. When he first asked me for the loan, I think he said: "Could you let me have any money this afternoon." He asked for money.

Q—What did the man say when he came to you and asked you for money?

A—He certainly didn't demand it.

Q—What ground did he put it on?

A—He came in that afternoon and said 'Could I have five dollars this afternoon.' I said I have no cash about me at present. He said 'I really need it.' I wanted to put him off till next week, but finally I gave him my cheque for $7. There might have been some conversation, but I don't remember. I couldn't say who was present. Mr. Sheppard might have been there when he came and asked for the money. I don't know who was there. I lent no one else any money at this time and advanced no one else anything in the sense you mean.

Q—Did you hand any other money?

A—The question seems so broad it would cover my pay and grocery bill. I made no advances to anyone to whom I was not indebted.

Q—Did you make any advances in connection with the election at all?

A—I paid for work done in connection with it and I paid Mr. Sheppard. I don't remember the amount. It was for legitimate work done with regard to voters' list. What I paid him would be about $17 or $20. I found the work was absolutely necessary to be done. I asked him to do it and paid him whenever he was finished with his work. He was working about eight hours a day and received about twenty-five cents an hour. I paid him on the street or wherever I happened to meet him. I never paid him in the Crown hotel or Liberal committee rooms. I don't remember of him presenting any account. I looked after two others—Grimison was one. I don't know how much I paid him. $10 or more. He was helping Sheppard. He was a voter in No. 1 ward. Frank Pope worked a few days for me. He was doing the same work. When I settled up with Pope for his work he paid me back my cheque. I gave him $9 for his work. He gave me back $7. That was out of the money I paid him.

Q—Where did you get this money from? Surely it should not take so long to think over.

A—Is that a fair question? I got it from Mr. Walter Davidson and all the monies that I paid.

Q—How many payments did you get from him?

A—Just whatever was necessary.

Q—When would you get it?

A—From himself whenever I saw him.

Q—Cheque or cash?

A—Cash. I got no money from anyone else except Davidson. Never put in any statement to Davidson or anybody showing what I had got. I didn't know Bonskill at all and don't remember paying $2 to anyone in connection with the election. I don't know one Swangee. I paid him no money. I saw nobody pay any money in my presence. Never saw Sheppard pay anyone any money. I know R. M. Glover. Mr. Sheppard gave me no receipt for the Pope cheque for $7. I don't remember giving it to Sheppard to give to Pope.

To Mr. Watson.—Lived here practically all my life. Have always been a member of the Liberal party, and have also tried to do my best for them as a volunteer. No one asked me. I was working for the party. I accept the party candidate and work for the party. Mr. Stratton in this election didn't ask me particularly to work for him. There were committees appointed. I don't know the date. There was a general meeting of the workers, and they appointed their committees and chairmen. I am only speaking of Ward one.

A. H. Stratton was appointed chairman of No. one ward, and I was appointed secretary. I directed the different sub-divisions and gave what instructions I could to the other workers; giving my opinion in regard to voters, and doing what I could to secure Mr. Stratton's election, as I had always done. I saw Mr. Stratton once in awhile at the committee rooms. He never asked for or received reports from me. The place down stairs was open to everyone. There was nothing to prevent people going there. This loan to Pope had nothing at all to do with his vote or voting, and there was no discussion about his vote or voting. Pope was a party man. I think this was his first vote. Pope was around the rooms since the first of October as a Liberal. I knew what he was. He came and informed me he was going to support Stratton and do all he could. There was no bribery in connection with his vote. The man was working, preparing voters' lists, and what he was paid he earned at the rate of twenty-five cents an hour. I think I paid him for services before I loaned him the $7. No one suggested I should loan him the money. I did it myself. I took care when he had earned $9 to get back my loan of $7. I don't understand how they can connect the $9 with the election. Pope didn't work after the 22nd; there was nothing for him to do. There was no money paid to anybody for work except Sheppard and Grimison, who were at work on the voters' lists and addressing envelopes.

They were not given a cent except for work. Am not aware that Sheppard was employed as a detective for the Conservative party. Sheppard asked me for work to do, and said there was work going on and he thought he might get a share of it, and that is the way he came to be employed. There is no foundation for my paying Bonskill $2.00. I don't think I know the man. I have no knowledge of Leary, Walter S. Davidson or Dickson Davidson paying him $2.00. I saw no money paid to anyone in the Liberal rooms. As far as I am concerned the Swangee charge is false. I do not know the man. Charge No. 98. There is no foundation for any charge that I was personally bribed. Mr. Stratton did not offer me any money to vote for him. If he did I would go against him. Glover paid me no money to vote or give me any to expend in treating or bribing voters. Nor did Mr. W. S. Davidson. I have no knowledge of R. M. Glover paying Sheppard $2.00 on the 14th of Oct., or W. S. Davidson doing so. Sheppard came to me as a Liberal worker, and he was a good worker. I never asked him to vote, nor did I hear anyone else do so. I don't think Sheppard got any money from me on the 14th Oct. The only monies I ever paid out were paid for services. Except for legitimate work done Sheppard never received a cent from me. I say the same with respect to all the Sheppard charges. With regard to Grimison, I paid him no money as an inducement to vote. I did not say anything about his vote as he was a staunch Liberal. He came forward and proffered his services. He was to be paid for his legitimate services. It was arranged that all these men should be paid for any legitimate work they did. I never requested any of these men to vote as I did not think it necessary. Any monies I received, I received on that account, to pay for legitimate work done, and I so applied it honestly and faithfully.

To Mr. Duvernet—I can't give the amount I received from Mr. Davidson. I won't say within $100. To the best of my knowledge under $100. I can't suggest any reason for not giving Davidson any vouchers. They were not asked for.

R. H. SHEPPARD.

I am a resident of Peterborough and a voter, and always supported Mr. Stratton, except at the last election. I was in his committee room and was sub-chairman on No. 1 table. Ward one was divided into sub-committees. I volunteered and gave my services during the election. I spoke to Mr. Bryson and he set me to work and nothing was said about pay. The committees met upstairs. There were five wards. I didn't take much notice outside of No. one. Among the workers was Mr. Bryson, Mr. R. H. Leary, Mr. A. H. Stratton, Mr. R. M. Glover and several others I can't recall at present. I don't know what they were doing except supervising the work. I hardly remember when I went there, near the opening of the campaign, two or three days previous to 21st Sept., and continued during the election.

Q—Did you receive any money?

A—Yes, sir.

Q—How much?

A—In the neighborhood of $17 or $20. I got $7 on the 21st for work I done at the tables preparing list. Nothing was said to me. I was handed $8 on the 25th Sept. by Mr. Bryson and $6 on Oct. 17, and then $2 on Oct. 14. I think I asked that as a loan. (All the sums mentioned are from Mr. Bryson. The $2 was paid in the Crown Hotel. Got no money from Mr. Davidson or anybody else. Know nothing about $10. I never got any from Davidson or from anybody else.

Q—Is that your signature?

A—Yes, sir.

Q—And your letter?

A—Yes.

"Addressed to R. M. Waddell:

"Dear Sir,—Kindly receipt $2—"—$10 on the Bank of Commerce given to me by W. S. Davidson for "spending money." The statement is not true. The $10 is my own money. I earned it. I was working for the Liberals all the time. I was not working for the Conservatives. I was getting money from the Conservative party and sent them false statements. It was all my own idea. I got no money from the other side except what I have mentioned I didn't ask for that. It was handed

CITY OF ERIE HITS VESSEL AND THREE ARE DROWNED

J. C. Van Straubenzie, of Port Colborne, is Struck by Big Passenger Liner in Lake Erie—The Captain and Mate and Female Cook Perish.

Buffalo, Sept. 28.—Out of the darkness which overlay Lake Erie off Dunkirk early yesterday darted the schooner T. Van Straubenzie straight into the course of the steamer City of Erie.

There was a crash and shrieks from three persons who will never call out again. Capt. John Corson of Hamilton, Ont., of the sunken schooner; Mate James McCallum of Toronto, and an unknown woman who cooked for the crew of four.

Thomas Hollis and Thomas Garner, two seamen, pulled from the wreckage by the hands of the City of Erie, were saved to tell their half of the tragedy.

The Van Straubenzie, owned by the Erie Coal Co., was sailing light from Port Colborne to Cleveland for a load of sand.

Capt. McAlpine of the passenger boat had turned over the immediate charge of the vessel to Pilot Pickle, who was at the wheel shortly before 3 o'clock in the morning. The skies were then clear and starry and the proper signal lights could easily have been seen several miles ahead. But suddenly, dead ahead, the pilot perceived a dark shape take form out of the night.

The two vessels must have been at least a half mile apart at that time, but although the pilot signalled to reverse engines, such was the momentum of the City of Erie that she crashed prow to prow into the coming schooner.

The Erie's boats were lowered immediately and one seaman was picked up within the first few seconds of the search. It was nearly half an hour afterward that the second sailor was discovered, clinging to a bit of drifting wreckage.

The steamer lay to in the vicinity of the wreck until dawn showed that it was useless to continue the search, and then proceeded on its course to Buffalo.

"I am confident the collision was due to the negligence of the schooner in not properly displaying her lights," declared General Freight Agent H. R. Rogers of the Cleveland and Buffalo line, after a grilling examination of the captain, the pilot and other members of the crew of the City of Erie, as well as the two survivors of the wrecked vessel.

Wife Had a Premonition.

Toronto, Sept. 28.—The Van Straubenzie was a well-known craft in Toronto harbor, and cleared this port for Erie on Saturday last. It was a three-masted schooner, about 30 years old and could carry 750 tons of coal or 2,400 bushel of wheat.

Capt. Corson lived at 242 North Wellington street, Hamilton. He was born in Grimsby in 1843. He was owner of the schooner "Merritt," wrecked in a gale on Lake Erie many years ago. While in charge of the "W. J. Suffel" it was blown clean up the lake and stranded on Burlington Beach. It was then he located in Hamilton and married. His wife said yesterday: "All night long I was unable to sleep. I was very ill about five o'clock this morning—the time, they tell me, the accident occurred. I guess it was sort of a premonition."

J. W. Corson, coal and wood dealer, 549 East King street, Toronto, is a brother, and Mrs. Capt. Brooks of Cleveland, Mrs. Charles Hutchinson of Sarnia, and Mrs. H. E. Smith of Britton, are daughters.

Mate James McCallum had lived for years at the Grand Central Hotel. He was about 55 years old and has a wealthy brother in Montreal.

ANOTHER EARTHQUAKE DUE SAYS AMERICAN VOLCANOLOGIST

Messina, Italy, Sept. 28.—Frank A Perrit, the American volcanologist, who arrived here yesterday, believes from his scientific deductions, that this part of Sicily will again be the scene of seismic disturbances.

Mr. Perrit said: "Wednesday, Sept. 29th, is the date most favorable for earthquakes or eruptions. At that time, the sun, earth and moon are in a line with each other, and the moon also is at its nearest approach to the earth. This combination occurs frequently, tending to produce gravitational distortion of the earth's form, namely, to change the earth from a sphere to an eclipse. This extra strain often acts upon weak spots in the earth's crust, causing them to give way and thus producing earthquakes or volcanic eruptions.

"On Wednesday it happens that the planet Mars also is nearest to the earth. When the effects are added, the strain will be greater than usual. Thus I consider that Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday next will be very dangerous. Possibly nothing very special will occur, but this will simply mean that the earth has resisted the danger that nevertheless existed."

AGED TORONTO MAN MET DEATH BY BEING SMOTHERED

Toronto, Sept. 28.—Smothered in a bank of sand, with his head crushed against the wheels of his wagon, Jas. Martin, aged 77, who lived with his daughter in the rear of 43 O'Hara avenue, was found early yesterday afternoon by some workmen in a sandpit on Huron street north of St. Clair avenue.

Martin owned a team and when yesterday morning his driver did not show up his hitched up the horses and drove to the pit. While taking on a load there the bank gave way and the falling gravel drove him with force against his wagon. Dr. Warren of Wychwood pronounced life extinct and the body was removed to Spiers' undertaking establishment.

Dr. C. H. Gilmour opened an inquest last night. After viewing the body the investigation was adjourned till this evening. Martin was a widower. He leaves a grown-up family.

FIREWORKS CAUSE PANIC IN SCHOOL IN NEW YORK

New York, Sept. 28.—Terrified by Black Hand stories, 1,000 children stampeded in a Polish parochial school in Jersey City yesterday, when fireworks were set off in the street below, and in the mad rush for the doors, fourteen were crushed, one so seriously that death will probably result.

Cries of "dynamite and the Black Hand," rang through the building. The calls of the priest in charge had no effect. The terrified children poured into the halls and rushed wildly down the stairs. There are two street doors, but one of them was closed. A few passed safely out the open door, but at the closed entrance there occurred a disastrous jam.

Here several of the smaller children were tramped unconscious, while others ran back into the building and sprang through open windows, fifteen feet to an area below.

HIGH-HANDED ACTION OF U.S. IMMIGRATION OFFICERS

Montreal, Sept. 28.—Mrs. F. H. Baldie, wife of a prominent automobile manufacturer and former mayor of Tacoma, left for home last night, a very indignant woman. Some time ago she sent her two children across the Atlantic to visit relatives. They sailed in charge of the captain of the steamship Grampian. They returned in the captain's charge on the same boat, reaching Quebec on Saturday night. Their mother had come to Montreal to meet them, but when the Grampian arrived here there were no children on board. Then Mrs. Baldie learned that they had been taken from the ship at Quebec by United States immigration officers, despite the fact that they were traveling first-class and that that class of passengers is always landed at Montreal. Mrs. Baldie went down to Quebec and found the children in charge of a matron, who willingly turned them over to her. She returned to Montreal, and as she left the train was accosted by another United States immigration officer, who took her and her children in charge. At the immigration headquarters here she alleges she was put through a sort of third degree, and compelled to answer all sorts of questions, and it was only after she had secured the assistance of Mr. William Stitt, the general passenger agent of the C.P.R., to whom she had a letter of introduction, that she was able to secure release from the charge of kidnapping her own children. Mrs. Baldie says that her husband is going to take the case to Washington.

TO PROTECT WHITE GIRLS

Toronto, Sept. 28.—That Judge Winchester disapproves of white girls being employed in Chinese restaurants is evident from his remarks to the jury after hearing the evidence in the trial of Wm. Smith, charged with wilfully damaging the Chinese restaurant at 209 York street, by exploding a bomb in the building.

"I feel sorry for those girls," he said, referring to Queenie Oliver and her sister, Mrs. Smith, who had been employed in the restaurant, "and as a police commissioner will see that no white girl shall act as a servant in Chinese restaurants in Toronto in future."

Smith was found guilty in the sessions and remanded for sentence.

St. Catharines' Lady Dead.

St. Catharines, Sept. 28.—Mrs. Lloyd, widow of the late Arthur Lloyd, hardware merchant, a prominent lady of this city, died early yesterday morning. Her death is believed by physicians to be due to lockjaw, caused by injuries she sustained from a fall a week ago.

THE TRIUMPH OF TRUE LOVE

New Orleans, La., Sept. 28.—Hundreds are homeless along the coast as a result of last week's storms.

A story of romance that could not be stopped by the floods nor hurricane, comes from Houma. In place of the extensive trousseau which she had prepared for her wedding yesterday, a young woman of Leesville was attired in garments given her by the charitable women of Houma. The groom was barefooted, all his worldly possessions on his back. But the wedding took place at the time planned.

Lights Out at Montreal.

Montreal, Sept. 28.—There is another deadlock between the city and the power company over the lighting question. The Montreal Light, Heat & Power Co. have launched their ultimatum. All the lights on the city streets will be cut off on Friday, Oct. 1, unless a sum is voted to guarantee the payment of their account to the end of the year. The finance committee has refused to grant that sum.

FOUR OF HON. ADAM BECK'S HORSES BURNED TO DEATH

While Leaving Toronto for Their Home Stables in London, Photographer, Mooreshot, Covershot and Kempenfeldt Were Killed.

Toronto, Sept 28.—Four of Adam Beck's string of racehorses, including Photographer, the 20 to 1 shot sensation of the Woodbine spring meet of 1908, were smothered and burned when the car in which they were being shipped to their owner's stables in London, caught fire just as the train was pulling out of the city at 8 o'clock last night. The other three animals were Kempenfeldt, Covershot and Mooreshot.

The four horses were loaded in a G T R. train yesterday afternoon, and Frank Dillon, 18 years, with William Palmer, of the same age, traveled in the car with them. As the car pulled out of the Union Station yards it was considerably jolted and a lantern which had been hung from the roof of the car was knocked down.

This set fire to the hay and straw in the car and the men, who had lain down to sleep were awakened by the plunging of the quartette of terrified animals. The train was moving rapidly and the air from the vents had fanned the flames so that nothing could be done to extinguish them. The men had no way of signalling for a stop, and as the horses were plunging wildly their position was exceedingly dangerous. They rushed to the door at the side of the car and swinging outside to avoid the flame and smoke, managed to climb to the outside.

As the train pulled past Spadina avenue passersby noticed the flames coming through the vent at the top of the car and turned in an alarm. This was at 8.27. The fire was noticed by the train hands and the train was stopped at the foot of Bathurst street. The terrified men jumped from the burning car, which was pulled away from the one immediately behind it, in which were a number of horses of the Dyment string.

When the fire was extinguished it was found that all the animals were dead. The carcasses were badly scorched and the inside of the car was damaged.

Called on the 'phone at London, Hon. Adam Beck had heard of the fire. He said that he could not place a money loss, and did not think that the horses were insured. He said that fortunately his 40 to 1 shot sensation of this year's spring meeting, Jack Parker, had escaped, being in Hamilton.

Beside his victory at 20 to 1, in the opening races of the 1908 meet, which made him famous, Photographer otherwise distinguished himself at that meet, winning four straight races.

Gas Stove Exploded.

Galt, Sept. 28.—Miss Jennie Wright was lighting a gas stove at the Rebekah, I.O.O.F., lodge room when an explosion took place, and she sustained painful burns on the hands and arms.

A $350 horse and rig, hired Sunday night at Despond and Cowan's livery, mysteriously disappeared while two men who had it were making a call at Dundas. Yesterday afternoon the missing rig was located in West Flamboro Township.

To Welcome Board.

Ottawa, Sept. 28.—The Methodist churches of the city are preparing a big welcome for the sixty delegates of the Methodist Missions Boards of Canada, which meets here Oct. 7, and will be in session for 10 days. It represents all the conferences of Canada and will deal with home and foreign mission matters.

LATE TICKS FROM WIRES

There was a slight earthquake in parts of Missouri, Illinois and Indiana yesterday.

Lieut. Truden of the Zeigler polar expedition, may try to reach the North Pole in a "scooter."

Despondent over financial reverses, W. B. Grover, a Virginia farmer, shot and killed his wife and daughter and himself.

The labor troubles which threatened to tie up Butte, Montana, shut down the smelters in Anaconda and Great Falls and throw 15,000 out of work throughout the state, have been settled.

R. L. Borden, interviewed at Liverpool, said he had had a very pleasant holiday, the first real one in twelve years, but was glad to be on the homeward journey. There was no place like Canada.

The principal members of the staff of the Allan Line and its captains of steamers have received notice that engagements will be continued for a year as at present. This is believed to indicate that further changes will then occur.

The London Times' Melbourne correspondent, reviewing the results of the congress of the Chamber of Commerce, says: "As a body the Canadian delegates have undoubtedly won the chief honors and greatly attracted the Australian public."

Wade for Lieutenant-Governor.

Ottawa, Sept. 28.—It is probable that F. B. Wade, the well-known western lawyer, will be appointed Lieutenant-Governor of British Columbia. Much pressure is being brought to bear on the Government to give him the position.

Call Maine Pastor.

Belleville, Sept. 28.—Rev. J. A. Ford, late of Houlton, Maine, has been called to the pastorate of Victoria avenue Baptist Church, this city, and has accepted. He will take up the work at once.

MAY BE A HUGE CONSOLIDATION

Montreal, Sept. 28.—The Herald says: "If present negotiations are successful, Canada will shortly have one of the biggest industrial corporations in the world. This project represents nothing less than a $125,000,000 steel and coal consolidation.

"It is the intention of those financiers who recently have made several successful consolidations of industrial companies to bring some of the leading Canadian steel and coal companies under one strong controlling or holding company.

Cross of Honor For Dead.

Versailles, Sept. 28.—The bodies of Capt. Marchal, Lieut. Phaure and Subalterns Vincenot and Reux, killed Saturday, when the military balloon Republique was wrecked, were yesterday given imposing funeral ceremonies. The streets were hung with emblems of mourning.

The cross of the Legion of Honor was pinned on the bodies of the victims of this accident by order of Premier Briand.

PROBABILITIES.

Fresh winds, fair to-day. Showers during the night and on Wednesday.

MURPHY GRUFF TO "CAP" BERNIER

Ottawa, Sept. 28.—Asked for a statement as to his reasons for his reference to Dr. Bernier, Dr. Cook has wired from New York: "Bernier brought supplies sent by Mr. Cook. Left them at Etah in care of Harry Whitney on August 20, 1908. Bernier asked for Esquimaux and dogs, and was refused by Murphy. In Bernier's letter, Beechy Islands, Lancaster Sound, was given as his next winter station. See Whitney on Jeannie, now at Battle Harbor, Labrador. (Signed) Frederick A. Cook."

Murphy was Peary's boatswain, who was troublesome also to Cook.

Actress Hurt In Runaway.

Stratford, Sept. 28.—Two ladies of the cast of "Faust," which was presented here last night, met with a serious accident in a runaway late yesterday afternoon. Miss Porter's nose was broken and Miss Miller received a severe shaking up. They were able to take their parts last evening.

The Stratford Normal School opened yesterday with an attendance of about 200. Kerr Brothers, revivalists of Toronto and Detroit, have opened a two-weeks' campaign in the Trinity Methodist Church.

WHAT IS "TOLERATION"?

La Patrie hails the reply of the King to the Plenary Council's message as a sign of the times. It congratulates Protestants that some of them at least are, since Cardinal Wiseman's time, awakening to a sense of tolerance. But how can La Patrie say that the Roman Catholic Church "tolerates" Protestantism or any other ism, since it considers them heresies! The chief organ of the church in Ontario recently stated that the Baptists were not to be recognized, since like others, they had not the truth which belongs to the Catholic Church alone. Recently also His Holiness issued directions for a universal prayer for the extirpation of heresy, promising indulgence. Where must Protestants look for "toleration" in all this?

Toleration where the Catholic Church is supreme is by the belief of that church, impossible to it. Protestantism is an idea, a leaning towards God merely. Catholicism is plainly a concrete belief in the fact that Christ in order to avoid "error" built upon Peter and gave him the actual keys of Heaven and hell. Where can there be toleration in such a belief? Toleration except for a purpose under such conditions would be high treason to the King of Kings. That Protestants and others have been in divers times and places intolerant, we do not deny. But intolerance is not a necessary part of the Protestant belief and this distinction must not be ignored.

It must further be recognised that the Catholic Church considers itself the source of all truth in faith and morals i.e. in faith and ALL THAT BEARS UPON IT and in the moral being and conduct of mankind and all that bears upon it. Moreover, the church considers itself the only infallible and God-given source of such truth. It is necessary therefore for the church to regard the State that is the People, as its pupil committed by God to its charge and into its keeping. How then can it be said to "tolerate" the State—only as a thing, not as an independent entity. It regards necessarily itself as above all human law which is therefore subservient to it. This is servitude, not tolerance.

It has therefore, been aptly said that the great struggle now on is for the right of the church to extirpate the modernistic or any other unsuitable views of the People on the one hand and for the assertion and maintenance of a condition of absolute freedom of the People to say or do what they may and be responsible to no earthly power. It is to this climax that "modernism" or independence of opinion has brought us. This was the cause of the upheaval in France. It remains to be said, then, we think, in all fairness that Protestants are intolerant from error, the church from conviction.

That this argument is not ill-founded the following sentence from the other great French journal "La Presse," as translated by the Montreal Witness, says:—

"It needed magnanimity on his (the King's) part, openly to pay this tribute to the loyalty of our hierarchy, who teach a straight and inflexible doctrine in favor of temporal authority."—La Presse.

EDITORIAL NOTES

It was so cold at the pole that the cold shoulder in New York would look like a hot roast.

It is possible, we hear, that the prairies of the west shall be also the home of the flying-machine.

There seems to be a suspicion in the mind of the Canadian Courier that the west is getting out misleading statistics regarding its crops.

Plenary Councils are said to be the foot-prints of the church upon the sands of time. They come about once every century.

We agree with the contention that Canadian Clubs should refrain from federating. They would then cease to express local opinions and their value would be gone.

Mr. Borden is trusted by the people of Canada. The Conservative party must not be put in a false position by the ambitions of some who are not so thoroughly trusted. Otherwise it will remain in the back seats.

It seems to be the wish of the "intellectuals" that mankind should learn to know God (through His works rather than through His words. They say there can be no mistake about the former. There are no higher critics there.

The British Weekly pretends to be wrought up over the idea that the House of Lords in opposing the budget is taking part in fiscal legislation. The day of the distinction between one class and another is going rapidly by. The Lords are an upper chamber like a senate, and as such surely have some say in the nation's affairs.

If the report published in the Witness is correct, that certain Conservatives visited the Provincial Premier with a view to securing co-operation in a new scheme of party re-organization in both federal and provincial affairs, the break-up of the Conservative party is at hand. Certain men may be said to represent Conservatism, and certain men do not. Verb Sap.

A society has arisen which says that there is no such thing as the moral law. The "ought," it is contended, arises from the process of trade and the accuracy of accounting. Error is in not giving the sum or quantity demanded, and in financing incorrectly. From the simplest processes of life, it is contended, have arisen the refinements of a moral law.

Voting in Spain is held to be a duty to the community, not merely a privilege of the individual, and neglect of civic obligations carries its own penalty. Male adults of legal age and under seventy, with the exception of priests, notaries, and judges, are required to vote in municipal elections. Failure to cast a ballot is punishable by having one's name published as censure for neglect, by having taxes increased two per cent., by suffering a deduction of one per cent. in salary if employed in the public service, and, for a second offense, the loss of right to hold elective or appointive office. A little of this sort of training would do untold good in American cities. Publication of the lists of non-voters and a public sentiment that would regard failure to vote as a neglect of duty which would tend to disqualify a man in his citizenship would, beyond doubt, have a potent effect upon municipal and national election in the United States.

FREE RURAL MAIL DELIVERY

Rumor has it that free rural mail delivery will be established shortly between Lakefield and Lakehurst, the Government having at least yielded to the demands of the people that its promises be fulfilled. The Review has advocated free delivery with all its strength and it hopes to see general free rural delivery throughout the country before long. It is the least the farmers should get when everybody else is highly favored.

FOR THE LADY WHO CALLS

The lady who has a large circle of acquaintances always finds it a difficult matter to keep track of the reception days of her friends and often mistakes are made, that might have been avoided if care were taken to make a record of such days. And then there are the teas, at homes, and parties to be remembered too and when a hostess is planning an affair, she is always worried lest she overlook some one who has extended hospitality to her some time previous. To avoid these mistakes, a social register has been issued by the Review, that will be a boon to the busy lady. There are pages for each day of the month on which the record of the calls received and paid with the address of the visitor appear, then there are pages for social engagements, visits paid, addresses and memoranda, all of which prove very valuable data to have. These books are on sale at all the book stores and at the Review Office for 50 cents and there has already been a good demand for them.

Butchers.

Market easier, dealers quoting $8.25 for selects, fed and watered, and $8 f.o.b. cars at country points.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, Sept. 27.—At the Montreal Stock Yards West End Market, the receipts of live stock for the week ending Sept. 25 were 2200 cattle, 2025 sheep and lambs, 1525 hogs and 650 calves, while the offerings this morning consisted of 1375 cattle, 1065 sheep and lambs, 250 hogs and 450 calves.

Owing to the continued liberal supplies of cattle coming forward, which are somewhat in excess of the requirements of the trade, and the fact that a large percentage of them are common and inferior grades, an easy feeling continues to prevail in the market, and prices have a downward tendency. The weather was unfavorable, and, as buyers in some cases had ample supplies of beef on hand for a few days, the attendance was rather small, and in consequence trade was slower than usual. Cable advices from Liverpool this morning reported trade in cattle very slow and noted a further decline in prices of ½c to 1½c per lb. as compared with those of a week ago; consequently there was no demand from exporters here, and trade in this respect was dull. A few very choice steers sold at 5¼c, but the bulk of the trading was done in choice, at $4.90 to $5; good at $4.50 to $4.75; fair at $4 to $4.25; medium at $3.50 to $3.75; good cows at $3 to $4; bulls at $2.50 to $3.50, and canners at $1.75 to $2 per 100 lbs.

A weaker feeling developed in the market for hogs, and prices since this day week show a further decline of 25c per 100 lbs., notwithstanding the fact that supplies were much smaller, but, as packers were fairly supplied, the demand was not so keen as it has been of late, and sales in consequence were rather slow, and the market quieter. Selected lots sold at $8.50 to $9 per 100 lbs., weighed off cars. Cable advices from all the leading markets on Canadian bacon were dull and noted a further decline in prices of 2s to 4s per cwt.

The market for sheep and lambs continues weak, and prices show a further decline of ¼c to ½c per lb. since this day week. At this reduction, however, the demand was good from both local and American buyers, and an active trade was done, several carloads being taken for the latter account. Sheep sold at 3¾c and lambs at 5¼c to 5½c per lb. Calves were scarce, for which the demand was good, and sales were made at prices ranging from $3 to $15 each, as to size and quality.

At the Canadian Pacific live stock market the receipts for the week ending Sept. 25 were 4312 cattle for export account and 1250 cattle, 2355 sheep and lambs, 300 hogs and 475 calves, while the offerings for sale on the market to-day consisted of 700 cattle, 1500 sheep and lambs, 175 hogs and 300 calves.

Something About Moose and Deer

It is now pretty well known among hunters that the best deer hunting country in Ontario is on the line of the Canadian Northern Ontario and that hunters receive special attention. Mr. C. Price Green, Passenger Agent of the line is a hunter himself who goes right with the parties and looks after them, in fact he located most of them. This year the line will be opened north of Sellwood into the midst of the Moose Country, they are reported very thick, the Engineers say that they have never seen anything like it, the Moose season up there opens October 15th, fifteen days before the Deer. We have something special on a new place that will take three parties of deer hunters.

OBITUARY

JOSEPH GILMAN.

The news of the death of Mr. Joe Gilman, youngest son of Mr. John Gilman, which occurred yesterday afternoon at St. Joseph's came as a great shock to his many friends and acquaintances throughout the city. The young man, who was 24 years of age, had been ailing for some time previous to his being taken to the hospital, one week ago, with an attack of typhoid fever, but symptoms of pneumonia developed rapidly, and despite all medical skill, death claimed him. "Gillie," as he was familiarly called by a host of young friends, possessed an amiable and frank disposition, and had the happy faculty of making warm friends wherever he associated. He took a keen interest and participated in sports, and always conducted himself in a gentlemanly manner.

To his parents and other members of the family will be extended sincere sympathy in their bereavement. The brothers are Messrs. John, Robert, Richard, of this city and Harry, of Nova Scotia, and the sisters are Misses Annie and Agnes, also at home.

The funeral will take place from the family residence, 466 Mark street, Ashburnham, Thursday morning at nine o'clock, to St. Peter's Cathedral, and thence to St. Peter's cemetery.

NAVIGATION CO. FINED $100

Steamer Otonabee Carried Larger Number of Passengers Than Certificate Provides For

The Otonabee Navigation Company were fined one hundred dollars and costs, amounting in all to $102.95, at the police court this morning. The charge was that the steamer 'Otonabee' carried a larger number of passengers on a trip than was provided for in the boat's certificate.

Mr. R. F. McWilliams represented the defendants and pleaded guilty. Mr. E. L. Goodwill acted for the Dominion Government.

The action was brought by the Department of Justice of the Dominion Government for violation of the Canadian Shipping Act. On the 3rd day of August the steamer 'Otonabee' carried an excursion party from Millbrook up through the canal, and the number of passengers was in excess of the number the certificate of the boat allows for. The registrar, Mr. Robert Hall, collector of customs, had the boat arrested at Nassau, and this led to the information being laid.

GOOD NEWS AT LAST FOR YORK LOAN SHAREHOLDERS

Dividend of 25 Per Cent. Will be Declared—Official Announcement Made—114,000 Have Claims Against Defunct Company.

Toronto, Sept. 27.—After waiting patiently through four years of liquidation proceedings, 114,000 shareholders and claimants against the defunct York Loan and Savings Co., are now about to receive their first dividend of 25 per cent., according to an announcement made this morning by R. Home Smith, assistant manager of the National Trust Co., liquidators.

The company's staff has been writing cheques for several weeks, for those shareholders, whose actual claims are known, while the old York Loan office staff of twenty, is busy on the accounts of others.

Mr. Smith could not say exactly what the total amount of the first payment would be, but at the time of liquidation, the shareholders claims were figured out to total $1,500,000, which would indicate that the first payment would mean $375,000 in round numbers.

"The first payment will not be cash," Mr. Smith explained. "There are thousands of accounts, on which money was borrowed, and all indebtedness will be deducted on this dividend, so that the second will be all money."

The cheques are not yet dated and may not go out much before Christmas. There are still 10,000 books which have not been turned in. They will be paid when second dividends are declared if the books are turned in.

CHARGE OF THEFT WAS NOT PROVEN—BLACKLISTED

The evidence produced at the trial of Angus McDonald at the Police Court this morning in which he was charged with the theft of $10 from Mervyn Cowan, of Burketon, was in the Magistrate's judgment, not sufficient to warrant him finding the young man guilty, and the accused was discharged, but an order was made out for McDonald to be placed on the blacklist.

Crown Attorney Wood conducted the prosecution and Mr. G. N. Gordon acted in the interests of the accused.

Cowan's testimony was as follows; I came from Burketon Saturday night, September 13th, and on Monday night met McDonald at the City Hotel. We had a drink and left the bar by way of the back door, another man whom I did not know, accompanied us. We called at the Queen's Hotel and McDonald and I had another drink. After leaving this hotel and when on Aylmer street, between Charlotte and King streets, the prisoner put his hand in my trouser's pocket and took about $10. I was between the two men at the time. I complained to McDonald about the theft, but did not receive any answer, so I left their company and went to the Montreal House.

To Mr. Gordon witness said:—I had been drinking during the greater part of Monday. I had about six drinks in the morning, and a number in the afternoon and evening and also spent some money on cigars. I brought $35 with me, and of this sum I paid a bill of $20 at the house where I stayed. I also paid an account at Alex Elliott's, which amounted to between four and five dollars. Witness admitted that he mixed his drinks, and had a few highballs, although lager was the main drink.

Where did you spend the $20, asked Mr. Gordon.

None of your business, replied the witness.

When did you count your money last?

On Monday morning.

The witness could not say for a positive fact that he had $10 at the time he was robbed.

Several other witnesses were called for the prosecution, but when McDonald took the stand he denied having stolen the money and the case was dismissed.

SINGLE TAX SYSTEM IS REFERRED TO THE COUNCIL

The Legal Committee met last night and decided to send the letter of the Central Canada Citizen, Ottawa, asking the support of Peterborough in an attempt to introduce what is known as the single tax system, to the Committee of the Whole Council.

The adoption of the new system would mean that land would be taxed at a higher rate than buildings, so that the man who increases the value of his estate by improving his buildings would not be called upon to pay in proportion.

The question was discussed for some time, and on motion of Ald. McIntyre, the matter was referred to the Committee of the Whole Council.

LEGAL COMMITTEE DEALT WITH SEVERAL MATTERS AT MEETING LAST NIGHT

The Legal Committee had a busy session last night, several important matters being dealt with. There were present Ald. Turner, chairman; Ald. Duffus, Metheral, McIntyre and the Mayor.

A letter was read from the Central Milling Company, claiming that they had been overcharged in their tax bills for 1907, '08 and '09. Messrs. Holland and Fisher spoke in support of the claim. Mr. Holland said they did not complain of the taxes of 1907.

Mr. F. H. Dobbin addressed the committee in regard to printing a pamphlet to give excursionists coming to the city. He said a small pamphlet of about twenty pages could be issued for about $100 for 10,000.

It was moved by Ald. Duffus, and seconded by Ald. Metheral, that the committee report that it referred the claim of the Central Milling Company to the City Solicitor and that he advised that the taxes were correctly charged under the act referring to them, and under the circumstances he cannot make any recommendation in regard to them.—Carried.

A letter was read from Mrs. Emma H. Campbell regarding a house built by A. Tamblin partly on Donegal st., and on which she had a mortgage, and regarding which she understood there was an arrangement to exchange the land with him for the right of way for a stream.

On motion of Ald. McIntyre and Ald. Metheral, the committee decided to recommend that the property for which Mr. Tamblin has built his house be sold to him, and that in so doing an agreement be made for fiverting the stream through his property at any time the Council may wish to do so.—Carried.

A letter was read from the Rapid Tool Company saying they could not fyle a declaration that they had employed the number of hands required by the by-law fixing their assessment and asking that they be allowed the assessment.

On motion of Ald. Metheral and Ald. Duffus, the clerk was instructed to write the Rapid Tool Company and ask them if there is any change in the number of hands employed by them since their letter of July 10th was written and also what number of hands they are employing.—Carried.

Mr. Dobbin's suggestion was looked upon with favor by the committee and on motion of Ald. McIntyre and Duffus, it was decided to recommend that it be taken up early next year.

Peterboro' Lady Passed Away at Toronto—Was Thrown From Street Car

Special to the Review.

Toronto, Sept. 28.—Miss M. Peck, of Peterborough, died at two o'clock this morning at the residence of Mr. Peter Buckley, 123 Empress Crescent, where she had been visiting, as the result of a fall from a street car about 8 o'clock last evening. Miss Peck was returning to Mrs. Buckley's house from a call on friends, but the car did not stop when she rose to get off, and there being a rather sharp curve at the corner of King street and Beatty avenue, the swing of the car threw Miss Peck to the pavement. The fall fractured her skull and the woman was unconscious till she died.

An inquest is being held this afternoon.

Miss Peck was about fifty years of age, and comes of a well-known Peterborough family. Her body will be taken to Peterborough for the burial.

The death of Miss Peck will be regretted by a large circle of friends in this city. She was the second daughter of Mr. A. H. Peck, of Ashburnham. Mr. E. A. Peck left this morning to take charge of the remains. The funeral, which will be private, will take place from the family residence, 197 Mark street, Thursday afternoon to Little Lake cemetery.

THAT WATCH OF YOURS

Is in many respects similar to a railway engine. Let an engine be run without oil or cleaning and before long it will stop dead. Upon examination it will be found that the friction and wear and tear has ruined the machinery, and it is fit only for the scrap iron heap. Likewise your watch. You put it in your pocket, and while there is a kick in it, you, in your mistaken economy, do not consult the watchmaker, and consequently rob your watch of years of good service and also much of its former accuracy. The time-keeping qualities of a good watch are maintained and often improved by timely and skilful attention. If you have been one of the neglectful ones call around and see us.

ROBT. H, SHEPPARD TOLD REMARKABLE STORY YESTERDAY

to me in the Liberal Committee rooms. Mr. Bryson was present when it was handed me. That is the report I sent Mr. Waddell from time to time. None of that is true.

Q—Is anything even true on the first page of your report?

A—Yes, except the duplicated memo of $6.

I sent all these reports in to Waddell. They are not all true. These were all men that were away when I was canvassing. That is true.

Q—Then you were not deceiving Mr. Waddell up to page 6?

A—Oh yes. I was deceiving them. There is nothing in that except about men I canvassed, except the first page. This report was for Mr. Stratton. I was working for him. I handed in the report to the Liberal committee rooms and sent a copy to Waddell. I handled these reports.

I was working for Mr. Stratton and deceived Mr. Waddell in some instances. That report of mine about money circulating is not true. That is where I deceived Mr. Waddell. I consulted no one about my work except Mr Bryson. I did not tell him I was writing Waddell.

That letter was part of the game, I was playing. Having a good time all by myself. Mr. Stratton didn't hire me.

The report I sent Mr. Waddell was truthful, so far as I know.

The reason I sent the $10 I said was given me by Davidson was, I wanted to deceive Waddell. I didn't receive any money from him.

I reported I was getting money from the Conservative party to Mr. Stratton.

An affidavit was produced by the witness to refresh his memory and was taken by Mr. DuVernet. The affidavit was made in Mr. Hall's office.

I went there of my own free accord. There were no proceedings going on. I was going away and wanted Mr. Stratton to be in possession of the facts.

I handed Mr. Wilson monies. I think I gave him monies to hand to Gardiner, maybe $8.

Q—If you swore you got $12 from Bryson and handed it to Bryson, is that true?

A—No, that is not true.

Q—How much did you pay back altogether?

A—I think Mr. Waddell got back $35.

To Mr. DuVernet—"I voted for Mr. J. H. Burnham, as I agreed."

Mr. Watson—"With Mr. Kendrey, Waddell and Wilson, and would not have done so if they had not paid me well."

I went up to Mr. Stratton's house between five and six weeks after the election.

To Mr. Watson—I was employed by certain persons in the Conservative party to play a double game, as a kind of stool pigeon.

Q—They employed you to go into the Liberal committee rooms?

A—Yes.

Q—Who is the man engaged you to do that, to play a false part?

A—Three of them. Mr. J. G. M. Wilson, Mr. Brundrette and Mr. Kendrey, ex-M.P.

Q—Who offered you the consideration?

A—Between the parties mentioned, and they didn't pay as agreed, and I went and told Mr. Stratton.

I was asked by these parties to go to the Liberal committee rooms. They didn't actually ask me, but I understood that is what they wanted. I knew it was rather a mean business. I say I was engaged to lay a trap for Mr. Stratton. This occurred at the Angling Club rooms down the river, and afterwards I saw Mr. Kendrey and he seemed pleased and anxious that I should go ahead.

I was indirectly working for Mr. Stratton and didn't vote for him.

I got monies from the Conservative. The first I got was $20 from J. G. M. Wilson on Sept. 25, 1908, in the White House. Several travellers were around. When that was given me we were talking considerably about the election and he handed me an envelope with two $10 bills in and told me to keep quiet. I gave that money to Mr. Stratton six or seven weeks after the election. They were two bills of the Bank of Nova Scotia. On the slip attached to the bills Sept. 25th, 1908, $20 received from J. G. M. Wilson, initialled "R.H.S." I next received $15, Oct. 8th, 1908, from R. M. Waddell, near the corner of Mason's greenhouse on Water street. He gave them in bills—no envelope. He told me he would like to give me more, but hadn't it with him, but if I met him next day he would give me more. He met me in the Munro House next day and gave me $10. These are the bills received, three fives, $15 I received from Waddell. I gave them all to Mr. Stratton at the same time. He handed me the money and told me to go ahead and keep up the work. He knew I was supposed to be spying in the Liberal committee rooms. I next received on Oct. 19th, $10 from R. M. Waddell at the White House.

He told me it was all he could give me to go ahead. These are the two bills I received. I didn't use it because I had money of my own. I regarded it as tainted money and declined to use it. I was promised $200 by Mr. Brundrette and Mr. Kendrey didn't promise me any stated sum, he said. I would be well paid for my work. I only met Mr. Burnham once I think, during the election. He shook hands with me and asked me how I had been getting along, and I told him I was working in the Liberal committee rooms and I was trying to block certain people going there and he seemed pleased and told me to go on with the good work. I don't know who else was employed as a detective I didn't get any more money because they would not pay me and Waddell fought shy of me. He told me he hadn't. I intimated it to Wilson and he referred me to Waddell and when I interviewed Waddell he would like me. They didn't fulfil their contract and I suppose I am out that money.

I promised to vote for Mr. Burnham. I told that to Mr. Kendrey, Wilson, Waddell, and I think, Mr. Burnham himself. I voted for him. The sums I received from Bryson were for legitimate work I did going over the lists. I performed the work. We didn't make any stipulated price for my work Bryson and I. I understood I was to be paid for my work. I received no other money from Bryson. Waddell wanted me to act as deputy returning officer, and to try and get appointed. I didn't look for any position on election day and it was given to me unsolicited. I thought Mr. Stratton was not being used unfair about the protest. No one asked me to go, but I went to Mr. Stratton of my own account and told him the whole thing about the Pope cheque. I don't know what it was for. He and Grimason worked with me and should be paid. I was in close touch with Gardiner all the time. He knew I was making these reports. I don't think that any of these men I reported as wanting money got it. I think some of them would take it if they could get it. The list I sent in to Waddell of parties away were in fact away. If they weren't away I wouldn't have put them on that list. I had another copy of the list which I gave to Mr. Bryson after I was through with it. I don't remember asking for position of subchairman. I had always taken an active interest in the Liberal party and worked for Mr. Stratton. I don't remember at any time getting any instructions to do any work. I didn't bother with any other work outside of No. 1 Ward. I saw Gardiner several places around town—mostly at the Crown Hotel. I didn't go to the Conservative rooms at all during the campaign. It was quite natural. People would get suspicious if I went. I would not have voted for Mr. Burnham if I hadn't got their money. The question of my vote was never discussed with Mr. Stratton, Bryson, Glover or Walter Davidson.

There were quite a few employees of the C.G.E. Co. coming into the Liberal-Conservative rooms—about 30 or 40. I communicated that fact to Mr. Burnham, Wilson and Mr. Waddell. I reported the fact. The men stopped coming in. They dropped off a few at a time.

Adjournment then took place till ten o'clock Tuesday morning.

LITTLE HAVELOCK BOY WAS RUN OVER BY HEAVY WAGON

Was Badly Injured—Past Season Has Been Prosperous for Belmont Farmers—The News From Havelock.

Havelock, Sept. 27. — The young daughter of Mr. Gange, of the west end, who was run over by a rig some time ago, causing a wound that required several stitches to close, is able to be around again.

The four-year-old boy of Mr. Joseph Bertram, of George street, suffered an accident on Saturday that nearly proved fatal. A rig loaded with ashes was passing the house while the little lad was playing on the side of the road. The horses were very timid and required all the attention of the driver, who did not see the young fellow until close on him. The boy managed to escape the horses, but fell beneath the wheels of the heavy waggon, and they passed over his small body near the shoulders. At first it was thought that he was killed, but in a short time under medical aid he recovered consciousness, and at present is doing as well as can be expected.

Passenger train No. 4 did not reach Havelock until 2.30 p.m. on Sunday, owing to the accident at Pontypool.

Hembhall & Bryans have men engaged unloading three more cars of coal.

Mr. M. McNichol was in Peterborough on Saturday.

A number of carpenters from town left on Friday for Victoria Harbor, where they have secured work on the big elevator that is being built at that point.

The voters' list for the village of Havelock for 1909 has been issued.

The Belmont Township Council held their regular monthly meeting in the Havelock town hall on Saturday.

The farmers in Belmont are finishing up their work for the season by threshing, several machines operating in this district. They seem to be quite satisfied with the outcome this year. Hay, on account of the lack of rain during the latter part of June, was a little light, but can be called a fair crop. Grain this year has done well, being the best for several years back. Potatoes are also a good crop, selling at the present at 50 cents per bag. Other years potatoes had to be shipped in, but there will not likely be any scarcity this year. The farmers this year sowed an exceptionally large amount of corn and with good results. Apples are fairly plentiful, with a slight scarcity of the better winter apples. In the northern country, where the rocks somewhat hinder cultivation, the people take advantage of the marsh hay that grows in large amounts, and as a winter fodder for cattle, they find it nearly as good as the timothy.

Children's Day service was held in the Presbyterian church on Sunday afternoon.

Belmont council have determined to take advantage of the Ontario Government's liberal policy in helping along the good roads movement, and they have decided to expend $350, providing the Government will contribute $2,100 for the same object, of which there is little doubt. The money will be expended on three of the main roads in the township, one of which will be the road from Havelock to Trent Bridge.

Mr. J. R. Craig, of London, was in town on Saturday.

Mr. Rollie Jenner, of Smith Falls, was in town on Saturday.

Mr. Albert Armstrong, of the Horological School, Toronto, spent Sunday at his home here.

Mr. S. J. Crosset, of Buffalo, icing inspector for the Cudahy Packing Co., was in town on Monday inspecting the cars at the icing station here.

Mr. Jas. Thompson, M.P.P., was in Peterborough Wednesday on business.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Armstrong were in Marmora on Tuesday.

Mr. Albert Darling left on Wednesday for Napanee, where he has secured a position.

Rev. Mr. Caplan, of Toronto, a former pastor of St. John's church, town, but now engaged in conducting services throughout Ontario, in the interests of the Upper Canada Bible Society, preached in the Methodist church on Friday evening last in the interests of the society in Havelock. The lecture was very largely attended. Mr. Caplan will lecture in Marmora on the same subject on Monday evening.

Mr. J. D. Falconbridge, of Toronto, addressed the congregation of St. John's church at both services on Sunday in the interests of the Laymen's Missionary Movement.

FLAMES DESTROYED THE KITCHEN

What looked as though it would be a conflagration of serious proportions was nipped in the bud early this morning by the splendid work of the fire brigade.

The fire broke out in the residence of Mr. Barney Devlin, 263 Hunter street, in the terrace at the corner of Bethune and Hunter streets. A spark from the stove in the kitchen at the rear of the dwelling was the cause, it is thought, or else a spark from a passing double-header. As the kitchen is of wood it was soon a mass of flames and the kitchens on the two adjoining houses in the terrace quickly caught fire also.

The blaze was noticed by Messrs. C. H. Sawle, Tommy McDonough and another gentleman, and they awoke the residents of the terrace, and Mr. Sawle ran over to the fire station, a short distance away, and gave the alarm. When the brigade reached the fire the flames were leaping high from the burning kitchen and were also beginning to make progress on the other frame structures on either side. It was controlled and put out however before it had a chance to spread to the main dwellings.

The loss is estimated at two hundred dollars.

CAR OF BASS FINGERLINGS TO BE PLACED IN STONEY LAKE

The following self-explanatory communication has been received from Edward Tinsley, Superintendent of the Ontario Fisheries by Mr. F. J. Moore, Lakefield, Game and Fishery Overseer:

Sir,—I have arranged for a car of bass fingerlings for Stony Lake to-day (Tuesday) for Lakefield. The car will go by the train leaving here at 1.50 for Peterborough via Port Hope, and a special train has been arranged for from Peterborough to Lakefield. You will kindly have all arrangements made to unload this car as soon as it arrives and I think you had better meet it at Peterborough, and go along with it to Lakefield. I do not want any delay to occur after the car arrives [illegible] Lakefield.

Yours [illegible],
E. TINSLEY.

The Lamp of Poor Souls

By Marjorie L. C. Pickthall.

In many English churches before the Reformation, a little lamp was kept continually burning, called the Lamp of Poor Souls. People were reminded thereby to pray for the souls of those dead whose kinsfolk were too poor to pay for special prayers and masses.

Above my head the shields are stained with rust,
The wind has taken his spoil, the moth his part,
Dust of dead men beneath my knees, and dust,
Lord, in my heart.

Lay Thou the hand of faith upon my fears,
The priest has prayed, the silver bell has rung,
But not for him. O unforgotten tears,—
He was so young!

Shine, little lamp, nor let thy light grow dim.
Into what vast dread dreams, what lonely lands,
Into what griefs hath death delivered him
Far from my hands?

Cradled is he with half his prayers forgot.
I cannot learn the level way he goes.
He whom the harvest hath remembered not
Sleeps with the rose.

Shine, little lamp, fed with sweet oil of prayers;
Shine, little lamp, as God's own eyes may shine,
When He treads softly down His starry stairs
And whispers "Thou art Mine."

Shine, little lamp, for love hath fed thy gleam.
Sleep, little soul, by God's own hands set free.
Cling to His arms and sleep, and sleeping, dream,
And dreaming, look for me.

Scribner's Magazine, September.

"A Knight For a Day"

Contrary to what would be expected from its name, "A Knight for a Day" is not a laugh at the mail-coat period, but a rollic principally of today, to-morrow and the next day, of everyday people and one everyday place—Evanston, Ill.

The laugh knight of the story is a nervy little waiter, who appoints himself to the job after appropriating the knightly credentials of the real knight who chances to be a customer of the waiter and forgets to tip him, also the comic tale of a slattern house maid who enchants the waiter-knight and is herself enchanted by him; also subordinately, of the love of a romantic Corsican for a fair American, the whole being told joyously to the now eccentric, now gay, now tender strains of the most musical score of the year.

The big gaiety which delighted Chicagoans for a year, New Yorkers for six months and Bostonians for the past summer, comes to the Grand Opera House for an engagement of one night only with a matinee at 2.30 on Saturday, October 2. The fact that it is still under the direction of Mr. B. C. Whitney, its original producer, is a guarantee of the perfectness of the production which, for scenic splendor and entrancing electrical effects, is said to excel anything ever before attempted by this popular producer.

There are girls with the production, of course, and many of them—Candle-Light Girls, See-Saw Misses, Sweet Girl Graduates, Corsican Belles and Beaux, Stage Door Coquettes, Grand Opera Choristers and Dancing Maidens, all drilled under the personal supervision of Gus Sohlke, until they are a vital force in, rather a necessary adjunct to, the presentation. Many of the catchy songs will live long in memory, especially The Little Girl in Blue, Whistle as You Walk Out, I'd Like Another Situation Just Like That, What Fools We Mortals Be, The Garden of Dreams and Life is a See-Saw.

Lockjaw After Vaccination.

London, Sept. 28.—Arnold Court, the 16-year-old son of Wm. Court, London South, is in Victoria Hospital last night suffering from lockjaw following vaccination. Two weeks ago the lad was sent home by the principal of the school to be vaccinated and the operation was performed by Dr. Ferguson, who says the child probably brought on the disease by scratching the wound.

Murder Will Out.

In a county seat in one of the middle western states dwelt a lawyer who, after a practice of thirty years, had accumulated a competence and retired. Being a man of much more than ordinary ability, an excellent speaker, entertaining decided political views and enjoying the confidence of the community, he was urged by his friends to run for congress. He refused. In vain they pointed out the fact that a nomination would be equivalent to an election and pledged themselves to secure his nomination. He would not listen to them. A man high in the political councils of the state came to see him and added his persuasion.

"You ought to take that office," he said. "It might lead to something higher. You would make a national reputation."

"That's what I am afraid of."

"What do you mean by that?"

"Well," answered the lawyer hesitatingly, "I will tell you, but it is in strict confidence. It must not go any further. Many years ago, when I was young and inexperienced, I published a small volume of original poetry. So far as I know there is not a copy of that book in existence now, but one would turn up in some corner of the world if I were to run for office, and the papers would print extracts from it. I wouldn't have that happen for a million dollars. No, sir, nothing doing!"—Youth's Companion.

An Incomplete Assertion.

"I am a self made man," remarked the aggressive citizen.

"Well," answered Grandpa Whetstone, "go ahead."

"What more is there to say?"

"That remark about bein' [illegible] always requires explanation as to [illegible] an' apology."

Strong Help For Weak Kidneys

"Fruit-a-tives" is the Best Kidney Medicine in the World.

If people only realized the danger of Weak Kidneys, and the value of "Fruit-a-tives", there would be practically no Kidney Disease in Canada.

When the kidneys become congested (too full of blood) or strained from overwork, they can quickly be made well and strong again by taking a box or two of "Fruit-a-tives".

Pain in the back, frequent headaches, loss of appetite, sleeplessness, coated tongue, constant desire to urinate—these are the common symptoms of congestion of the kidneys.

The only possible way to relieve this congestion, is to force the bowels and skin to rid the system of more waste matter and thus allow the inflamed kidneys to rest and grow strong again.

"Fruit-a-tives", being fruit juices, intensified, soothes and stimulates the kidneys, and at the same time rouses the bowels and skin to healthy action.

"Fruit-a-tives", by their prompt action on bowels and skin, almost instantly relieves the intense pain in back and promptly takes away every trace of Kidney Disease.

If you are suffering with your kidneys, begin at once to take "Fruit-a-tives" and you will quickly realize the value of these tablets.

At dealers—50c a box, 6 for $2.50 or trial size, 25c—or from Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

Canadian Good Swimmers.

London, Sept. 28.—William Henry is very pleased at the result of his tour in Canada. He says life-saving is bound to make great headway in Canada. He found everybody extremely quick. Whereas the course of training in England lasts for six weeks, at Temagami the candidates went through the regime in two days.

Kills Father to Protect Mother.

Coshocton, Ohio, Sept. 28.—William Davis, 20 years old, killed his father during a quarrel between the boy's parents. The son says his father threatened to strike his mother and he struck him down with a hatchet. Eli Davis is said to have quarrelled with his wife because she did not cook breakfast to suit him.

Veterans Land Claims.

Ottawa, Sept. 28.—During the last fiscal year the Interior Department issued 5,279 certificates for a total of 1,649,230 acres, but at the close of the fiscal year only 345 veterans had located upon 110,400 acres, of those 166 located in Saskatchewan and 179 in Alberta.

Farmers Loses 35 Hogs.

Ottawa, Sept. 28.—T. Trudel, a Tyrville farmer, has had 35 hogs shot by order of the Department of Agriculture. The animals had contracted a disease resembling hog cholera.

Two-thirds of their value will be allowed by the Government.

Murdered Children.

Utica, N.Y., Sept. 28.—When arraigned yesterday on a charge of killing two Italian children and wounding a third, Theodore Rizzo sank to the floor in terror.

It is said he has confessed to having taken the children to the culvert for a criminal purpose and then, fearing they would tell, he shot them.

Tudhope Bylaw Carried.

Orillia, Sept. 28.—The bylaw to loan the Tudhope Carriage Co. fifty thousand dollars for twenty years, without interest, was voted on yesterday, and carried by a majority of 741, only 22 votes being cast against it. The Board of Trade and citizens made an organized effort to get the vote [illegible].

Cut It Out!

Brander Matthews voiced his opinion that correct language is that language currently used. If that be right, a certain teacher in a Manhattan school was wrong when she indignantly vented her dislike of slang. But the wrong was more her own than the scholars she reproved. During the playtime she had listened to the conversation of a number of the boys and noticed a predominance in their speech of American as it is spoken. Forthwith she assembled the offenders.

"Boys," she announced, "I wish you would use better language. I find you much addicted to using slang. Remember that we attend school to learn proper words to use. Slang is detestable. Hereafter you will have to cut it out!"

And for a time she wondered why the boys laughed.

It was a new note in their cordial intimacy, this nascent intrusion of the personal. To her it merely meant his very charming recognition of her maturity—that she was fast becoming a woman like other women, to be looked at and remembered as an individual and no longer classed vaguely as one among hundreds of the newly emerged whose soft, unexpanded personalities all resembled one another.

For some time now she had cherished this tiny grudge in her heart—that he had never seemed to notice anything in particular about her except when he tried to be agreeable concerning some new gown. The contrast had become the sharper, too, since she had awakened to the admiration of other men. And the awakening was only half convinced happiness mingled with shy surprise that the wise world should really deem her so lovely.

"A red headed girl," she said teasingly. "I thought you had better taste than—than"—

"Than to think you a raving beauty?"

"Oh," she said, "you don't think that!"

As a matter of fact he himself had become aware of it so suddenly that he had no time to think very much about it. It was rather strange, too, that he had not always been aware of it, or was it partly the mellow light from the lamp tinting her till she glowed and shimmered like a young sorceress, sitting so straight there in her turquoise silk and misty lace?

When Drina had gone to bed Boots also took his leave, and Selwyn rose, too, a troubled, careworn expression replacing the careless gayety which had made him seem so young in Miss Erroll's youthful eyes.

"Wait, Boots," he said. "I'm going home with you." And to Eileen, almost absently: "Good night. I'm so very glad you are well again."

"Good night," she said, looking up at him. The faintest sense of disappointment came over her—at what she did not know. Was it because in his completely altered face she realized the instant and easy detachment from herself and what concerned her? Was it because other people, like Mr. Lansing—other interests, like those which so plainly in his face betrayed his preoccupation—had so easily replaced an intimacy which had seemed to grow newer and more delightful with every meeting?

What was it, then, that he found more interesting, more important, than their friendship, their companionship? Was she never to grow old enough or wise enough or experienced enough to exact—without exacting—his paramount consideration and interest? Was there no common level of mental equality where they could meet—where termination of interviews might be mutual, might be fairer to her?

Now he went away, utterly detached from her and what concerned her, to seek other interests of which she knew nothing; absorbed in them to her utter exclusion, leaving her here with the long evening before her and nothing to do, because her eyes were not yet strong enough to use for reading.

Lansing was saying, "I'll drive as far as the club with you, and then you can drop me and come back later."

"Right, my son. I'll finish a letter and then come back."

"Can't you write it at the club?"

"Not that letter," he replied in a low voice and, turning to Eileen, smiled his absent, detached smile, offering his hand.

But she lay back, looking straight up at him.

"Are you going?"

"Yes. I have several"—

"Stay with me," she said in a low voice.

For a moment the words meant nothing; then blank surprise silenced him, followed by curiosity.

"Is there something you wished to tell me?" he asked.

"N-no."

His perplexity and surprise grew. "Wait a second, Boots," he said. And Mr. Lansing, being a fairly intelligent young man, went out and down the stairway.

"Now," he said too kindly, too soothingly, "what is it, Eileen?"

"Nothing. I thought—but I don't care. Please go, Captain Selwyn."

"No, I shall not until you tell me what troubles you."

"I can't."

"Try, Eileen."

"Why, it is nothing, truly it is nothing. Only I was—it is so early—only a quarter past 8."

He stood there looking down at her, striving to understand.

"That is all," she said, flushing a trifle. "I can't read, and I can't sew, and there's nobody here. I don't mean to bother you"—

"Child," he exclaimed, "do you want me to stay?"

"Yes," she said. "Will you?"

He walked swiftly to the landing outside and looked down.

"Boots," he called in a low voice, "I'm not going home yet. Don't wait for me at the Lenox."

"All right," returned Mr. Lansing cheerfully. A moment later the front door closed below. Then Selwyn came back into the library.

For an hour he sat there telling her the gayest stories and talking the most delightful nonsense, alternating with interesting incisions into serious subjects which it enchanted her to dissect under his confident guidance.

Alert, intelligent, all aquiver between laughter and absorption, she had sat up among her silken pillows, resting her weight on one rounded arm, her splendid young eyes fixed on him to detect and follow and interpret every change in his expression personal to the subject and to her share in it.

His old self again! What could be more welcome? Not one shadow in his pleasant eyes, not a trace of pallor, of care, of that gray aloofness. How jolly, how young, he was after all!

They discussed or laughed at or mentioned and dismissed with a gesture a thousand matters of common interest in that swift hour—incredibly swift unless the hall clock's deadened chimes were mocking time itself with mischievous effrontery.

She heard them, the enchantment still in her eyes. He nodded, listening, meeting her gaze with his smile undisturbed. When the last chime had sounded she lay back among her cushions.

"Thank you for staying," she said quite happily. "Do you think me interesting to real men, like you and Boots?" she asked.

"Yes," he said deliberately, "I do. I don't know how interesting, because I never quite realized how—how you had matured. That was my stupidity."

"Captain Selwyn," in confused triumph, "you never gave me a chance—I mean, you always were nice in—in the same way you are to Drina. I liked it—don't, please, misunderstand—only I knew there was something else to me—something more nearly your own age. It was jolly to know you were really fond of me, but youthful sisters grow faster than you imagine. And now, when you come, I shall venture to believe it is not wholly to do me a kindness—but—a little—to do yourself one too. Is that not the basis of friendship?"

"Yes."

"Community and equality of interests, isn't it?"

"Yes."

"And—in which the—the charity of superior experience and the inattention of intellectual preoccupation and the amused concession to ignorance must steadily, if gradually, disappear? Is that it too?"

Astonishment and chagrin at his misconception of her gave place to outright laughter at his own expense.

"Where on earth did you—I mean that I am quite overwhelmed under your cutting indictment of me. Old duffers of my age"—

"Don't say that," she said. "That is pleading guilty to the indictment and reverting to the old footing. I shall not permit you to go back."

"I don't want to, Eileen."

"I am wondering," she said airily, "about that 'Eileen.' I'm not sure but that easy and fluent 'Eileen' is part of the indictment. What do you call Gladys Orchil, for example?"

"What do I care what I call anybody?" he retorted, laughing.

Their light hearted laughter mingled delightfully—fresh, free, uncontrolled, peal after peal. She sat huddled up like a schoolgirl, lovely head thrown back, her white hands clasping her knees; he, both feet squarely on the floor, leaned forward, his laughter echoing hers.

"What nonsense! What blessed nonsense you and I are talking!" she said, "but it has made me quite happy. Now you may go to your club."

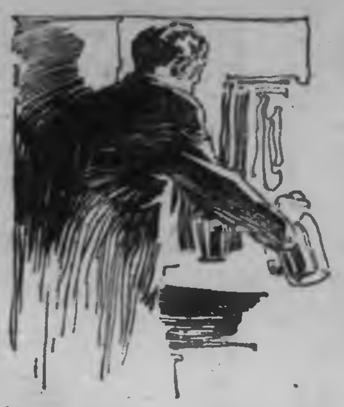
"I don't want to."

"Oh, but you must"—she was now dismissing him—"because, although I am convalescent, I am a little tired, and Nina's maid is waiting to tuck me in."

"So you send me away?"

"Send you"— She hesitated, delightfully confused in the reversal of roles—not quite convinced of this new power which of itself had seemed to invest her with authority over man. "Yes," she said, "I must send you away." And her heart beat a little faster in her uncertainty as to his obedience, then leaped in triumph as he rose with a reluctance perfectly visible.

"Tomorrow," she said, "I am to drive for the first time. In the evening I may be permitted to go to the Grays' mid-Lent dance, but not to dance much. Will you be there? Didn't they ask you? I shall tell Buddy Gray what I think of him, I don't care whether it's for the younger set or not! Goodness me, aren't you as young as anybody? Well, then, so we won't see each other tomorrow. And the day after that—oh, I wish I had my engagement list. Never mind; I will telephone you when I'm to be at home—or wherever I'm going to be. But it won't be anywhere in particular because it's Lent, of course. Good night, Captain Selwyn. You've been very sweet to me, and I've enjoyed every single instant."



Playing a siphon on a tall, thin glass.

When he had gone she rose, a trifle excited in the glow of abstract happiness, and walked erratically about, smiling to herself, touching and rearranging objects that caught her attention. Then an innocent instinct led her to the mirror, where she stood a moment looking back into the lovely reflected face with its disordered hair.

"After all," she said, "I'm not as aged as I pretended. I wonder if he is laughing at me now. But he was very, very nice to me."

* * * * * * *

Selwyn was playing the fizzing contents of a siphon upon the iced ingredients of a tall, thin glass which stood on a table in the Lenox club.

The governor's room being deserted except by himself and Mr. Lansing, he continued the animated explanation of his delay in arriving.

"So I stayed," he said to Boots, with an enthusiasm quite boyish, "and I had a perfectly bully time. She's just as clever as she can be, startling at moments. I never half appreciated her. She formerly appealed to me in a different way, a young girl knocking at the door of the world and no mother or father to open for her and show her the gimcracks and the freaks and the sideshows. Do you know, Boots, that some day that girl is going to marry somebody, and it worries me, knowing men as I do, unless you should think of"—

"Great James," faltered Mr. Lansing, "are you turning into a schatchen? Are you planning to waddle through the world making matches for your friends? If you are I'm quitting you right here."

"It's only because you are the decentest man I happen to know," said Selwyn resentfully. "Probably she'd turn you down anyway. But"—and he brightened up—"I dare say she'll choose the best to be had. It's a pity, though."

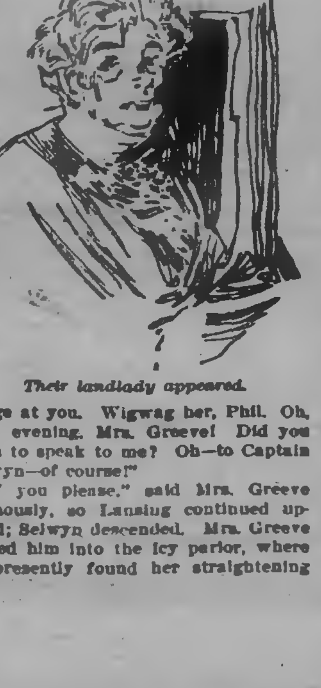
"What's a pity?"

"That a charming, intellectual, sensitive, innocent girl like that should be turned over to a plain lump of a man."

"When you've finished your eulogy on our sex," said Lansing, "I'll walk home with you."

As the two men entered their own door and started to ascend the stairs a door on the parlor floor opened, and their landlady appeared, enveloped in a soiled crimson kimono and a false front which had slipped sideways.

"There's the sultana," whispered Lansing, "and she's making sign language at you. Wigwag her, Phil. Oh, good evening, Mrs. Greeve! Did you wish to speak to me? Oh—to Captain Selwyn—of course!"



Their landlady appeared.

"If you please," said Mrs. Greeve ominously, so Lansing continued upward; Selwyn descended. Mrs. Greeve waved him into the icy parlor, where he presently found her straightening her "front" with work worn fingers.

"Captain Selwyn, I deemed it my duty to set up in order to inform you of certain specials doin's," she said haughtily.

"What 'doings?'" he inquired.

"Mr. Erroll's, sir. Last night he evidentially found difficulty with the stairs, and I seen him asleep on the parlor sofa when I come down to answer the milkman a-smokin' a cigar that wasn't lit, with his feet on the angelus."

"I'm very, very sorry, Mrs. Greeve," he said, "and so is Mr. Erroll. He and I had a little talk today, and I am sure that he will be more careful hereafter."

"There is cigar holes burned into the carpet," insisted Mrs. Greeve, "and a mercy we wasn't all insinuated in our beds, one window pane broken and the gas a blue an' whistlin' streak with the curtains blowin' into it an' a strange cat on to that satin dozydo, the proof being the repugnant perfume."

"All of which," said Selwyn, "Mr. Erroll will make every possible amends for. He is very young, Mrs. Greeve and very much ashamed, I am sure. So please don't make it too hard for him."

She stood, little slippered feet planted sturdily in the first position in dancing, fat, bare arms protruding from the kimono, her work stained fingers linked together in front of her. With a soiled thumb she turned a ring on her third finger.

"I ain't a-goin' to be mean to nobody," she said. "My gentlemen is always refined, even if they do sometimes forget theirselves when young and sporty. Mr. Erroll is now abed, sir, and asleep like a cherub, ice havin' been served three times with towels extra. Would you be good enough to mention the bill to him in the mornin', the grocer bein' sniffy?" And she handed the wadded and inky memorandum of damages to Selwyn, who pocketed it with a nod of assurance.

"There was," she added, following him to the door, "a lady here to see you twice, leavin' no name or intentions otherwise than business affairs of a pressin' nature."

"A—lady?" he repeated, halting short on the stairs.

"Young and refined, allowin' for a automobile veil."

"She—she asked for me?" he repeated, astonished.

"Yes, sir. She wanted to see your rooms. But havin' no orders, Captain Selwyn, although I must say she was that polite and ladylike and," added Mrs. Greeve irrelevantly, "a art rocker come for you, too, and another for Mr. Lansing, which I placed in your respective settin' rooms."

"Oh," said Selwyn, laughing in relief, "it's all right, Mrs. Greeve. The lady who came is my sister, Mrs. Gerard, and whenever she comes you are to admit her, whether or not I am here."

"She said she might come again," nodded Mrs. Greeve as he mounted the stairs. "Am I to show her up any time she comes?"

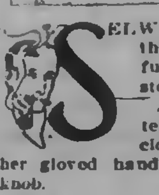
"Certainly. Thank you," he called back. "And Mr Gerard, too, if he calls."

He looked into Boots' room as he passed. That gentleman, in bedroom costume of peculiar exotic gorgeousness, sat stuffing a pipe with shag and poring over a mass of papers pertaining to the Westchester Air Line's property and prospective developments.

"Come in, Phil," he called out, "and look at the dinky chair somebody sent me." But Selwyn shook his head.

"Come into my rooms when you're ready," he said and closed the door again, smiling and turning away toward his own quarters. As he lighted his pipe there came a hesitating knock at the door. He jerked his head sharply. The knock was repeated.

Chapter 9



SELWYN walked swiftly to the door, flung it open full width—and stood stock still.

And Mrs Ruthven entered the room, partly closing the door behind, her gloved hand still resting on the knob.

For a moment they confronted one another, he tall, rigid, astounded; she pale, supple, relaxing a trifle against the half closed door behind her, which yielded and closed with a low click.

At the sound of the closing door he found his voice. It did not resemble his own voice either to himself or to her, but she answered his bewildered question;

"I don't know why I came. Is it so very dreadful? Have I offended you? I did not suppose that men cared about conventions."

"But why on earth did you come?" he repeated. "Are you in trouble?"

"I seem to be now," she said, with a tremulous laugh. "You are frightening me to death, Captain Selwyn."

Still dazed, he found the first chair at hand and dragged it toward her.

She hesitated at the offer; then "Thank you," she said, passing before him. She laid her hand on the chair, looked a moment at him and sank into it.

Resting there, her pale cheek against her muff, she smiled at him, and every nerve in him quivered with pity.

"World without end, amen," she said. "Let the judgment of man pass."

"The judgment of this man passes very gently," he said, looking down at her. "What brings you here, Mrs. Ruthven.

"Will you believe me?"

"Yes."

"Then it is simply the desire of the friendless for a friend, nothing else, nothing more subtle, nothing of effrontery, n-nothing worse. Do you believe me?"

"I don't understand."

"Try to."

"Do you mean that you have differed with"—

"Him?" She laughed. "Oh, no. I was talking of real people, not of myths. And real people are not very friendly to me always, not that they are disagreeable, you understand, only a trifle overcordial, and my most intimate friend kisses me a little too frequently. By the way, she has quite succumbed to you, I hear."

"Who do you mean?"

"Why, Rosamund."

He said something under his breath and looked at her impatiently.

"Didn't you know it?" she asked, smiling.

"Know what?"

"That Rosamund is quite crazy about you. There's no use scowling and squaring your chin. Oh, I ought to know what that indicates. I've watched you do it often enough, but the fact is that the handsomest and smartest woman in town is forever dinning your perfections into my ears."

He drew up a chair, seated himself very deliberately and spoke, his unlighted pipe in his left hand:

"The girl I left—the girl who left me—was a modest, clean thinking, clean minded girl, who also had a brain to use and employed it. Whatever conclusion that girl arrived at concerning the importance of marriage vows is no longer my business. But the moment she confronts me again, offering friendship, then I may use a friend's privilege, as I do. And so I tell you that loosely fashionable badinage bores me. And another matter—privileged by the friendship you acknowledge—forces me to ask you a question, and I ask it, point blank, Why have you again permitted Gerald to play cards for stakes at your house after promising you would not do so?"

The color receded from her face, and her gloved fingers tightened on the arms of her chair.

"That is one reason I came," she said, "to explain."

"You could have written."

"I say it was one reason. The other I have already given you—because I—I felt that you were friendly."

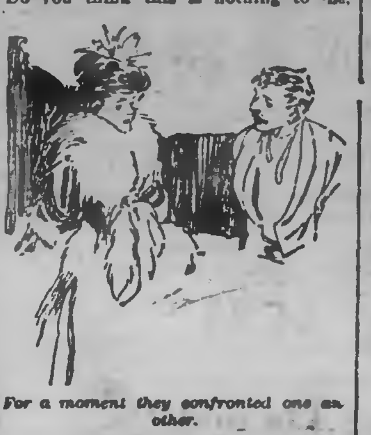
"I am. Go on. Please explain about Gerald."

"Are you sure," raising her dark eyes, "that you mean to be kind?"

"Yes, sure," he said harshly. "Go on."

"You are a little rough with me, a-almost insolent."

"I—I have to be. Good God, Alixe! Do you think this is nothing to me, this wretched mess we have made of life? Do you think my roughness and abruptness come from anything but pity—pity for us both, I tell you? Do you think I can remain unmoved looking on the atrocious punishment you have inflicted on yourself—tethered to—to that—for life—the poison of the contact showing in your altered voice and manner, in the things you laugh at, in the things you live for, in the twisted, misshapen ideals that your friends set up on a heap of nuggets for you to worship? Even if we've passed through the sea of mire, can't we at least clear the filth from our eyes and see straight and steer straight to the anchorage?"



For a moment they confronted one another.

She had covered her pallid face with her muff. He bent forward, his hand on the arm of her chair.

Her gloved hand, moving at random, encountered his and closed on it convulsively.

"Do you understand?" he repeated.

"Y-es, Phil."

Head still sinking, face covered with the silvery fur, the tremors from her body set her hand quivering on his.

WILLIAM ASHLEY SWORE HE GOT $2 FROM MR. LEARY

After Having Been Canvassed by A. Kingscote --- Was Afterwards Asked by Liberal Worker to Take Declaration That He Received no Money or Saw None Paid

When the court opened this morning at ten o'clock Walter G. Davidson was called.

He said in part: I reside in Peterborough and took some part in the election. I had no particular position. I was under no person's instructions. Well, I might say I had an extra office staff when they got too busy. I got Mr. Bryson to hire men and I paid them. Outside of that I handled no money. There were people in my office. Any work I couldn't get done in the office I got Bryson to get men to help me. We had a telephone in one small room in the committee rooms. Some nights there would be one hundred there, other nights not fifty. I principally worked with Mr. Bryson and Mr. Dunne in No. one ward, that would be in the south ward, and, I think, Mr. Duncan in No. one. In No. two Mr. Leary was working. I don't think Mr. Taylor would do a little work for Mr. Stratton, but principally he was in and out. Kingscote the same. E. S. Carty was not in the committee rooms at all. We had no ward committees that is, regularly appointed. There was a table for each ward; one person undertook to look after the ward, and any person coming in went to the particular table of his ward and was pumped for all he was worth for any information he had. The chairmen were: No. 1, A. H. Stratton; No. 2, Leary. I can't remember Nos. 3 and 4. No. 5 was, I think, Mr. Wm. Scott.

I was at the committee rooms nearly every night, but not in the day time. I never got a cent to distribute and paid no money except what I have testified to, amounting to about $40, which I gave to Mr. Bryson to pay the men he had hired to do work. I had no account from him, but took his word for it. I have no memo. showing payments. I don't remember the size of any amount I paid Bryson. I paid this in cash of my own motion. I don't know the number or size of bills which I paid to Bryson or the name of the bank. I don't know how many people were employed or what they were paid by Bryson. I never spoke to Sheppard about any money or paid him any money. I never spoke to Pope.

I suppose now I might have sent in an account against the candidate, but I didn't for any money I spent. I have never mentioned it to Mr. Stratton. I think the amount I spent was between $35 and $40. It was out of my own pocket. Some of the work I was doing was having books prepared for the canvassing of voters. It wasn't necessary for anyone to tell me what had to be done. I knew vouchers should be got for money expended, but you can't always get a voucher. I don't remember of ever taking any vouchers. I didn't know how many men were being hired. Grimison I saw around the committee rooms. I didn't pay him anything. I think I saw him there during the day time, but whether he was doing any work, I don't know.

Bryson didn't tell me to whom he was paying this money, and I didn't enquire.

The witness, in reply to Mr. Watson, said he was in the habit of working at elections for some time past, and volunteered his services without speaking to anyone about it. There are always a number of people start in any work. It is for a good cause. There was an important meeting at which men were selected to look after different wards. There was no particular request that he knew of to anyone to work. The principal work to be done was getting and tabulating information. Mr. Stratton took no part in any of these proceedings at any time to my knowledge. I don't think he knew the name of a chairman. Any work I did was voluntary. Bryson's was work that had to be done—preparing data, sending out circulars. No work was done, to my knowledge, of an illegitimate character. I got the results of Bryson's work and workers. If the work had been done in the office I would have kept no track; it being done in that way by Bryson for me I did not keep track. The matter has not been mentioned by me to Mr. Stratton or his official guardian, Mr. Goodwill.

Charge 18—Aaron Bonskill. Paid $2 as inducement to vote.

The charge is absolutely false, as far as I know.

As to the Swangee charge, as far as he knew, was false, and there was not the slightest foundation for it.

Charge 99—Paying R. H. Sheppard $2.00.

No money paid by witness to any party to vote. Don't know Swangee or Bonskill.

Charge 98—Payment to Mr. Bryson to induce him to vote.

Didn't think Bryson could be bribed to vote. There is nothing in the charge.

Charge 102—Oct. 21, 1908, paid Robt. Sheppard $10 to induce him to vote.

Didn't know Sheppard was one of the men Bryson employed to work. Sheppard was paid no money by him. Didn't know Sheppard was a spy or that he was in the rooms until the last few days of the election, when he became suspicious. Grimison has always been a Liberal and it wasn't necessary to ask him to vote.

To Mr. DuVernet—He said he was there on the day of the election and saw no money paid. I was in the little room with Leary and saw no strings of people coming out with money. I think probably I was asked for money on election day. I can't remember the names of any person that may have asked me. I don't know Bonskill and Swangee, but couldn't say. Would'nt say I was asked for money in the small room, it was in the committee room. Leary was in and out of the small room, he was there all day pretty near by himself.

To Mr. Watson—Gave neither Bonskill or Swangee or any person else any money on election day.

Aaron Bonskill and William Swangee were called as witnesses but did not answer to their names and Mr. DuVernet then stated he would go on with the Leary charges—those in which he was mingled, and intimated the first charge taken up would be 187, William Ashley's. 188, 189, 190, 14, 13, 11, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20 and 21, 35, 61, 93, 94, 96 and 97, 107, 108, 110, 113, and 207, the same offence, 114, 115, and 116, 162 and 163, 172, 173, 174, 175, 179 and 176, 241, 187, 188, 189, 190, 242, 244, 245, 249.

WILLIAM ASHLEY.

William Ashley was called by Mr. DuVernet on charge 187. Lives in Peterborough and voted at this election. I know Alfred Kingscote. He came around to my house the evening before.

Mr. Watson—The formal objection is noted—no agency.

He asked me for my vote. I told him I was not quite decided. He asked me to come round the next day and gave me a note to give to Leary—my name and his name, nothing else. I destroyed the note after I was supoenaed. No sum of money was mentioned. I went to the committee rooms and saw Mr. Leary in the little room. Leary didn't look at it. I didn't hand over the original. Leary gave me $2. There were other people present, but I could not say who they were. The room was up stairs and to the right. I saw men coming in and going out. When I went in I gave note to Leary and he asked me if my name was on the voters' list. I said yes and he gave me $2. There was no waiting and Kingscote said to the day before, "vote for the right party." No mention was made of any party. He said I will meet you in the committee room. I met him there. I was given the note to Leary the day before.

I didn't think the note was of any importance or value, so I destroyed it. I saw no money in the little room—it was produced from his pocket, rolled up. I didn't tell Leary. I had come from Kingscote. Leary asked me if I was on the voters' list. I was taken up to Mr. Hall's office by Mr. Glover, and asked to make a declaration there. Mr. Leary denied giving me the money. I was asked to make a declaration that I hadn't been offered, seen or received any money. I didn't sign the declaration. There was something said about $2.00 if I would sign.

The witness was then cross examined by Mr. Watson.—Am not the kind of man who would sell his vote for $2 or any sum. Wouldn't tolerate the idea of being bribed to vote. Possibly I might resent it. It would depend on how much I wanted the money. I never did take money for my vote. Not influenced as to how I should vote by any money. I should vote which way I liked. I resented a proposition to me made some time before the election took place. I did want the money, but not for my vote. I did not understand it had anything to do with my vote. My occupation is an artisan, a decorator.

Mr. Watson—Decorator of court rooms?

Witness—Or any other room.

I never sold my vote on any other occasion. I supposed this money was given me to drink Mr. Stratton's health. It might possibly be to drink Mr. Burnham's health. I didn't go to the committee room to get money. Kingscote didn't ask me to vote for Mr. Stratton. I didn't say for whom I was going to vote. I had made up my mind previously as to whom I would vote for. I voted accordingly. Mr. Watson having told the witness the day before was Sunday. I made a mistake in the day Kingscote came to me. It was not on the day before I saw him, but the day of the election. No one saw me before election day. I told no one else that I had been called on. I saw Leary about 4. I hadn't voted then. I went to see how the polling was going on out of curiosity—had no other reason for going there. Went to the Conservative rooms the same way. I went there in the morning because I went to the other in the afternoon. I was in the Conservative rooms possibly an hour. I saw many people there. I didn't get any money there and didn't ask for any. Hadn't worked for Mr. Burnham at all. No one suggested to me in the Conservative rooms that I should go to the Liberal committee rooms. I met Mr. Kingscote in the committee room that day. Don't know the name of any other person there. I had no conversation with Kingscote that day. I voted between half-past four and five. No one went with me to vote. No one sought to influence my vote by any act or thing I know of. I saw people coming in and going out of the little room. I had an idea there was money being given away and that made me want some. I had seen Mr. Leary at that time. I didn't know his name at that time. Leary asked me if my name was on the voters' list and paid me the $2. I don't know what the money was for. I thought it was a present. I didn't think it was to influence my vote, because I was not asked how I would vote. I handed Leary some small bill I had received. He put it in his pocket.

That little paper I got from Kingscote I showed to no one. I didn't show that to Mr. Burnham. I never saw Burnham about the matter or anyone else. I voted about quarter to five—between 4.30 and five. I saw this poster offering a man giving information leading to a conviction for bribery, $10 reward, and I didn't go to anyone with my story. I don't know how it was found out. I never mentioned this matter to anyone. I was not in Mr. Moore's office and never had a talk with anyone about this matter. I have been in Mr. Hall's office twice. Mr. Roland Glover called around at my house and took me there about a month ago. Glover told me Mr. Leary denied giving me any money.

Mr. Davidson, Mr. Glover and myself were the persons. I never asked for $50 at that time.

Q—At that time didn't you say in the presence of Mr. Glover and Mr. Davidson that if you got $50 you would swear you didn't get any money?

A—No, sir.

Q—If these persons say you did say it?

A—Their statements would be false.

I had another interview at Mr. Hall's office about a week ago. They sent for me. A man by the name of Gates asked me. He met me on the street. I knew him before. He said Will you come with me to Mr. Hall's office to-night, they want to see you? I didn't ask what for. They wanted to see me in respect of the subpoena. I met Mr. Gates at the corner of the post office. Gates and myself were there and Mr. J. R. Stratton. Mr. Leary came in afterwards.

Q—Did Mr. Gates say if he were paid $400 that he would make an affidavit saying he received no money from Leary?

A—No, sir.

Q—Then how much?

A—$200.

Q—Whom did he say that to?

A—Mr. Hall.

Mr. Hall said that he understood that Gates said he would make that after if he was paid $400. I believe that is correct. Gates, I suppose, wanted the money and that he wanted $400 in the presence of these gentlemen.

Q—What else occurred with Gates?

A—The money was refused.

Q—By whom?

A—By Mr. Hall.

Q—What did Mr. Hall say?

A—I forget the exact words, but he said it was impossible.

Q—What else did Mr. Hall say?

A—That is all.

Q—Did Mr. Stratton say anything?

A—I don't think so.

Q—Did Mr. Davidson say anything?

A—I don't think so.

Q—Or Mr. Leary say anything?

A—I don't think so.

Q—Mr. Hall said it was impossible?

A—Yes.

Q—Then what did Mr. Gates say?

A—He got up and the two of us walked out.

Q—What else occurred at that meeting? Did anything occur in respect to yourself?

A—I was asked by Mr. Hall if I would accept $200.

Q—Was that after he told Mr. Gates it was impossible to give him the money?

A—The same time. I couldn't say which occurred first.

Q—Did he offer Mr. Gates a similar sum?

A—No; he said it was impossible. I don't know whether there was something occurred with you?

A—I was asked if I would accept.

Q—Who asked you?

A—Mr. Hall. He said I understand you want $200.

Q—For what?

A—About signing the affidavit.

Q—What affidavit?

A—That I didn't see or handle any money.

Q—What did you reply to that?

A—That was right.

Q—When Mr. Hall said that?

A—That was right.

Q—That you did not want the $200?

A—It was right what Gates had said.

Q—That Gates had told him you wanted the $200?

A—Yes.

Q—Then what else did you say?

A—I didn't say anything.

Q—Then why didn't you get the $200?

A—I believe it was done to get information from us.

Q—So that you had told Gates before you would?

A—I never told Gates anything of the money. It was arranged in Mr. Hall's office.

Q—Did Gates say he would make the affidavit, did Gates offer to Mr. Hall to make the affidavit that he had seen no money pass and didn't get any money from Leary and Davidson?

A—It was arranged at a previous meeting. I wasn't there.

Q—I am speaking of what he said. Did he offer to make that affidavit to Mr. Hall?

A—I couldn't say.

Q—You have already deposed here he offered to make the affidavit if he got $400.

A—Mr. Hall asked him if it was correct that he would sign the affidavit for $400. I believe he said he would.

Q—How did Gates come to get you mixed up in it?

A—He asked me if I would go to Hall's office and sign an affidavit.

Q—What were you to get?

A—$200.

Q—From whom?

A—I don't know.

Q—So you told Gates if you got the $200 you would make the affidavit?

A—I didn't say so. I said "That was so—what Gates had been saying.

Q—Then you wanted the $200?

A—That was right.

This matter was not arranged between Gates and myself previously. I got no money and no money was offered me. Mr. Leary didn't say in my presence that my getting $200 from him was untrue. Mr. Hall said it was. If I had got the $200 I might have taken it and used it as a gift. I should not have signed the affidavit. I told him it was correct what Gates had said. It is not correct that I offered in the presence of Mr. Davidson and Mr. Glover to make an affidavit that I had received no money. I knew nothing about the payment of any money if I received $50. I didn't on the 21st Sept in the presence of Mr. Stratton, Mr. Leary, Mr. Davidson, and Mr. R. R. Hall say I would make such a declaration or affidavit if paid $200. I made no such statement myself expressly. All I said was, "That it was correct what Mr. Gates had said".

Mr. DuVernet re-examined the witness as to his conversations in Mr. Hall's office and the court then adjourned for lunch.

AN ELECTION IN JANUARY

If Lords Reject Budget Asquith Will Go to Country

London, Sept. 29.—Should the House of Lords reject the budget a general election will be held in January, by which time the new registry of voters will be ready. This announcement was semi-officially made last night.

There is a growing feeling among the Liberals, however, that the Upper House will not take this drastic step. One of the influences making for peace is the King, who is adverse to having an acute constitutional issue raised. Mr. Balfour and Lord Lansdowne are also believed to favor the House of Lords passing the budget.

The more ardent tariff reformers, on the other hand, demand its rejection, and it is expected that their representatives in the Lords, led by Lord Milner, will urge this policy.

The Upper House in the meantime is further aggravating the Liberals. Lord Lansdowne last night, while persuading the Lords not to reject the Irish land bill, promised to support the drastic amendments to this measure when it reaches the committee stage.

IMPORTING GOLD INTO CANADA

Montreal, Sept. 29.—Gold to the amount of $800,000 was received in Montreal yesterday, of which $500,000 was for the Bank of Montreal and $300,000 for the Bank of Nova Scotia.

The gold was withdrawn from the New York market, where the banks have large available reserves for monetary contingencies, and will be available for domestic requirements.

The return of this gold to this country is coincident with an increasing demand for funds throughout Canada.

Apart from the general stimulation in practically all channels of trade and commerce throughout the Dominion, which would naturally call for a greater volume of money than a year ago, it is customary at this time of year to prepare for a rush of exports.

This rush usually sets in a month and a half or two months before the closing of navigation. It is evident the banks are preparing for the situation.

PEARY'S CHARGES AGAINST COOK

Bar Harbor, Me., Sept. 29.—Commander Peary's statement against Dr. Cook includes the following charges: "That Cook's Eskimos say he was not out of sight of land; that Cook has brought back his records; that Cook could not have traveled the 1,700 miles between Annotok and the pole and return to Jones Sound in one sleighing season; that his equipment was inadequate; that Cook's glass mercurial horizon could not have withstood the cold; that Prof. Marion and Capt. Bartlett have brought back duplicate records of Peary's march; that Cook's sledge could not have stood the journey; that his snowshoes were "impracticable," that Cook left his records at Etah so as to purposely last; that no man who had carried the flag to the pole would have left it with a stranger; that Cook could have carried his belongings to Uupnavik, that Whitney could have returned on the Jeannie for the records and didn't."

WALKED RIGHT IN, GOT TWO DOLLAR BILL, AND THEN HE WALKED RIGHT OUT AGAIN

One Witness Says no Words Were Spoken Between Himself and Mr. Leary in the Small Room at the Liberal Quarters on Election Day --- Two Dollars Was Placed on Table and Witness Put it in His Pocket

Harry Butler Told Mr. Leary That Two Was Not Enough and He Got Two Dollars More—The Evidence at This Morning's Session.

When the Stratton election protest trial opened this morning, Mr. Watson objected to the way Mr. DuVernet was conducting the case. He wanted the evidence taken pro and con.

Anthony Monger was the first witness called. He was at the Liberal committee rooms on election day and gave some information as to whom and what he saw there.

Sammy Pope, examined by Mr. DuVernet, told about being at the Liberal committee rooms on election day and getting two dollars in the small room. Mr. Leary placed the money on the table and witness picked it up, put it in his pocket and walked out. He was at rooms in morning.

He was told to come back in the afternoon and it would be all right. When he left the rooms he went to a polling booth. After he voted he went back to the committee room about three o'clock. "I went by myself," witness said, "and I hung around till after five."

Did you see what happened to Harland and Pritchard?

They were wandering around the room.

Who else did you see up there?

I saw some people I knew by sight, but I don't know their names. I hung around till after five o'clock, and then I went home and got my supper.

When was the next you heard about the matter?

I heard that there was going to be trouble.

When did you hear that?

Some time after the election. Some man named Will told me he had my name.

What happened then? Were you taken to see anybody?

Not then.

What came then?

I took an affidavit.

How was that?

A man came around to me. His name is Pears. He said Rollie Glover wants you; it may be a better job than you got. I was taken to Stratton's office. Mr. Stratton said to me, "You received no money," and I said no. After that Pears took me to an office on Hunter street.

What office?

I think it was that gentleman. I would not be sure.

Witness indicated Walter S. Davidson.

Someone told me that I had better be careful or I would get myself in a nice box.

Was Pears present when you had the conversation with Mr. Stratton? asked Justice McMahon.

I can't say. He was there, but I don't know whether or not he came into the private office.

Were you working during the election?

Yes, for Mr. Glover.

What were you doing?

I was delivering circulars, newspapers and bills and work like that. I got $1.50 per day for that. That was about three weeks just before the election?

Mr. DuVernet showed witness the declaration he had signed, and he said the signature was his.

To Mr. Watson witness said he had been in Canada three years. He was asked if he had been at the soup kitchen last winter.

I was at my brother's.

Were you at the kitchen, yes or no?

I was not.

You never got anything there?

No; nothing.

Witness said he went to Mr. Stratton about three months ago.

I told Mr. Stratton I did not get any money.

Who were present?

There were people walking in the main office but I do not remember if they came into the private office. Mr. Stratton said "You never received any money," and I said no. He told me to come in and see him again presently, or words to that effect.

Did you regard your answer an important one?

Yes.

Will you tell a lie?

Not easily.

You will tell a lie if you thought it was to your interest?

Not about money, but I was afraid.

You told some persons you had not received money?

Yes.

Many.

A few, Mr. Stratton and Mr. Davidson.

Any others?

Some; but not as many as I told that I got money.

When I said I got money I was telling lies.

Did anyone ask you for your vote on election day?

I was asked by both sides to vote.

Who asked you?

I did not know them. There were lots of them.

Did you tell them how you were going to vote.

No. I said there was plenty of time.

Describing what he saw at the committee rooms on the afternoon of election day, witness said he saw Mr. Leary hustling around. He didn't know if Mr. Davidson was there or not.

Did you go into the small room?

Yes.

Were there many going into that room?

No, not many when I was there. I heard there was money knocking around and I went in there to find out if that was true. I went into a small room. I saw a wad of bills in Bob's hand.

Why do you say a wad?

Because there was a number of them. He was holding them just like a business man would.

What happened then?

He took a bill out of his hand, put it on the table, put a box over it, and turned around. I picked up the bill and put it in my pocket and walked out.

WILLIAM SWNAGEE.

William Swanger was called and to Mr. DuVernet said he lived at 29 Rubidge street and voted at the last election. On the Saturday night before the election he was at the Liberal rooms about seven o'clock in company with others and remained there about one hour and a half. They were both up and down stairs. He saw Bryson who said "that it would be all right."

Was anything said about money?

Mr. Bryson never mentioned money.

I made a declaration seven or eight weeks ago, witness said.

How did that come about?

A friend and I were taking our customary Saturday afternoon walk up town and we met Alfred Killingbeck, a young man, who works in the shop.

He said that Mr. Darke was looking for us.

Roland Glover said to me, "perhaps it is better that you have received no money." I was taken up to Mr. Hall's office. Mr. Glover introduced us to Mr. Hall and I made an affidavit.

My mind was so engrossed with the first part of what was read to me that I did not notice the rest much.

That is not correct, witness said when Mr. DuVernet read that portion of the affidavit, referring to there being no promise to pay him money.

A squabble followed between Mr. Watson and Mr. DuVernet as to questioning witness about the promise and their Lordships ruled that the question was not in order.

To Mr. Watson witness said that he would resent being offered money for his vote or being promised money for his vote. He had never been given any money at all. There was no mention of money at all.

AARON BOUSKILL.

Aaron Bouskill followed Wm. Swangee in the box. To Mr. DuVernet he said he voted at the last election.

I was at the Liberal committee rooms on the Saturday before the election. Mr. O'Brien approached us and asked us what we wanted.

What did Bryson say to you?

He said he would make it all right with us.

Then came an objection from Mr. Watson and a delay followed. When the matter had been settled the witness was asked to step down on the grounds that his was "hearsay evidence" and not bearing directly on one of the charges.

HARRY BUTLER.

Harry Butler said he resided in Peterborough and voted at the last election. He was at the committee rooms on the day of the election about 3.30 in the afternoon. He saw Leary upstairs in the large room. Someone introduced witness to Leary and Leary went away. He came back to me again. He called me over and took me in the little room. He took me out a two dollar bill and put it under the little box and I took it and put it in my pocket. I told him I didn't think it was enough.

"My God Butler, if they were all like you they would break the bank," Leary said.

What happened then?

I got $4.

Was that before you voted?

Yes.

Before you went in did you see anything happen?

I saw persons going in and out of the little room.

How many?

I couldn't say. I saw several.

You say that Leary put down two dollars and you said that was not enough. Then he put down another two dollars and you took it. Is that correct?

Yes.

To Mr. Watson witness said he did not know Glover.

I was asked to sign a declaration witness said. "They did not ask me if there was any truth in the charge that was read over to me. Mr. Davidson, Mr. Glover and Mr. Hugh Darke were present. This was after the election. I didn't say anything about the charge. I refused to sign the declaration.

Continuing witness said he was looking for money on election day. He did not want to sell his vote.

Pressed by Mr. Watson witness said the money might influence his vote. He had been asked by Mr. Kingscote and Mr. Taylor before the election to vote. He had not been asked to vote by Mr. Leary or at the committee rooms.

Witness also told about Leary asking him if he had voted and when witness said no, Leary got a rig for him and he was driven to the poll.

Adjournment then took place.

A BOARD OF COMMERCE IS WANTED

Montreal, Sept. 29.—The Dominion Board of the Retail Merchants' Association decided at their fifth annual convention, held here yesterday, to ask the Federal Government to appoint a board of commerce, to which all matters of trade may be submitted.

The board's local president, J. G. A. Filion, delivered the opening address and ex-President Green of Belleville replied.

M. E. Trowern, secretary, Toronto read his report, which declared that the association was destined to be one of the greatest importance to the retail trade of Canada.

Electrify All Railroads.

Chicago, Sept. 29.—An ordinance providing that all steam railroads entering Chicago shall be electrified after Jan. 1, 1912, within eight miles of the city hall, was introduced on Monday night in the city council. It was referred to the committee on local transportation.

It is said that compliance with such an ordinance would mean an expenditure of $150,000,000.

Improved Trade With Australia.

Ottawa, Sept. 29.—D. H. Ross, the trade commissioner at Melbourne, reports a decided revival in trade in Australia, and that Canadians are getting a fair share of the trade therefrom resulting. This is especially the case in farm and garden implements, dry goods and medicines.

Sold Rig; Stole It Back Again.

Chatham, Sept. 29.—Frank Roe, insurance agent, son of a prosperous farmer of Raleigh, is charged with stealing a horse and rig worth $140, which he had sold the night previous to John Baker for $25. He then went to the livery where Baker put it and, hitching up, drove home.

Secretary of War a Hero.

Washington, Sept. 29.—For jumping into the river at Detroit, Mich., and rescuing James F. Low, a Detroit lawyer, in August, 1895, Secretary of War Dickinson was yesterday presented with a gold medal.

TO UNITE LABOR BODIES ORGANIZATION 20,000 STRONG

Railway Brotherhoods and P.W.A. Will be Approached With a View to Amalgamation With the Federation of Labor.

Ottawa, Sept. 29.—Interesting references and recommendations pertaining to the military scare; to the status of foreign labor organizations in Canada; to the question of immigration and other matters, appears in the reports and addresses made at the first annual convention of the Canadian Federation of Labor, which opened here yesterday. Some 60 delegates are here with President J. W. Patterson of Ottawa, in the chair.

The executive committee's report drew attention to the work of foreign labor organizations in Canada, and asked the convention to consider the advisability of inviting the Government to enquire into their operation. Imperial defence, it was stated, was at present looming large before the people, and a recommendation was made that the convention place itself on record as declaring in favor of voluntary military service, as represented by our militia system, and not a regular army, and, approving of a naval policy consistent with the needs and resources of the country, but preserving complete Canadian autonomy in the matter of control. All warships or military equipment should be manufactured in Canada.

The attention of the convention was drawn to the drastic way in which the American alien labor law is operated.

The committee gave notice that it would ask the convention to petition the Government to make the Lemieux or Industrial Disputes Act applicable to all industrial disputes.

A committee was appointed to confer with the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employes and the P.W.A. regarding amalgamation. This would make a national body 20,000 strong.

Two important resolutions were laid on the table, to come up for discussion. One refers to the question of military bands joining international bodies, and the other has a proposal to tax foreign employes of foreign corporations.

TWO MEN WERE KILLED IN PHILADELPHIA HOLD-UP

Philadelphia, Sept. 29.—Two are dead and one other is in the hospital in this city suffering from bullet wounds as a result of a hold-up in a saloon at York road and Lymington street, in the northern part of the city late Monday night.

The dead men were James Quinn, 23 years old, and Henry F. Saylor, aged 33. John J. Cassidy, aged 37, was not badly hurt.

Young Quinn and two customers were chatting in the well-lighted saloon, when a stranger walked up to the bar. Quinn found himself looking into a revolver. The man was tall and well built and was dressed in dark clothes. A soft hat was pulled over his eyes and a black handkerchief was bound across his mouth and chin. His shoes and trousers were covered with mud.

"Everybody, hands up," was his first command.

"Say, aren't you kidding?" asked Quinn.

"Nix," said the robber, turning the revolver until he covered each man.

"Hand out some money, open that cash drawer," he commanded.

"I guess you are in earnest," said Quinn, as he walked to the drawer behind the bar. Quinn opened the drawer, but the robber called out: "Hurry up, you."

Quinn grabbed a handful of bills, about $47, when the man fired. The bullet struck Quinn in the abdomen.

The police have a theory that the robber thought Quinn was looking for a revolver. Cassidy and Saylor both ran for the door. The robber swung around and said: "Stand where you are. You are not going out to bring the police down on me."

Cassidy says he stopped, but was shot in the side. What happened to Saylor is not fully known, but he was shot under the heart and died yesterday.

NEW CATHOLIC DIOCESES IN WEST

London, Sept. 29.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—A despatch from Rome says that as a result of the first plenary council of the Roman Catholic Church in Canada proposals have been made to the Vatican for the creation of new dioceses, especially in the western provinces, including one the bishop of which would reside in Regina. The sub-division of the dioceses in the eastern provinces is also suggested. If a redistribution took place the diocese of Ottawa would probably be split up into dioceses, the provincial border being taken as the ecclesiastical boundary. Such division is more likely in consequence of the French-Canadians' claim for a diocese and bishop of their own.

SHIP FOUNDERS; EIGHT DROWNED

Philadelphia, Sept. 29.—Eight men were drowned and seven had a narrow escape from death by the foundering of the Norwegian coal steamer Gere, six miles from the winter quarter lightship, fifty miles south of the Delaware Capes.

The only boat had been swept clear and was floating away and there was nothing for the men to do but jump into the sea. The stronger swimmers struck out for and reached the drifting boat, and after a two-hour struggle made it seaworthy. The weakest of the swimmers and two that could not swim went down one by one.

NO FLAG IN A SALOON

London, Sept. 29.—Speaking in the House of Commons yesterday, Patrick O'Brien, M.P., drew the attention of Premier Asquith to an incident at the reception at Castlereach, Sept. 18, of two delegates from the United Irish League of America, come in response to an invitation by John Redmond and other Irish leaders, when the police ordered a local saloonkeeper to remove the American flag. O'Brien declared that this was regarded in America as an insult to the flag, and he suggested that Ambassador Bryce be instructed to apologize.

In reply, Mr. Asquith said that the display of any flag in a liquor saloon was illegal, and that the Union Jack had been ordered removed on a similar occasion.

Painesville, Ohio, Sept. 29.—Only the bravery of two telephone girls, Hazel Christian and Alice Warren, sleeping in the telephone exchange at Perry, a village near here, saved that town from possible destruction by fire early yesterday.

Fire broke out in a store beneath the exchange. The girls were alone, but stuck to their posts and telephoned the sleeping citizens and called the Painesville and Madison fire departments. While talking with the Painesville fire chief, the flames burned the wires.

BANQUET TO HON. MR. PUGSLEY

St. John, N.B., Sept. 29.—Dr. Pugsley was given a big reception at the Liberal banquet in his honor last night. He spoke in praise of the Liberal members of New Brunswick, naming each.

Passing on to his recent tour of the west, he compared the progress shown in twelve years since his last visit. As to Vancouver, he saw no reason why is should not reach across the Pacific and grasp a large share of the trade there.

Coming back to New Brunswick however, and notwithstanding the progress of the west, he was prouder of his native province than ever. He was more convinced than ever that eastern ports were to receive greater impetus from western prosperity.

A RELIGION OF THE FUTURE

"I am convinced that religion will never come to its own till it is studied as a science, subject to all the criteria which scientific study involves," said Rev. Dr. Elliott, of Wesley College, Winnipeg, in addressing the theological conference at Victoria College this morning on "What is Religion?"

"The religion of the future will be scientific, and will be all the richer and more valuable for being scientific.

"Frequently, very religious men seem to give religion a very selfish cast. They emphasize externals and give such prominence to the thought of reward and punishment that they produce the conviction that they would themselves do evil, were the promises and threats removed. They make the impression that they are religious only because they fear the lash, or have an inordinate desire for the gingerbread. These men have not the highest conception of religion.

"I hold to the view of revelation through inspiration, but I am convinced that such inspiration and revelation were not arbitrarily given. I regard inspiration and revelation as very impressive words, and much wider in their significance than we ordinarily suppose. All men have revelations from God. The difference is one of depth, purity or generally speaking degree. Inspiration from the God in whom we live and move and have our being is the impelling force in all thought."—Toronto Telegram.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The advanced thinkers are trying to reduce religion to a science and eliminate faith.

Immigrants from Great Britain have declined in number considerably this year.

As a prominent merchant remarked today: "In Russia they're dying in order to get the franchise. Here we sell it for $2."

The Review sympathizes with the 'Witness' in its loss by fire. The 'Witness' is one of the very best and most influential journals in Canada.

It would look at first sight as if the wages paid to labourers on the G.T.P. were fair, but the price of board, etc., and the current rate of wages in the surrounding district show that the G.T.P. wages are sometimes fair and sometimes too low. At any rate they are nothing to brag about. With oriental labor the profit would be immense.

We are specially concerned with this business as Free Churchmen, and many of us as passive resisters. Many of us have been told by magistrates, civilly or uncivilly, to return a Liberal majority and so secure our desire. We returned a larger Liberal majority than was ever returned before. On all sides it was admitted that the enthusiastic rally of Nonconformists was, to say the least, one of the most powerful factors of the great Liberal success. But what is our reward? We have had no redress of any kind. when we were willing for the sake of peace to accept very inadequate reforms we were refused them. But next time we shall make sure. From the House of Lords we expect no consideration. The vast majority of its members are astonished that we should claim anything. They honestly think that if we are permitted to slink into our little Bethels while we live, and to [illegible] we should be more than satisfied. We have a very long account to settle, and the items of that account we shall take care to present to the people and to the Lords. We recognize this as a far more serious crisis than even that in which we fought—and won. We shall so use it that, as the storm rises into a hurricane, the voices of Free Churchmen shall be heard. — British Weekly.

In reply to a recent editorial, R. A. Brook, of the Montreal Blanket Company, wrote to the 'Montreal Witness' as follows—

"In the 'Witness' you again discuss the Canadian woollen trade under 'Fake Cries,' and give extracts from the London 'Investors' Review.' It seems to the writer needless to refer to the price of wool, as there is so little used in the manufacture of the cloth coming from the West Riding of Yorkshire, and which is the class of cloth that the Canadian wholesale clothiers have been buying so largely during the past few years, and which in consequence is taking the place of cloth that should be made in Canada. The cheapest grades of imported cloth contain no wool, but is made from cotton chiefly. The fact that the domestic clip will be cleaned up much earlier than usual is causing dealers to make a close study of the possibilities of the foreign wool situation, and this tendency is scarcely less marked among manufacturers. Already considerable business has been done in new clip Australian wools, and purchase of English wools have been almost as liberal as last year when prices were at a low record level. The usual margin between prices of quarter-blood, medium and fine fleeces and those of similar foreign wool is less than normal, and if taken as a criterion the same situation exists between these and foreign wools which can be substituted for them. This statement, of course, applies particularly to those mills which are accustomed to use foreign wools, and which can shift from one class of wool to another without making the change in their fabrics too marked. For many manufacturers a sudden change from domestic to foreign fine wools or vice versa is impracticable. It is sufficient to state that new cop Queensland wools can be imported today at prices which make a basis of much above 80 cents for fine staple territories impracticable; in fact some dealers place the latter level as low as 78 cents. Nearly all varieties of fleece wools are held to-day by dealers at prices which place a premium upon importations of substitute classes of Australian merino and crossbred wools. Australian prices of 56s. to 60s., or comebacks, are particularly attractive to domestic manufacturers who can use such wools to advantage.—Textile Journal.

FOR THE LADY WHO CALLS

The lady who has a large circle of acquaintances always finds it a difficult matter to keep track of the reception days of her friends and often mistakes are made, that might have been avoided if care were taken to make a record of such days. And then there are the teas, at homes, and parties to be remembered too and when a hostess is planning an affair, she is always worried lest she overlook some one who has extended hospitality to her some time previous. To avoid these mistakes, a social register has been issued by the Review, that will be a boon to the busy lady. There are pages for each day of the month on which the record of the calls received and paid with the address of the visitor appear, then there are pages for social engagements, visits paid, addresses and memoranda, all of which prove very valuable data to have. These books are on sale at all the book stores and at the Review Office for 50 cents and there has already been a good demand for them.

THE DEATH OF MISS PETTIGREW

Boland—O'Keefe Nupitals—News From Norwood

Norwood, Sept. 28.—After a lingering illness Miss Frances N. Pettigrew, only daughter of Dr. G. A. Pettigrew, succumbed to the dreaded disease, tuberculosis on Wednesday morning of last week, at the age of 33 years. For several years a brave warfare was waged against the disease, she having spent considerable time at the Muskoka Sanitarium for Consumptives, followed by the fresh air treatment, recommended and practised in that institution, but without avail. While for some time past it was known by herself and her most intimate friends that the disease was gaining persistent headway, yet she bore up in a wonderful manner and maintained a cheerful courage till the last.

The late Miss Pettigrew was a lifelong, faithful member of the Presbyterian church and was beloved by a host of friends.

Her father, Dr. Pettigrew, and Mr. Douglas Pettigrew, her brother, are the only members of the family surviving her.

The funeral on Friday was attended by a large number of sympathizing friends and acquaintances. The remains were interred in the family plot in the Norwood cemetery.

Next Sunday the Rev. Geo. A. Macellan will deliver his farewell sermon before going to his charge in Montreal. Mr. Macellan has conducted a very successful pastorate here in the Presbyterian church for several years and will be greatly missed, not only by his own people, but by the village in general. On account of the complete harmony existing between the two congregations the Methodist church will be closed on Sunday evening to give the members an opportunity of hearing Mr. Macellan once more, before he takes his departure to his new field of labor.

Little Willie Knew.

Little Willie, the son of a Germantown woman, was playing one day with the girl next door when the latter exclaimed:

"Don't you hear your mother calling you? That's three times she's done so. Aren't you going in?"

"Not yet," responded Willie imperturbably.

"Won't she whip you?" demanded the little girl, awed.

"Naw!" exclaimed Willie in disgust. "She ain't goin' to whip nobody! She's got company. So, when I go in, she'll just say, 'The poor little man has been so deaf since he's had the measles!'"—Lippincott's.

INFANTS' DELIGHT
Taylor's Soap

Here is a New Kind of Soap

You are now using some soap and naturally think it is good. But here is a kind that is different from any you know—one that has taken us 43 years to perfect.

Try one cake and compare it with what you now use. We welcome such a test as this for we know in advance the result. You will never go back to the other kind. Here is a soap made from vegetable oil pure enough to use on your table. We pay far more for this in France than we might pay. So we get only the best.

Cocoanut oil from the isle of Ceylon is brought over 12,000 miles and mixed with the olive oil. Then both are boiled doubly long.

After this we mill them by our own special process. We have scoured the best factories of England, France and Austria for almost half a century to perfect this process. We have combined the best ideas of foreign lands with our own improvements to attain perfection.

When milled, the soap falls like flakes of snow into enormous bins and is then crushed under a weight of 30 tons to press out the moisture. Then it passes through granite rollers and comes out in miles of silky ribbon.

After being dried eight times it is pressed into cakes and is simply perfect soap. It lathers into a rich creamy foam and wears as thin as a wafer. It leaves the skin rosy and pink like an infant's. So we call it Infants' Delight.

The perfume is dainty and pure—it suggests only the delicate scent of the roses. Use one cake today and see what a wonderful difference there can be in soap.

10 Cents a Cake At All Dealers

JOHN TAYLOR & CO., Limited, TORONTO, CANADA

How to Shamppo

Place a pint of warm water on the stove and shave up a cake of Infants' Delight. Let it simmer until the soap is dissolved. Then pour into a wide jar to cool into jelly. Clean the hair with a brush, wet it with warm water, and rub the soap jelly into the scalp thoroughly. Rinse off the thick lather and dry the hair by rubbing and fanning with a towel. This will leave the hair soft, shiny and lustrous.

AT A RUMMAGE SALE

The Little Pouch That Was Bought by Its Maker.

By SYDNEY PHELPS.

Mother looked up from the bundle of old clothes which had just arrived at the parsonage. They represented all that my wealthy Aunt Florence and my cousins could do to help us in our rummage sale.

"I don't believe we have $10 worth of things all together," she said. A hopeless expression crossed her face as she thought of the needed $50.

"How hateful all one's rich relations always are!" I burst out. "I believe they sell their things to old clothes men."

"We must do the best we can," said mother patiently. "The poor people who get them will be pleased anyway. I wonder if any one will look in and help us at the sale."

"No one," I answered, with conviction. "Between hockey and"—

"Hero worship," mother interrupted, laughing. "If we could only get John Gray to come we would not have standing room."

I did not answer. John Gray was just home from the Philippines. As an interesting convalescent and hero he was in great demand among the girls. But, though I had known him from childhood, I refused to add one to the ranks of his adorers, so a coolness had fallen between my old playmate and myself.

"Mrs. Denzil is in the parlor, ma'am," said the maid, and we went in to be cheered by the gayest little lady in the town.

Mrs. Denzil had a husband in the Philippines and appeared to get along very well without him. We would not have willingly spared that brilliant face with its wealth of fair hair, audacious blue eyes and wickedly curved red lips from our midst. It was vain to try to look askance at Mrs. Denzil, her absolute frankness was so disarming.

"You look worried," she said. "What is it?"

"It is only our rummage sale," I said sadly. "The things which have been sent in will bring but a song, yet we know of no other way in which to raise the money."

"Are men's things any use? Why not ask young Gray?"

"I hardly liked to," said mother.

"All right, I will. He must have heaps of things he doesn't want."

Off went Mrs. Denzil, promising to write to John Gray and send us the results of her appeal. Sure enough, a few days later she brought in her dog cart a huge bundle which she opened triumphantly.

"There, I told you I would get something out of him—shoes, lots of them, brown and black; two suits, very little worn; socks, collars, ties."

"Splendid!" we said. "Did he send them all the way to your house?"

"No; I told him I would call for the bundle this afternoon. It was to be ready in his own special sanctum. He was out, but old Jenkins showed me in. I found a note from him asking if this sort of thing would be of any use and saying that if we wanted anything more Jenkins could get it for me."

Pursued by our grateful thanks, Mrs. Denzil drove off in her usual whirlwind. She promised to come to our sale next day and especially begged to be allowed to act as auctioneer for Gray's things.

Mother and I returned to the examination of the bundle. "Actually, two of his pipes," she said. "How very good of him!"

I said nothing, for just at that moment I had caught sight of something which gave me a sharp stab of pain. Many years ago, when John Gray first went to college, I had worked its colors on a tobacco pouch. There had been something more than mere kindliness in our farewell on that occasion. He surely need not have sent the pouch to a rummage sale.

The sale came off the next day. In the midst of a little argument with a stout woman as to the value of a red flannel dressing sack mother said to me:

"Clare, both of the Whites have come. That is rather nice of them. They have brought another girl with them."

I looked up and smiled at the three. Just then, to my surprise, the daughter of our bank president appeared, followed closely by a fairly representative gathering of the young ladies of the neighborhood.

"There must be some mistake," I thought. "They must think there is an entertainment to follow."

Just then I heard Mrs. Denzil's voice.

"Here I am," she said, "in plenty of time. Hurry up, girls; the auction is going to begin. Can I have a chair put on that table? Thanks. The handle of my riding whip will be the hammer." And, flinging herself with rapture into the part, she began the auction.

The buyers were as wax in her hands.

"Look at these ties," she said in tones of ardent admiration—"college colors, club colors, rainbow colors. Girls, you will never forgive yourselves if you let such a chance as this slip. Six ties, all worn—well worn. Did I hear you say a quarter, Miss Smith? Oh, I hope not! I could not listen to such an offer from you. Fifty cents, Linda. That is better, but not good enough." In the end she extracted an offer of $1.50 from the bank president's daughter. Never once did she mention the name of the donor of the effects, and the ladies gazed in undisguised amazement at each other's frantic bids.

"This pair of boots," Mrs. Denzil pursued, "was worn in the Philippines."

This was entirely untrue, but the spirited bidding ensued, and another girl became their proud possessor at the extravagant price of $2.50.

At last, to my mingled relief and rage, the little tobacco pouch was held aloft in Mrs. Denzil's grasp. I had decided to buy back again my despised gift if only for the pleasure of seeing it burned.

"A tobacco pouch—look!" said the gay voice. "What memories may surround it!"

"Twenty-five," squeaked Linda White.

"Fifty," I growled.

Mrs. Denzil nearly dropped the pouch in amazement at my intervention.

"One dollar," from the oldest Miss Smyth.

"One twenty-five," I said, my cheeks burning. Through the hush I could hear mother's surprised voice:

"Clare, my dear!"

How long that horrible auction lasted I do not know. I only know that at last, at the cost of $5, which I could ill spare, the horrid little pouch became once more my own property. The rest of the scene is a dream to me.

When all the lots were disposed of all the girls quietly withdrew, each eying her neighbor with stern distrust.

Mrs. Denzil sat down and laughed till the tears ran down her cheeks. "Do you know how I did it?" she asked. "I told each of them—in the strictest confidence—that some trifles belonging to John Gray were going to be sold. They thought they would pick up some little souvenir cheaply, but"—and she carefully weighed a purse in her hands—"I don't think they did, exactly."

I turned toward the big fireplace. I would get rid of that pouch at once.

The door flew open, and John Gray burst in. "Oh, I say, Mrs. Denzil, I came rushing down to see whether by mistake one or two little articles had not been put into that bundle of mine."

"Oh, I hope I did nothing wrong," she said lightly. "I only added one or two nondescript things."

"Would you tell me whether two of my pipes were among them?"

"Yes, but they were both quite old ones, I am sure," said Mrs. Denzil.

"Then if you don't mind I will buy them back myself. They were favorites of mine."

Mrs. Denzil looked very thoughtful.

"Miss Mortimer bought one and Miss Rawson the other, but no doubt they would be delighted for you to have them back."

The young man's face was a study. "There was one thing more"—he grew very red and looked across to where I stood rigidly by the fire watching the slow flames struggling with the remnants of their prey—"a little tobacco pouch," he said.

"Very shabby," said the lady firmly; "quite a disgrace to you. That is why I took it."

"But I really want that back again," he urged. "Please tell me who has it."

"You had better ask Clare," she said. "Mrs. Warren and I have to make out our accounts."

She drew mother out into the hall. John Gray strode over to me. I never saw such a slow fire in all my life.

"Do you know where it is, Clare?" he began, and then his eyes fell on the grate. One end of a bit of gray fabric still ornamented with a shield lay among the coal.

"You burned it?" he asked reproachfully. "Why?"

I could find nothing to say.

"Clare, you could not have thought that I meant to give that to any charity under the sun?"

Still no answer.

He bent over until he could look into my downcast face.

"Clare," he cried, and even in my bewilderment I heard the note of joy in his voice. Then he took me in his arms, and I straightway forgot that there had ever been such a thing as a rummage sale.

What a Great Man Said to the Great American People

Parisian Sage is a discovery of a celebrated scientist, who spent the best years of his life in perfecting this great hair tonic.

In giving his recipe to the American people he said, "Parisian Sage is the most delightful hair dressing in the world, but it is more than a hair dressing. It cures dandruff by killing the germs that infest the roots of the hair; it stops falling hair; it gives vigor and strength to the hair roots. W. Madill, druggist, Peterborough, sells Parisian Sage at 50 cents a large bottle, and guarantees it to do all that is claimed for it, or your money is refunded. If you do not reside near a druggist who sells Parisian Sage, send 50 cents to Giroux Mfg. Co., Fort Erie, Ont., and a bottle will be sent you all charges prepaid.

MANY USES FOR MAGNESIA.

Keeps Gowns, Shoes, Laces and Linens Daintily White All Summer.

The girl who likes to be always dainty, always fresh, and who likewise is devoted to the wearing of spotlessly white garments, often sighs when she gazes at her once immaculate shoes, her collar of filmy lace, which after one or at the most two wearings is showing specks of grime and is no longer the dainty thing which she would desire, she sighs again at the size of the bill which the laundress presents at the end of the week and almost forswears her beloved white garments.

But with a cake of magnesia on her dressing table no girl need give up the wearing of white, for it will eradicate many a darkened spot on belt, parasol, shoe or gown, leaving it almost as fresh as new. Magnesia may be purchased in powder or in lumps. The latter way is preferable, as it is so easily used. Just rub the cake on to the soiled spot with a generous hand, fold the garment, if you are cleaning a gown or waist, and lay away for a day or two, shake thoroughly before wearing and the beautiful white color will be restored.

When your white shoes are slightly soiled rub them also with the cake of magnesia and set in the sun for an hour or more, then brush well with a stiff, clean brush and you will be delighted with the transformation. If your white linen skirt is just a little soiled just about the hem it is not necessary to send it at once to the laundry. Get the cake of magnesia from the drawer in the dressing table and after first brushing all dust from the skirt rub it vigorously with the magnesia and after an hour or two brush it off with a clean whiskbroom, but be careful always to remove all traces of the magnesia before wearing a garment thus cleaned, otherwise the powder left will go on absorbing dust from the air and the objects with which it comes in contact, leaving a dirtier spot than before.

It is a good plan to put the magnesia on party dresses and other light frocks that have become partly soiled when putting them away, whether they actually need to be cleaned or not. Then when they are taken out and shaken they are as fresh and dainty as when they were new.

Doilies and delicately colored sofa cushions may be freshened in the same manner, and one housekeeper keeps a cake of magnesia in a convenient corner of her china closet and when a soiled spot appears on a tablecloth gives it a treatment of magnesia powder which, while it does not take the place of soap and water, aids in prolonging the usefulness of the tablecloth.

HOT WEATHER HEALTH HINTS.

Cold water dashed on the face and chest each morning gives the same tonic effect as the cold plunge without danger of shock.

Learn to relax if you would be free of lines in your face and cheat old age. Most of us keep ourselves at tension mental and physical.

When the skin becomes overheated, as it too often does in summer, try putting a little baking soda in the water in which you wash.

If relaxing exercises will take the kinks out of your face, relaxation—the kind best suited to your taste—will remove kinks from your soul.

Nothing relieves the sting of mosquito bites or the intense itching of hives like bathing in a weak solution of carbolic acid and water.

Eyebrows should not be neglected. Use a fine brush on them each night, pinch between the fingers into a delicate line and rub in vaseline if thin.

Dandruff arises from different causes, but when it is very much in evidence it is usually a symptom of depleted roots and the scalp needs feeding with grease or tonics.

Do not neglect the value of fruit in improving the complexion. Nothing equals the juice of oranges and lemons to clear up skin and brighten eyes. The latter must be diluted and taken without sugar, a half lemon to a glass of water.

A Midsummer Fancy.

There has come about a popular fashion of pinning a rose or any large flower well down in the center of an evening bodice. The gold and silver roses which came in last autumn are not the preferred thing any longer, though.

The present fashion calls for a silken flower in rare color. It is surrounded by green leaves, has a rubber stem finely made and is loosely caught to the lace or the jeweled net which is so often used in front of a bodice and is quite a good touch.

The wide open flower in extra size is preferred to the half closed one. Bouquets of blossoms are not used as they were last winter.

While the gardenia or camellia is fashionable, there are other flowers with more color that are more imposing.

Among these are a poppy, a large orchid, an exaggerated iris, a peony and a full blown American Beauty. The scarlet poinsettia is often chosen.

A Curious Custom.

"The Mexicans," says a traveler, "have a very queer way of burying their dead. The corpse is tightly wrapped up in century plant matting and placed in a coffin rented for about a shilling. One or two natives, as the case may be, place the coffin on their heads and go in a trot to the grave, where the body is interred and the coffin is then returned. The wealthy class use the street cars as hearses, and the friends follow beside the car on foot."

MORE PINKHAM CURES

Added to the Long List due to This Famous Remedy.

Glanford Station, Ont.—"I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for years and never found any medicine to compare with it. I had ulcers and falling of the uterus, and doctors did me no good. I suffered dreadfully until I began taking your medicine. It has also helped other women to whom I have recommended it."—Mrs. HENRY CLARK, Glanford Station, Ontario.

Gardiner, Me.—"I was a great sufferer from a female disease. The doctor said I would have to go to the hospital for an operation, but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound completely cured me in three months."—Mrs. S. A. WILLIAMS, R. F. D. No. 14, Box 39, Gardiner, Maine.

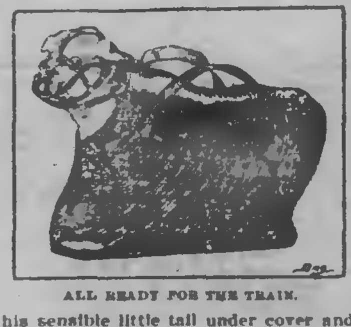
Because your case is a difficult one, doctors having done you no good, do not continue to suffer without giving Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial. It surely has cured many cases of female ills, such as inflammation, ulceration, displacements, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing-down feeling, indigestion, dizziness, and nervous prostration. It costs but a trifle to try it, and the result is worth millions to many suffering women.

If you want special advice write for it to Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass. It is free and always helpful.

THE TRAVELING DOG.

How the Up to the Minute Woman Carries Her Pet Canine.

All is not gold that glitters and things are not always what they seem. Witness this traveling bag which might be filled with almost anything for the journey and has much the look of an English steamer roll until, presto, without warning, out from the watch hole in the upper corner comes a little muzzled head with a black shiny nose and two pointed ears. He gives the outer world a good natured survey, for he has traveled before, but never in such comfort and security. It is certainly much more comfortable to be carried by handles like a bag than to be led around by a chain and left in the care of strangers or nailed up in a box with half a loaf and a pan of water. He knows a good thing when he sees it and he wags his sensible little tail under cover and ducks when the conductor makes his rounds.



ALL READY FOR THE TRAIN.

This bag is actually of English importation and was conceived and fashioned from the ideas of the brown canvas steamer roll, which will hold an infinite number of garments. It is usually made to order and cut to fit its future occupant when he is standing, but he may also lie down in it with comfort and without being suffocated, equipped as his little cabin is with a porthole on the forward deck. The two stout handles are made of leather, and the whole opens from the top and is secured with catches.

It is a most convenient receptable for those who have cherished animals and are loath to give them over into the care of strangers on the long day's journey. They are as easily handled as a suit case and may be swung lightly to the train by the young mistress herself if there are no train porters at hand to help her.

STAGESTRUCK GIRLS.

Histrionic Fame Only Won by Hard Work and Genius.

There are probably not many girls who grow to womanhood who have not at some time or other been smitten with the idea of going on the stage, hardly a girl but who believes that she is an embryonic Siddons or Bernhardt, or at least a Maude Adams or a Julia Marlowe. These girls think they can jump into fame with absolutely no hard work; that nothing at all is required of them but to have the opportunity provided and to procure a few suitable garments, learn a part and the rest is so easy.

But many an actress will tell you that it is more than that. Some will say it is all hard work and no reward, and it is difficult for one who sits in the front of the theater to judge what being a successful actress really means.

In the first place, she must have the constitution of a Hercules, be absolutely fatigue proof, her face must be as beautiful as that of a goddess, her figure rival that of Helen of Troy, her voice must be as sweet as a bird's, she must be graceful as a fawn, possess the imagination of a Munchausen, disposition of an angel, a courageous spirit, keen sense of humor, a high standard of morality, loyalty of purpose and an original way of regarding everything that comes her way. If in addition to these qualities she has the skin of a rhinoceros to bear the ungents and paints which the actress must use, if she is a good daughter and a kind sister and can make up her mind to forego many of the delights which make up a woman's life, then she may have a career before her upon the stage of which any girl might be proud.

BROOMS MAY GO UP IN PRICE

As a Result of Increase in the Price of Broom Corn

There is every prospect that the housewife will in the near future have to pay from 5 to 10 cents more for her broom than she has been paying for some time past. The crop of broom corn last year was none too large, and the result is that the price, which is usually about $100 per ton, has advanced, until to-day it is $195 per ton, and there is very little corn to be had, even at that price. Those engaged in the manufacture of brooms say that it is very difficult to secure corn, and at the greatly advanced price it will be necessary to advance the price to the user.

THE LIBERALS WERE VERY KIND WITH THESE VOTERS

Gave Them $2 Bills for Nothing, They Claimed—Prominent Liberal Worker Named as the Paymaster—Some Most Peculiar Evidence.

At the opening of yesterday afternoon's session of the protest trial the first witness examined was Arthur Aisept.

He said he resided at 699 Harvey street. He voted at the last election. He voted between 9.30 and 9.45 in the morning. He was in Mr. Stratton's committee rooms at 3 o'clock in the afternoon.

Mr. DuVernet—Whose committee rooms are those?

Witness—Mr. J. R. Stratton's.

He said Mr. Robert Leary had told him to go up to the committee rooms and get $2. He went to the rooms and got the money.

"With the $2 bill I paid my grocer," said the witness, amid laughter. One man applauded, and Justice McMahon severely reprimanded the offender.

Witness said he got no money for his vote. Messrs. Glover and Stratton took him over to Hall, Medd and Davidson's office, where he signed a paper.

To Mr. Watson witness said: I came to Canada from London. I came four years ago coming April. I don't know what the $2 was given me for. It was not given me to vote. Mr. Stratton, Walter S. Davidson nor Dickson Davidson never gave me any money. Mr. Leary told me where to find the money in the committee rooms. The only man I would likely have mentioned it to was Mr. Gates. I mentioned it to him last Wednesday. I never mentioned it before that time and no one knew it. I showed the money to my wife.

What did you take the two dollars for?

Because I was hard-up.

The money had nothing to do with my vote. I thought the man's motive was honest in giving me the $2. I didn't think it was given to me for any improper purpose. Mr. Jim Jordan told me the money was being given away. After seeing Jordan I saw nobody with whom I had a talk on the subject of the $2. I had not been at the Conservative election rooms before that. I spoke to no one when I was going into the rooms or when I got in there. I saw quite a crowd inside. I saw four or five Englishmen in the rooms. I know I was in the big room ten minutes. Mr. Leary stepped out from the little room to the big one. One of the men present was a Mr. Pritchard, one Mr. Harand, one Mr. Sid Pope, and I cannot remember the other. Mr. Leary said it is under there. I didn't ask what was there. I got the $2 from under a small book-case on the table. Mr. Sam Wainwright asked me to vote. It might have been a month or three weeks before the election day. I said I would vote for the first man who caught me in the morning. I wouldn't take money for my vote. I asked Mr. Wainwright for nothing and he offered me nothing. I remember taking a declaration before Mr. Goodwill.

The witness said he went over to the office of Hall, Medd and Davidson with Rosie Glover and Mr. Ryder, a fellow-countryman. Mr. Walter S. Davidson's typewriter made out the declaration form. They went to Roger, Bennet and Goodwill's office.

Witness admitted he told a falsehood there when he took the declaration, that he had not been in the committee rooms.

Asked by Mr. Watson why he told the falsehood, witness said:

"Because I had been told I would get two years in prison if I didn't."

Mr. Richard Fair told witness that Mr. Glover wanted to see him to have him sign a paper. The witness said this led up to him taking the declaration. Mr. Watson read over the clauses of the declaration. The witness said he was signing to the truth in signing to all but the statement that was before mentioned.

HE GOT $2 ALSO.

Mark Harand said: I voted at the election. I know Mr. Apstead. I received $2 on the afternoon of the election from Mr. Leary. I was hard up at the time.

Witness stated he got his money from under a cardboard box on the table in the small committee room. Mr. Leary wrote his name on the cardboard box and put the bill under the lid. Harland voted early in the morning.

Mr. Sidney Pope, Mr. James Jordan, Mr. George Whase, Mr. John Pritchard, witness thought, were present in the committee rooms. Another man he thought was present was Mr. Chas. Watchey. Witness was in Mr. Stratton's committee rooms in the morning. He was given to understand that money would be paid for votes. The witness came back to the committee rooms in consequence of what was told him in the morning.

The witness told Mr. Watson he was an Englishman. He didn't vote for money, he said. He received the money after he had voted. Somewhat contradictory sounded the statement that the witness made when he said to Mr. Watson that before he voted he had given no promise or had no understanding that he was to get money for voting for Mr. Stratton. He had heard of the money part of the affair after he had voted, he stated.

After voting he went back to the committee rooms, but not for the purpose of getting any money, as at that time he didn't know there was any money to be had. Up to 12 o'clock noon he didn't see Mr. Leary, Mr. Walter Davidson or Mr. Dickson Davidson. He had seen Mr. Stratton previous to 12 o'clock, but had had no talk with him. He went back in the afternoon about three o'clock, he thought. No one went back with him. He stayed til nearly 5 o'clock.

Q—Then the money had nothing to do with your vote?

A—Nothing at all.

In the smaller room in the committee rooms Mr. Leary asked Harand his name. The latter told him.

The witness said: He put a two-dollar bill under the lid of the cardboard box, and I picked it up. He told me to take it.

When he was there in the afternoon the witness said that there was a line of men trying to get into Mr. Stratton's small committee room, just like a line trying to get into a theatre.

LIED OUT OF JEALOUSY

John Pritchard saw Mr. Harand at Stratton's committee rooms in the morning. Witness was in the rooms in the afternoon also. He never was in Mr. Stratton's small committee room. He went to the committee rooms to see either Mr. Stratton or Mr. Frank Farren. He voted at McGill's store. The witness heard there was money passed around, but he did not know anybody who got it. He saw one or two men go into the small room. He didn't know what was done in the room. Mr. Glover had spoken to him about going to see Mr. Walter Davidson for the purpose of making a declaration. The witness thought Mr. Hall was present at the time the declaration was made. Witness told several persons he got money. He did this, he said, because he was sore and jealous that he didn't in reality get any. He didn't know Mr. Leary.

To Mr. Watson the witness stated that he had not heard that the Conservatives were trying to spread a rumor around that there was money in circulation at Mr. Stratton's committee rooms. He said that he had been asked to make an affidavit that he knew of improper proceedings in connection with Mr. Stratton's election, but said he refused to do so.

MATTHEW CLANCY.

Matthew Clancy says he resided in Peterborough and was at Mr. Stratton's committee rooms at last election. He was there on three or four occasions on election day. The first time was about three o'clock in the afternoon. He saw Mr. Clarry in the outer committee room. He saw him go into one of the small rooms on the west end. He saw others going into the room. Persons were going in and out all the time. The door was open. Anybody could go in or out. Witness saw Sheppard go in. He also saw persons going into the little room on the east side. The door of this room was closed. He saw some persons going in with Mr. Davidson and one person with Mr. Stratton. He saw Mr. Leary coming out of that room. The most of the people were taken in by Mr. Davidson. He could not say how many persons he saw going in.

Cross-examined by Mr. Watson, Mr. Clancy could not say that he was at the Liberal committee rooms on the afternoon of election day. He was there five or six times. There was considerable bustle around the room. One of the small rooms contained the telephone, and when it rang some one would rush in to answer it. The door of that room was open nearly all afternoon, witness thought. He repeated his evidence about seeing Leary come out of one of the small rooms. He did not notice anybody come out with him.

GOT TWO DOLLARS.

James Monger said he was at the Liberal committee rooms on election day.

Q—Did you get any money?
A—"Yes."
Q—"How much?"
A—"I got $2."

At this point Mr. Watson objected on the ground that there was no charge to justify asking Monger how much money he got.

There was a clash between the two lawyers on the point at issue and their Lordships ruled that the witness should step down and be heard again in the morning. They would go into the point raised during the adjournment. Mr. DuVernet pointed out that he merely wished to secure information about the "system" at the Liberal committee rooms.

ALBERT L. BANKS.

Albert L. Banks was examined by Mr. DuVernet on charge No. 14. He said he resided in Peterborough and voted at the last election. He knew Mr. Harland and Mr. Pritchard by sight and saw them at the Liberal committee rooms.

"I was in the little room on the far end on election day," witness said, "with Mr. Leary. I went into the room in the afternoon."

Q—Why did you go into the room?
A—Mr. Leary called me in.
Q—Did you see any money?
A—No.
Q—Did you ever tell anybody you got money there?
A—I never said I got any money there, that is not to my knowledge.
Q—What do you mean by not to your knowledge?

Mr. Watson objected to Mr. DuVernet cross-examining his own witness, and the objection was sustained.

Q—Had any one seen you about your vote?
A—No.

Witness said that the door of the little room was open when he went in.

In answer to questions by Mr. DuVernet, witness deposed that he had made a declaration. Someone, he did not know who he was, had come to him and they had gone to his office opposite the post office, and he had made the declaration there. He got no money for doing so. He had the declaration at home.

Mr. DuVernet told him to have the declaration in the court in the morning.

Mr. R. R. Hall had a copy of it with him and offered to show it to their Lordships.

"Bring your copy around in the morning," Mr. DuVernet said to the witness.

To Mr. Watson witness said he had received no money or had seen none paid out.

Adjournment was made to ten o'clock Wednesday morning.

WEDDING BELLS

HALL—MILLS

St. John's church was the scene of a pretty autumn wedding this morning at 10.30 o'clock when Miss Daisy, the only daughter of Captain and Mrs. Mills, 451 Hunter street, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Mr. Basil D. Hall, second son of Mr. E. H. D. Hall, city solicitor, the Rev. Canon Davidson officiating. The bride entered the church and walked down the aisle on the arm of her father to the strains of the wedding march played by the organist, Mr. R. J. Devey. She looked charming in a gown of white liberty satin with fichus of real lace, and caught with a cabochon of pearls and wore a gold locket which her mother had worn at her wedding. She carried a beautiful bouquet of white asters, a gift of Mrs. (Rev.) Gilmour, an intimate friend. The bridesmaids were Miss Madeline Wilson, who was attired in a becoming costume of pink silk, and Miss Grace Rhemhart, who wore a dress of white silk. The maid of honor was her cousin, little Grace Conway, and the duties of the page were performed by her brother, Master Lorne Conway, a cousin of the bride, and Miss Ethel Morrison, cousin of the groom, untied a rope of flowers, permitting the guests to take their seats. Her mother wore a costume of primrose satin with bands of lace embroidered with gold and a hat with a black feather bow. Her grandmother, Mrs. H. P. Chingbold, was attired in black silk. The groom was supported by his brother, Mr. Gerald Hall. The church was tastefully decorated for the occasion and presented a very pretty sight. After the ceremony the bridal party drove to the home of the bride's parents, where a reception was held, at which nearly one hundred guests were present, many of which came from Kingston, Ottawa and Toronto. A sumptuous wedding repast was partaken of in the large drawing and dining rooms, which were decorated with asters, and after the bride received the congratulations of those present the happy young couple left on the 11.40 G.T.R. train for a trip to Montreal and Quebec. The bride's travelling suit was of blue broadcloth with a grey hat and gloves. On their return to the city they will reside on Hunter street.

The bride and groom have a host of friends who will join in wishing them a bright and happy future. The groom is one of Peterborough's rising young lawyers, being the junior partner in the law firm of Messrs. Hall, Hall and Hayes.

HUTCHISON—MOORE

Two of Peterborough's popular young people were united in marriage at St. Paul's church this morning. The contracting parties were Miss Eva Mabel Moore, daughter of Mr. Chas. Moore, Hunter street, east, and Mr. Frederick Bruce Hutchison. The ceremony took place at seven o'clock and was performed by Rev. Robt. Pogue in the presence of a few intimate friends. The wedding march was played by Mr. John Crane and the bridal pair were unattended.

Mr. and Mrs. Hutchinson left on a trip to Toronto and points west immediately after the ceremony. On their return they will reside on Reid street.

The bride received many handsome presents. Mr. and Mrs. Hutchinson will have the best wishes of a wide circle of friends.

STUBBS—MILBURN

At "Hillcrest Farm," Smith township, the home of the bride's father, the marriage took place last evening at six o'clock of Miss Stella, daughter of Mr. J. J. Milburn, to Mr. J. H. Stubbs, of Smith. The nuptial knot was tied in the presence of a large number of friends by Rev. J. Bedford, of Lakefield. The young couple were unattended and the wedding march was played by Miss Maggie Milburn. The house was prettily decorated with autumn vines and asters. The bride carried a beautiful bouquet of cream roses. Many handsome presents were received testifying to the popularity of the contracting parties.

Mr. and Mrs. Stubbs will reside in the seventh concession of Smith where the groom has a valuable farm.

THAT WATCH OF YOURS

Is in many respects similar to a railway engine. Let an engine be run without oil or cleaning and before long it will stop dead. Upon examination it will be found that the friction and wear and tear has ruined the machinery, and it is fit only for the scrap iron heap. Likewise your watch. You put it in your pocket, and while there is a kick in it, you, in your mistaken economy, do not consult the watchmaker, and consequently rob your watch of years of good service and also much of its former accuracy. The time-keeping qualities of a good watch are maintained and often improved by timely and skilful attention. If you have been one of the neglectful ones call around and see us.

EPWORTH LEAGUE AT CHARLOTTE ST.

The Epworth League meeting at Charlotte street Monday evening was in charge of the Missionary Committee and an instructive time was the result. It was in the form of a missionary album, in which Japan, Africa, India and a Hindoo child-widow were shown, and members of the league dressed in costume to represent persons pictured in the album. As each picture was shown something was told about the needs of the country by the conductor. Africa was told about in a song by Miss O. Howell in a pleasing style, and the child-widow told her own story in a truly pathetic manner. Japan was represented by Miss Mabel Wilson, Africa by Master Alfred Austin, India by Miss Cora Pettick, and the Hindoo by Miss F. Rogers, and each took their part in a proficient manner sometimes causing much laughter.

Another pleasing feature of the evening was a solo by Mr. C. Thorpe in fine voice. It was greatly appreciated by all present. Mr. C. Frowde presided, and during the evening the pastor, Rev. Mr. Henderson, had something to say in behalf of missionary work, and the efficient speaker who is to be present at the next meeting.

The evening was closed by the benediction pronounced by Mr. Downey.

Fruit Dealer Lost a Basket of Grapes Saturday Night- Police Court Case This Morning

Somebody stole a basket of grapes from an Italian who conducts a fruit business on George street, north of McDonnel street, Saturday night, and although a young man was accused of the theft at the police court this morning, the evidence of the complainant failed to substantiate the charge. Mr. N. Mancolo acted as court interpreter.

The complainant stated that on Saturday night about twelve o'clock, a young man entered his store and asked for a package of cigarettes, and after being served walked out and turned south on George street, but returned again and took a basket of grapes. He then ran around the corner and went west on McDonnel street.

A witness stated that he was in the store when the young man entered, and after he departed noticed the basket of grapes disappear, but did not see who the offender was.

The defendant said that he came to the store with a chum, and after going into the store and buying the smokes went out and turned north on George street and went home. There were no other boys in the store at the time. His chum corroborated his statements.

The Magistrate held, that while he had no doubt but that a basket of grapes had been stolen, the complainant did not say that he saw the one who took them, and the person who ran down McDonnel street might not have been the young man in question.

MISSIONARY NIGHT AT KNOX CHURCH

Delegates to Whitby Conference Spoke to Members of Young Peoples' Guild

The meeting of the Young People's society of Knox church on Monday night was of a missionary nature. Miss Ella Warren occupied the chair. After a vocal selection had been rendered by a quartette composed of Misses Miller, Bentley, Cunningham and Moynes. Miss Warren spoke on some of the ideas she had gained by her visit to the Whitby conference. The members of the guild were urged to do more missionary service and to improve the work in many ways. India, China, Japan and other countries needed missionaries and the Gospel. The speaker said that India was the burden of the British Christians because of its heathenism. Prayer was pointed out to be most necessary, as without it nothing could come from any effort put forth. The power of prayer was greatly emphasized and enthusiasm and the love of Christ within us must prevail in our lives.

After the address another sacred selection was given by the quartette, after which Miss Lottie Chase gave some interesting information of the conference, in which the importance of home and foreign missions was the principal topic of discussion.

The speaker said some definite work should be taken up by the guild and other departments of the church on behalf of missions.

After the business of the society was concluded the meeting closed with the usual ode. Next Monday is literary meeting and Mr. Gordon Hurd will have charge.

COSTS MONEY TO SPEAK FRENCH

One of Three Young Men Fined This Morning for Disorderly Conduct

Three young men while returning to their homes last evening about nine o'clock, by way of Hunter street, raised the ire of P.C. McGinty by their actions, and all appeared in Police Court this morning and one of the number fined $2.00.

The officer stated that they were jostling each other and making a disturbance by hollering. When they arrived at the Chinese laundry near the corner of Aylmer and Hunter streets, annoyed the proprietor withal.

The version of the affair as told by two of the accused, was that while there was some loud talking, no jostling took place. One was speaking in French and running ahead, but not with the intention of annoying anybody.

The Magistrate said that he would have to impose a fine, as there had been many complaints from residents at this locality about the disturbances caused by thoughtless young men and boys, and he ordered that the one who used the French language should foot the bill.

MUSIC AND DRAMA

"THE DEBTORS."

In "The Debtors" an exquisite comedy, tempered with tender pathos, Digby Bell and his unusually able supporting company thoroughly delighted the audience that saw the "Little Dorrit" play at the Grand Monday night. The piece is adapted from Dickens' novel with considerable license on the part of Margaret Mayo, the adapter, but nevertheless it has the "Little Dorrit" atmosphere and the characters of the book are convincingly drawn on the stage.

The presentation of the play marked the occasion of the first appearance here of Mr. Bell and he was given a most appreciative welcome. His comedy methods are highly amusing and natural and his portrayal of William Dorritt was a comedy masterpiece. Miss Kathleen Clifford, as Amy fairly shared the honors with Mr. Bell and immediately found the favor of the audience. Her understanding of the role is a very intelligent one, and she is a charming and exceptionally well equipped actress. At the end of the second act the audience was so persistent in its curtain calls that Mr. Bell had to make a curtain speech, in which he expressed his gratitude for the cordial reception.

NAT RAY'S GREAT RIDE THE FEATURE OF DAY'S RACING

On Saturday, the closing day of the Woodbine's most successful autumn meeting, Nat Ray rode a great race in the Hendrie Cup event, The Toronto Star says:

There is more sentiment in racing than its detractors would have one believe, and this was demonstrated during the running of the steeplechase, when the finest field of jumping horses in America contested for the rich purse. Among the starters was the horse Byzantine, owned, trained, and ridden by Nat Ray, probably the most accomplished cross country rider that ever sat in a saddle on this continent. When Nat, a Toronto boy born and bred, brought his horse up from the rear to a contending position in the last half mile of that long journey, the 10,000 spectators forgot all else but pride in the achievement of an admired fellow-Canadian, and cheered him on to what they hoped would be a brilliant victory. It was an inspiring sight to see and hear the thousands of cheering persons all with minds bent in the same direction.

Ray himself appeared to catch the inspiration of the moment, and rode as he never rode before. It was a thrilling struggle—that last half mile—long to be remembered by those fortunate enough to be present. Ray's horse was not the equal of the others, but the rider was so much superior to his opponents' that it made him the keenest kind of contender at the finish. Every one of the seven starters with the exception of Dacra, looked to have a chance at some time during the running. The Colt entry, Thistledale, dashed to the front when the break came, and, fencing in faultless fashion, led his field until the last jump. In the early stages Sir Wooster and Waterway followed the leader closely, but the former lost his rider, and the latter made a hobble at the big tree that put a damper on his speed. Fincastle, the lightweight, with Sobell up, laid in behind Thistledale, and Ray on Byzantine was next to last, just in front of Dacra, until the last turn of the field, when he commenced to move up.

Gradually Ray moved up to the leaders, and when they turned for home he had his horse in behind Thistledale and Fincastle. The second to last jump Ray closed up more ground, and as the landed he rushed Byzantine past both of them, and was half a length to the good going over the last jump, and the gleam of hard-earned victory in his eye.

The drive to the wire was one of the most sensational on record. Byzantine was dead tired, but Ray put forth every effort, and expended his own energy to the last ounce—but without avail. The difference in weights told its tale. Fincastle beat Byzantine by a nose only in the last stride. The wire crossed, Ray, completely exhausted, nearly fell out of the saddle, while Sobell, who also rode well, could not dismount for several minutes after reaching the saddling paddock.

Ray received as much applause as the winner, but that didn't get him the money, or the cup or the pin that went to the victor.

"You rode a grand race, Nat," said Dr. Andrew Smith, chairman of the O. J. C. Executive, and everybody agreed with the worthy doctor.

SHRUBB TO QUIT RUNNING GAME

Winnipeg, Sept. 27.—Alfred Shrubb will run the last race of his career in Winnipeg within a few weeks.

Arrangements are being made for the Englishman's farewell visit, as a runner at all events, for, as previously stated, he is about to quit the running game and devote his time to the trunk business in Toronto.

Shrubb is at present shooting on Vancouver Island and the leg which has been bothering him and has caused his downfall in the last two races, will be given a rest preparatory to the return home. On the trip east Shrubb will probably be seen in action at a couple of western towns and will run in Winnipeg early in October.

Just who he will go up against is still uncertain, but it is probable Paul Acoose will have the honor of bidding him good-bye.

A Marathon is to be run at Seattle on Oct. 10th. St. Yves, Shrubb, Longboat, Hayes, Art. Burn and others will compete.

Rube Waddell will likely bid a fond adieu to the Major League at the close of the season.

Pittsburg could lose all their remaining games and still be champions of the National League.

Preparations are being made to give Morney Clark, backstop of the Pirates, a reception on his arrival home in London, at the close of the ball season.

The exhibition games between the Vancouver and New Westminster teams for that $2,500 purse take place at Westminster, Oct. 13 and 15.

The Johnson-Ketchel fight takes place at Colma on Oct 12.

THE RING

Kaufman has been termed the human punching bag since his fight with Johnson.

Battling Nelson demands $10,000 for his appearance in the ring against any opponent.

Al Kubiak is going to Paris. He has signed to meet three men during the months of October and November. Two of Kubiak's opponents will be Jim Stuart and Sam McVey.

Dixie Kid, one of the greatest welterweights in the game, says that he would like to match up with Young Jack Johnson. Dixie fought Joe Walcot and several other first-class men, with good results.

Billy McCarney, the Philadelphia manager of boxers, who is making California his headquarters, thinks that the Johnson-Jeffries fight, if it ever comes off, will take place at San Francisco or Colma.

There is some talk of Jim Driscoll and Henry Piet, the French lightweight, who recently gave Freddie Welsh a good bout, meeting at England before Jimmy sails for the United States. Piet is a good boxer, according to all reports.

Bob Fitzsimmons and his wife left New York the other day for London. They are on their way to Australia to begin a theatrical tour there. Asked about the fight between Jeffries and Johnson, Fitzsimmons said: "I am of the opinion that Jeffries will beat him to death."

Joe Jeanette defeated Al. Kubiak in six rounds in Philadelphia Saturday, the big negro having the advantage all the way. Kubiak took a great amount of punishment, but gamely stuck to his task. The New York man, however, was too clever for him and gradually wore him down by hard jabs and body punches.

Al. Kaufman is asking for another chance against Jack Johnson. Al says he can't get started in 10 rounds, let alone fight any. Reports are going the rounds at Frisco that Johnson advised several of his inside friends to bet that Kaufman would stay the limit, while the others emphatically stated that he would stop Al. inside of nine rounds.

CLOSE OF EASTERN LEAGUE.

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.—The Eastern League's championship season ended today, Rochester winning the pennant with 4 1/2 to spare. The Rochesters were managed by John Ganzel, who transformed them from tailenders into pennant winners in a year's time. Rochester previously had not won a pennant since 1901. RUGBY

The teams scheduled to play next Saturday afternoon in the Junior City Rugby League, are the T.A.S. vs. Collegiates, and the Y.M.C.A. vs. Rough Riders. Those who witnessed the game last Saturday were much pleased with the exhibition put up by the Collegiates and the Rough Riders, and the game this coming Saturday will be equally interesting, and probably more so. The P.C.I. team is perched in first place, but they will have to extend themselves all the time if they expect to win from the T.A.S. It is necessary that the younger players be encouraged in the rugby game, and a large crowd should be present at the double-header next Saturday at Riverside.

Nice of Him.

"Of course, doctor," said the grateful young father, "the child means everything to me, and if you insisted on $500 I'd pay, even if I had to pawn the clothes on my back. But you must consider that I have only a salary of $20 a week."

"Oh, that will be all right!" said the doctor and sent in his bill for $500.—New York Life.

Documentary Evidence.

"What shall I say if Algernon proposes to me?" said the confiding young woman.

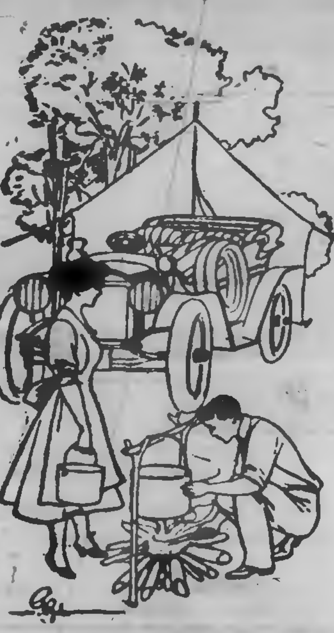
A MOTOR PLEASURING

Jolly Fun For Automobilists Who Like to Picnic.

AN EGYPTIAN ORNAMENT.

"Aviary Party" Given by Society Bachelors—Bon Voyage Luncheon In Honor of Girl's First Trip Abroad. A Waiting List.

Dear Elsa—Talk about a child with a brand new toy, you ought to see Dick with his new touring car. It's a beauty to be sure, but the way he fusses over the puffy, smelly thing you'd imagine it was human. Why, do you know one of the hottest nights we've had this summer he spent several perspiry (?) hours cleaning this blessed machine? And when I went out to the garage to see whether he was not sufficiently "cranked up" himself he turned a deaf ear to my sarcasms and actually insisted upon explaining to me for the fiftieth time how the present engine beat the old one all to nothing. After listening to a rhapsody over the carburetor that was as long as one of Liszt's and heavens knows what other piece of auto autonomy, I fled to the house. Now, don't think for a moment that I'm an anti-motorist. Far from it, for what I am just tumbling over myself to tell you about is the splendid time we had in our automobile encampment. Sounds like the summer outing of state troops. Well, it was nothing more than a band of jolly people, the C's, J's and ourselves, who conceived the brilliant idea of starting out in our motors for the greenwood. We provisioned the cars with all we could carry of the usual camping outfit, including small tents, which were strapped on top of the autos. And before we had finished our trip we had covered the ground from New York to Maine, coming home by way of the Berkshires and the Massachusetts shore road—without a single mishap other than a punctured tire. It's much better sport, this modern gypsying—the pitched tent, foraging for grub, etc.—than stopping at wayside inns. Yes, indeed. "God's green inn" in summer is the finest ever constructed.



AUTOMOBILISTS IN CAMP.

Time was not a consideration in our itinerary. We camped wherever the spot seemed most propitious. Often when a particularly lovely woods proved alluring we dropped off for a rubber of bridge or a stroll about some attractive little village. By the way, at one of these hamlets on the Massachusetts coast, provisions being low, we alighted for a meal at a tavern where old fashioned confidential Irish waiters are still to be found. One of the men of our party in a jocular mood asked the Irishman who came up to take the order, "What's good today, Pat?" "I'll tell you, sir," was the reply. "We've just got some clams in fresh from the water, and"—this in a whisper—"I don't mind telling you, sir, they're so good the waiters are eating 'em themselves."

Then the fun we had in the evening! The cars having been overhauled and made ready for the road if we felt disposed to take to it the next morning, the evening meal over, we sang to the accompaniment of a mandolin all kinds of songs, told stories, or the talk became sentimental, reminiscent or otherwise until taps—the automobile horn—sounded at 9 o'clock. And I tell you we were always ready to turn in at this early hour.

The motor encampment scheme is great. And looking back over some not uneventful years I recognize that the hours that have brought me most pleasure have been those spent out of doors. A rustic oracle in a recent novel observes with finality that "a woman's mind is made to hold indoor things; 'tain't big enough for outdoor." If this be so my mind is a misfit, for no house is large enough or attractive enough to hold me long a prisoner in the good old summer time.

To talk of midsummer fashions, during our trip we were lookers on at a smart Saturday night hop at a big hotel and found that the modish summer girl was tucking a strange decoration in her locks for festive occasions. This ornament is a nenuphar, borrowed from the time of pharaohs, when the younger women wore these lilylike ornaments in their hair. The nenuphar is something like a large round button and is made of dull metal set with tiny jewels or queer Egyptian symbols in enamel. The up to date nenuphar is attached to a hair pin, by means of which it is kept in place, and two nenuphars are worn one at each temple over the flat hairdressing, the curls and waves puffing out over the ears behind the button ornament. When a very Egyptian effect is desired a flat band of gilt or silver may be laid across the forehead at the edge of the hair, joining the two nenuphars.

While at Newport we heard enthusiastic accounts from guests who had attended an "aviary party" given by a group of young society bachelors by way of repaying their hostesses for the New York winter season's hospitality. It seems that the casino ballroom had been turned into a woodland scene for the occasion. The men disregarded their decorous and unlovely habiliments of black and appeared glorified in raiment of scarlet and purple, while the ladies moved in the mazes of the brilliant picture as birds of resplendent plumage. There were butterflies without end, but the sensation of the evening appeared in the character of Chanticleer. The wearer's striking beauty was well set off by a head dress made of a thatch of straw surmounted by a defiant cock. There were other lovely flying things represented which were scarcely birds (what does fancy care for science?). One woman wore a swarm of golden bees in her hair.

I gather up all these odd ideas concerning entertaining, as I know you are always on the alert for something new, and in this instance I have "made good," haven't I? But perhaps you will be even more interested in a bon voyage luncheon I attended recently. The first trip abroad is a big event to the average stay at home girl and one which is prepared for with much excitement and festivity. The luncheon to which I refer was given for a very young girl who was crossing the pond for the first time. The favors for the guests were tiny ships. On the sails were printed in gold the steamer's name which was to bear away over the "blue waters" the honor guest. Her place was designated by a small steamer trunk just deep and wide enough to contain twelve "steamer" letters written on thin letter paper by the other guests present and which had been sent to the hostess the day before. The ships at the guests' places were filled with green and white bonbons. The place cards were in the shape of traveling bags and the centerpiece was a large ship filled with white sweet peas on a mirror, with the edges concealed with ferns. Green candles with white shades were used, and the menu was cleverly carried out in green and white. It was a charmingly thought out affair and one that may be so easily and inexpensively copied.

Before letting you off from the perusal of more foolishness I must tell you about an enterprising society man of my acquaintance. In a burst of confidence he showed me a list that he keeps of all the eligible girls in his set, with their personal attractions, financial status or outlook definitely set forth and any little peculiarity of mind or manners carefully jotted down, for, said this abnormal youth, "one woman, unless one happens to be in love with her, is much the same as another." How is this for cool calculation? Yours sincerely,

New York. MABEL.

Covers For Hot Dishes.

Who has not seen cranberries or puddings or sauces taken from the fire and set on a table or window ledge to cool with no thought of the dust or germs they are imbibing?

While a tin or earthen lid should not be placed over hot food, as it generates a steam which may spoil the taste, some cover should be provided. Large paper bags, such as are used by grocers for fruit or ten pounds of sugar, are excellent to slip over the top of the dish.

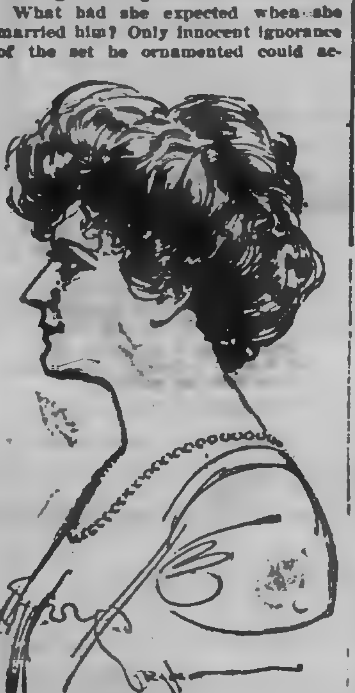
Heartsick, he forbore to ask for the explanation. He knew the real answer anyway, whatever she might say, and he understood that any game in that house was Ruthven's game and the guests his guests and that Gerald was only one of the younger men who had been wrung dry in that house.

No doubt at all that Ruthven needed the money. He had been picked up by a big, hard eyed woman who had almost forgotten how to laugh until she found him furtively muzzling her diamond laden fingers. So when she discovered that he could sit up and beg and roll over at a nod she let him follow her, and since then he had become indispensable and had curled up on many a soft and silken knee and had sought and fetched and carried for many a pretty woman what she herself did not care to touch even with white gloved fingers.

What had she expected when she married him? Only innocent ignorance of the set he ornamented could account for the horror of her disillusion. What splendors had she dreamed of from the outside? What flashing and infernal signal had beckoned her to enter? What mute eyes had promised? What silent smile invited? All skulls seem to grin, but the world has yet to hear them laugh.



Alixe.

* * * * * * *

"Philip?"

"Yes, Alixe."

"I did my best, w-without offending Gerald. Can you believe me?"

"I know you did. Don't mind what I said."

"N-no, not now. You do believe me, don't you?"

"Yes, I do."

"Thank you. And, Phil, I will try to s-steer straight—because you ask me."

"You must."

"I will. It is good to be here. I must not come again, must I?"

"Not again, Alixe."

"On your account?"

"On your own. What do I care?"

"I didn't know. They say"—

"What?" he asked sharply.

"A rumor—I heard it—others speak of it—perhaps to be disagreeable to me."

"What have you heard?"

"That—that you might marry again."

"Well, you can nail that lie," he said hotly.

"Then it is not true?"

"True! Do you think I'd take that chance again, even if I felt free to do it?"

"Free!" she faltered. "But you are free, Phil!"

"I am not," he said fiercely. "No man is free to marry twice under such conditions. It's a jest at decency and a slap in the face of civilization! I'm done for—finished. I had my chance and I failed. Do you think I consider myself free to try again, with the chance of further bespattering my family?"

"Wait until you really love," she said tremulously.

He laughed incredulously.

"I am glad that it is not true. I am glad," she said. "Oh, Phil, Phil, for a single one of the chances we had again and again and again! And we did not know—we did not know! And yet—there were moments"—

Dry lipped he looked at her, and dry of eye and lip she raised her head and stared at him, through him, far beyond at the twin ghosts floating under the tropic stars locked fast in their first embrace.

Then she rose, blindly, covering her face with her hands, and he stumbled to his feet, shrinking back from her—because dead fires were flickering again, and the ashes of dead roses stirred above the scented embers—and the magic of all the east was descending like a veil upon them, and the phantom of the past drew nearer, smiling, wide armed, crowned with living blossoms.

The tide rose, swaying here where she stood. Her hands fell from her face. Between them the grave they had dug seemed almost filled with flowers now, was filling fast, and across it they looked at one another as though stunned. Then his face paled, and he stepped back, staring at her from [illegible] eyes.

"Phil," she faltered, bewildered by the mirage, "is it only a bad dream, after all?" And as the false magic glowed into blinding splendor to engulf them, "Oh, boy, boy, is it hell or heaven where we've fallen?"

There came a loud rapping at the door.

* * * * * * *

"Phil," she wrote, "I am a little frightened. Do you suppose Boots suspected who it was? I must have been perfectly mad to go to your rooms that night, and we both were—to leave the door unlocked with the chance of somebody walking in. But, Phil, how could I know it was the fashion for your friends to bang like that and then come in without the excuse of a response from you?

"I have been so worried, so anxious, hoping from day to day that you would write to reassure me that Boots did not recognize me with my back turned to him and my muff across my eyes.

"But scared and humiliated as I am I realize that it was well that he knocked. Even as I write to you here in my own room, behind locked doors, I am burning with the shame of it.

"But I am not that kind of woman, Phil. Truly, truly I am not. When the foolish impulse seized me I had no clear idea of what I wanted except to see you and learn for myself what you thought about Gerald's playing at my house after I had promised not to let him.

"Of course I understood what I risked in going. I realized what common interpretation might be put upon what I was doing. But, ugly as it might appear to anybody except you, my motive, you see, must have been quite innocent, else I should have gone about it in a very different manner.

"I wanted to see you; that is absolutely all. I was lonely for a word, even a harsh one, from the sort of man you are. I wanted you to believe it was in spite of me that Gerald came and played that night.

"He came without my knowledge. I did not know he was invited. And when he appeared I did everything to prevent him from playing. You will never know what took place, what I submitted to.

"I am trying to be truthful, Phil. I want to lay my heart bare for you, but there are things a woman cannot wholly confess. Believe me, I did what I could.

"I remember what you said about an anchorage. I am trying to clear these haunted eyes of mine and steer clear of phantoms for the honor of what we once were to each other before the world. But steering a ghost ship through endless tempests is hard labor, Phil, so be a little kind, a little more than patient, if my hand grows tired at the wheel.

"What do you think of me? Asking you shows how much I care. Dread of your opinion has turned me coward until this last page. What do you think of me? I am perfectly miserable about Boots, but that is partly fright, though I know I am safe enough with such a man. But what sets my cheeks blazing so that I cannot bear to face my own eyes in the mirror is the fear of what you must think of me in the still, secret places of that heart of yours, which I never, never understood. ALIXE."

It was a week before he sent his reply, although he wrote many answers, each in turn revised, corrected, copied and recopied, only to be destroyed in the end. But at last he forced himself to meet truth with truth, cutting what crudity he could from his letter:

"You ask me what I think of you, but that question should properly come from me. What do you think of a man who exhorts and warns a woman to stand fast and then stands dumb at the first impact of temptation?

"If words of commendation, of courage, of kindly counsel, are needed by anybody in this world, I am not the man to utter them. What a hypocrite must I seem to you—I who sat there beside you preaching platitudes in strong self complacency, instructing you how morally edifying it is to be good and unhappy!

"Then what happened? I don't know exactly. But I'm trying to be honest, and I'll tell you what I think happened.

"You are—you; I am—I, and we are still those same two people who understood neither the impulse that once swept us together nor the forces that tore us apart! Ah, more than that, we never understood each other! And we do not now.

"But one thing we do know, not through reason, but through sheer instinct—we cannot venture to meet again—that way, for I, it seems, am a man like other men, except that I lack character, and you are—you, still unchanged, with all the mystery of attraction, all the magic force of vitality, all the esoteric subtlety with which you enveloped me the first moment my eyes met yours.

"There was no more reason for it then than there is now, and, as you admit, it was not love, though, as you also admit, there were moments approaching it. But nothing can have real beginning without a basis of reason, and so, whatever it was, it vanished. This perhaps is only the infernal afterglow.

"So now I end where I began—with that question which answers yours without the faintest suspicion of reproach. What can you think of such a man as I am? And in the presence of my second failure your answer must be that you now think what you once thought of him when you first realized that he had failed you.

"PHILIP SELWYN."

That very night brought him her reply:

"Phil, dear, I do not blame you for one instant. Why do you say you ever failed in anything? It was entirely my fault. But I am so happy that you wrote as you did, taking all the blame, which is like you. I can look into my mirror now—for a moment or two.

"It is brave of you to be so frank about what you think came over us. I can discuss nothing, admit nothing, but you always did reason more clearly than I. Still, whatever spell it was that menaced us I know very well could not have threatened you seriously. I know it because you reason about it so logically.

"By the way, I saw Mrs. Gerard's pretty ward at the theater last night—Miss Erroll. She certainly is stunning."

Selwyn flattened out the letter and deliberately tore out the last paragraph. Then he set it afire with a match.

"At least," he said, with an ugly look, "I can keep her out of this." And he dropped the brittle blackened paper and set his heel on it. Then he resumed his perusal of the mutilated letter, reread it and finally destroyed it.

"Alixe," he wrote in reply, "we had better stop this letter writing before somebody stops us. Anybody desiring to make mischief might very easily misinterpret what we are doing. I of course could not close the correspondence, so I ask you to do so without any fear that you will fail to understand why I ask it. Will you?"

To which she replied:

"Yes, Phil. Goodby. ALIXE."

A box of roses left her his debtor. She was too intelligent to acknowledge them. Besides, matters were going better with her.

And that was all for awhile.

Chapter 10

LENT had gone and with it the last soiled snow of winter.

"Spring, with that nameless fragrance in the air
Which breathes of all things fair,"

sang a young girl riding in the park. And she smiled to herself as she guided her mare through the flowering labyrinths.

Behind her, powerfully mounted, ambled the belted groom. She was riding alone in the golden weather because her good friend Selwyn was very busy in his office downtown, and Gerald, who now rode with her occasionally, was downtown also, and there remained nobody else to ride with; also the horses were to be sent to Silverside soon, and she wanted to use them as much as possible while the park was at its loveliest.

It was near Eighty-sixth street that a girl splendidly mounted saluted her and, wheeling, joined her, a blond, cool skinned, rosy tinted, smoothly groomed girl, almost too perfectly seated, almost too flawless and supple in the perfect symmetry of face and figure.

"Upon my word," she said gayly, "you are certainly spring incarnate, Miss Erroll, the living embodiment of all this!" She swung her riding crop in a circle and laughed, showing her perfect teeth. "But where is that faithful attendant cavalier of yours this morning? Is he so grossly material that he prefers Wall street, as does my good lord and master?"

"Do you mean Gerald," asked Eileen innocently, "or Captain Selwyn?"

"Oh, either," returned Rosamund airily. "A girl should have something masculine to talk to on a morning like this. You are continuing to astonish the town, I hear."

"What do you mean, Mrs. Fane?"

"Why, first it was Sudbury, then Draymore, and now everybody says that Boots"—

"Boots!" repeated Miss Erroll frankly, then laughed deliciously. "Poor, poor Boots! Did they say that about him? Oh, it really is too bad, Mrs. Fane. It is certainly horridly impertinent of people to say such things. My only consolation is that Boots won't care, and if he doesn't why should I?"

Rosamund nodded, crossing her crop. For awhile as they rode she was characteristically amusing, sailing blandly over the shoals of scandal, though Eileen never suspected it—wittily gay at her own expense as well as at others, flitting airily from topic to topic on the wings of a self assurance that becomes some women if they know when to stop. But presently the mischievous perversity in her bubbled up again. She was tired of being good. She had often meant to try the effect of a gentle shock on Miss Erroll, and, besides, she wondered just how much truth there might be in the unpleasantly persistent rumor of the girl's unannounced engagement to Selwyn.

"It would be amusing, wouldn't it?" she asked, with guileless frankness. "But, of course, it is not true—this report of their reconciliation."

"Whose reconciliation?" asked Miss Erroll innocently.

"Why, Alixe Ruthven and Captain Selwyn. Everybody is discussing it, you know."

"Reconciled!" I don't understand," said Eileen, astonished. "They can't be. How can"—

"But it would be amusing, wouldn't it? And she could very easily get rid of Jack Ruthven. Any woman could. So if they really mean to remarry"—

The girl stared, breathless, astounded, bolt upright in her saddle.

"Oh," she protested, while the hot blood mantled throat and cheek, "it is wickedly untrue! How could such a thing be true, Mrs. Fane? It is—is so senseless!"

Miserably uncomfortable, utterly unable to comprehend, the girl rode on in silence, her ears ringing with Rosamund's words. And Rosamund, riding beside her, cool, blond and cynically amused, continued the theme with admirable pretense of indifference.

"It's a pity that ill natured people are forever discussing them, and it makes me indignant, because I've always been very fond of Alixe Ruthven, and I am positive that she does not correspond with Captain Selwyn. A girl in her position would be crazy to invite suspicion by doing the things they say she is doing."

"Don't, Mrs. Fane, please don't!" stammered Eileen. "I—I really can't listen! I simply will not! If you knew him as I do, Mrs. Fane, you would never, never have spoken as you have!"

Mrs. Fane relished neither the naive rebuke nor the intimation that her own acquaintance with Selwyn was so limited, and least of all did she relish the implied intimacy between this red haired young girl and Captain Selwyn.

"Dear Miss Erroll," she said blandly, "I spoke as I did only to assure you that I also disregard such malicious gossip."

"But if you disregard it, Mrs. Fane, why do you repeat it?"

"Merely to emphasize to you my disbelief in it, child," returned Rosamund. "Do you understand?"

"Yes. Thank you. Yet I should never have heard of it at all if you had not told me."

Rosamund's color rose one degree.

"It is better to hear such things from a friend, is it not?"

"I didn't know that one's friends said such things, but perhaps it is better that way, as you say, only I cannot understand the necessity of my knowing—of my hearing—because it is Captain Selwyn's affair, after all."

"And that," said Rosamund deliberately, "is why I told you."

"Told me? Oh, because he and I are such close friends?"

"Yes. Such very close friends that I"—she laughed—"I am informed that your interests are soon to be identical."

The girl swung round, self possessed, but dreadfully pale.

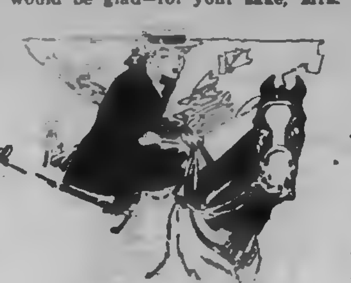
"If you believed that," she said, "it was vile of you to say what you said, Mrs. Fane."

"But I did not believe it, child!" stammered Rosamund, several degrees redder than became her and now convinced that it was true. "I n-never dreamed of offending you, Miss Erroll."

"Do you suppose I am too ignorant to take offense?" said the girl unsteadily. "I told you very plainly that I did not understand the matters you chose for discussion, but I do understand impertinence when I am driven to it."

"I am very, very sorry, that you believe I meant it that way," said Rosamund, biting her lips.

"What did you mean? You are older than I; you are certainly experienced; besides, you are married. If you can give it a gentler name than insolence I would be glad—for your sake, Mrs. Fane. I only know that you have spoiled my ride, spoiled the day for me, hurt me, humiliated me and awakened not curiosity, not suspicion, but the horror of it, in me."



A girl splendidly mounted saluted her.

Her voice became unsteady again, and her mouth curved, but she held her head high, and her eyes were as fearlessly direct as a child's.

"And now," she said calmly, "you know where I stand and what I will not stand."

If Rosamund had anything left to say or any breath to say it there were no indications of it. Never in her flippant existence had she been so absolutely flattened by any woman. As for this recent graduate from fudge and olives, she could scarcely realize how utterly and finally she had been silenced by her. Incredulity, exasperation, amazement, had succeeded each other while Miss Erroll was speaking; chagrin, shame, helplessness, followed as bitter residue, but in the end the very incongruity of the situation came to her aid.

"I'm certainly a little beast," she said impulsively, "but I really do like you. Will you forgive?"

No genuine appeal to the young girl's generosity had ever been in vain. She forgave almost as easily as she breathed. Even now in the flush of just resentment it was not hard for her to forgive. She hesitated only in order to adjust matters in her own mind.

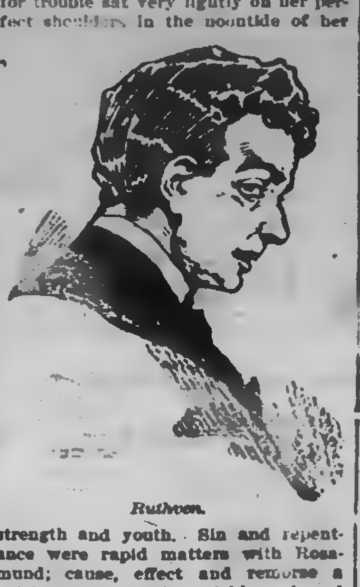
Mrs. Fane swung her horse and held out her right hand:

"Is it peace, Miss Erroll? I'm really ashamed of myself. Won't you forgive me?"

"Yes," said the young girl, laying her gloved hand on Rosamund's very lightly. "I've often thought," she added naively, "that I could like you, Mrs. Fane, if you would only give me a chance."

"I'll try, you blessed innocent. You've torn me into rags and tatters, and you did it adorably. What I said was idle, half witted, gossiping nonsense. So forget every atom of it as soon as you can, my dear, and let me prove that I'm not an utter idiot if I can."

"That will be delightful," said Eileen, with a demure smile, and Rosamund laughed, too, with full hearted laughter, for trouble sat very lightly on her perfect shoulders in the noontide of her strength and youth. Sin and repentance were rapid matters with Rosamund; cause, effect and remorse a quick sequence to be quickly reckoned up, checked off and canceled and the next blank page turned over to be ruled and filled with the next impeachment. There was in her more of mischief than of real malice and unfeigned liking and respect for the turning worm.



Ruthven.

* * * * * * *

"And, my dear," she said, concluding the account of the adventure to Mrs. Ruthven that afternoon at Sherry's, "I've never been so roundly abused and so soundly trounced in my life as I was this blessed morning by that red headed novice. Oh, my! Oh, la! I could have screamed with laughter at my own undoing."

"It's what you deserved," said Alixe, intensely annoyed, although Rosamund had not told her all that she had so kindly and gratuitously denied concerning her relations with Selwyn. "It was sheer effrontery of you, Rosamund, to put such notions into the head of a child and stir her up into taking a fictitious interest in Philip Selwyn which I know—which is perfectly plain to me, to anybody—never existed."

"Of course it existed," retorted Rosamund, delighted now to worry Alixe. "She didn't know it; that is all. It really was simple charity to wake her up. It's a good match, too, and so obviously and naturally inevitable that there's no harm in playing prophetess. There is the youthful brother of our red haired novice now. He sees us, and he's coming to inflict himself with another moon faced creature. Shall we bolt?"

Alixe turned and stared at Gerald, who came up boyishly red and impetuous.

"How d'ye do, Mrs. Ruthven? Did you get my note? How d'ye do, Mrs. Fane? Awf'lly jolly to collide this way. Would you mind if"—

A WELCOME CHANGE

To-day my spirit's light as air,
My soul is filled with joy,
I want to shout a gladsome shout
And gambol like a boy.
The murky mists have rolled away.
The day is filled with light;
I'm going out to celebrate
With all my main and might.

This morn I picked my paper up
And scanned the head-lines o'er;
And as at every page I glanced
My soul commenced to soar.
For not a word did I behold
Of Peary or of Cook.
Of Peary saying "I was first.
The doctor is a crook."

No Arctic pictures stared at me
From out the printed sheet;
No tales of faithful Eskimos
Who'd hardly stop to eat.
No maps of Polar regions drear,
No sketches of the route.
The North Pole seeker followed,
Clad in his musk-ox suit.

To-morrow may bring back my grief.
And plunge me deep in woe.
Another day may have its tales
Of northern ice and snow.
I'm thankful for this brief respite
From conquests of the Pole.
I'm going out to celebrate
With gladness in my soul.
Peterborough, Sept. 29, 1909.

PRACTICE MUST BE STOPPED AT ONCE

A small cart handled by two young boys, collided with a lady on George street between Charlotte street and the C.P.R. station Friday evening, causing the lady's ankle to be broken. It is understood that the two boys will soon find themselves in trouble and in the meantime those who have been in the habit of indulging in this practice, which is a source of annoyance and danger to pedestrians, will avoid prosecution by discontinuing it. The police authorities are on the lookout for offenders and they will be severely dealt with if caught in the act.

Five dwellings on Selkirk avenue, Winnipeg, were destroyed by fire, with $5,000 loss.

COMMITTED FOR TRIAL ON MANSLAUGHTER CHARGE

Conclusion of Preliminary Hearing of Fred and Harry Jopling — Mr. O'Connell Urged Dismissal of Charge — Bail Accepted.

The preliminary hearing of Fred and Harry Jopling who are accused of manslaughter in connection with the death of Arthur Bollard at Chemong Park was concluded this morning in the county police court. County Police Magistrate Edmison committed both young men for trial.

Mr. D. O'Connell, counsel for the defence, urged that there was nothing in the evidence submitted to the court to show that the Joplings were even indirectly responsible for the death of Bollard.

"I have no hesitation in saying," stated the magistrate, "that these boys did not intend to take Bollard's life." But he said the circumstances were such that he wouldn't feel justified in dismissing the charge, and though the only thing he could do was to send the accused up for trial. He then committed them for trial.

Bail for $4,000 for the two prisoners in two sureties of $2,000 each was granted by Judge Huycke.

ALD. TURNER RETAINS HIS PLACE IN CITY COUNCIL

The action brought against Ald. J. J. Turner by Mr. Ald. Kingscote, on the ground that the respondent accepted contracts for his firm while an alderman of the city, was dismissed by Judge Huycke this morning.

Mr. A. P. Poussette, who was solicitor for Mr. Kingscote, stated that he had no evidence to submit.

Mr. F. D. Kerr appeared for Ald. Turner.

MANY CITIZENS VIEWED THE MYSTERIES OF THE SKY

A large number of citizens availed themselves of the opportunity afforded by the outdoor meeting of the Royal Astronomical Society last evening to view the heavens at close range.

Two telescopes were set up for the front entrance to the Collegiate Institute and for the space of three hours a steady stream of people took their turn at the sights afforded.

The telescopes were operated by Mr. D. Easson and Mr. H. B. Collier, who kindly answered the numerous questions asked and as well, directed the gaze to the special features of the planet under observation.

The evening was a most profitable and interesting one to all who were fortunate enough to be present. To the majority this was the first time they had ever seen through a telescope, and the novelty added to the interest of the knowledge obtained.

The powerful telescopes enabled the viewer to approach the moon as near as 2,000 miles, thus affording a clear view of the many configurations thereon, such as the mountain ranges, the many extinct volcanoes, the old ocean-beds etc. To many this was a sight never to be forgotten.

Saturn, that giant planet with the wonderful rung about it, was a grand sight, the shape under the telescope proving so different to what appears to the naked eye.

The great polar ice cap on Mars and the peculiar markings—supposed to be the great canals of a vast irrigation scheme—were plainly visible and, of course, evoked much interest.

The council of the society met during the early part of the evening and made plans for the ensuing fall and winter. A number of very prominent astronomers and public men have already consented to address the society here, and the brightest prospects are before the Peterborough centre. The opening meeting will be held on Tuesday, October 12th, when an illustrated talk will be given by Mr. G. Parry Jenkins, F.R.A.S., president of the Hamilton Society.

Among the list of lecturers appear the name of Warner, the famous telescope manufacturer, and Stupart, the "Weather Man" of Canada. The visit of Mr. Stupart will undoubtedly prove most interesting as his name is familiar from one end of the Dominion to the other.

As a considerable number of citizens have signified their intention of joining the Astronomical Society, a card to Miss Estelle Foy, the secretary, will bring all necessary information relating thereto.

LOOKING FOR A PHONE.

Harker's Experience In His Hurry Call For a Doctor.

There was a new baby in the Harker household, and the baby had indigestion. Fearing that every family in the peaceful suburban village would be aroused, Harker dashed across the street to the grocery store to call up the doctor.

"Hey, you," shouted Harker, breathlessly, "wake up! Got a phone?"

The sleepy eyed stripling yawned and stumbled around the counter.

"Believe we have, mister."

"Well, where is it? Quick, boy, I'm in a hurry!"

"You really want to use it?"

"Of course I want to use it. Show it to me, quick!"

"Won't break it, will you?"

"Break it? Me break it? Boy, show me the phone or I'll pull your ears."

The awkward stripling reached up on a shelf and brought down what appeared to be a large paper horn.

"Here it is, boss, and it's a good one—the best megaphone in town. Wouldn't like you to break it, though, 'cause the boss uses it Saturday nights to call people to his fish sale. Reckon you'll keep"—

But Harker was gone.—Chicago News.

His Endurance.

He was home from college, and his father looked him over critically.

"You're pretty dern thin," the old man said. "Are you feelin' well?"

"I am enjoying very excellent health, father," the young man blithely replied.

"I want to know," said the old man as he continued his inspection. "Pretty reasonably tough, eh?"

"I am quite strong, I assure you, father," the young man replied. "I'm really proud of my endurance. Why, only think, father, I played golf once for fully four minutes in quite a wet shower, don't you know!"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The captivating Corsican Chorus in the big musical comedy, "A Knight for a Day," which comes to The Grand next Saturday, October 2, for matinee and evening.

Miniature maidens in miraculous munificence are one of the features of the big musical gaiety "A Knight For a Day," which manager B. C. Whitney sends to the "Grand" next Saturday, Oct. 2nd, matinee and evening.

They have been drilled by Gus Sohlke, Mr. Whitney's general stage director, and they dance and sing and caper about the stage to the delight of the ear and eye. Like every production that Mr. Sohlke has rehearsed, "A Knight for a Day," contains numerous chorus novelties and the rich blending of the costumes, scenery and electrical effects present a picture that will be difficult to efface from the pages of memory.

"Some of the bolts of laughter evoked by the performance could be heard in the Subway, across from the theatre," is what the dramatic critic of the Boston Record wrote in describing the premiere night's audience at the Tremont, with "A Knight for a Day," the magnet.

"Show took the house; fun and music and startling effects," is part of the Boston Herald's report of the opening of "A Knight for a Day's" engagement at the Tremont Theatre.

N.Y.C. CONDUCTOR IDENTIFIES MRS. TURNER AS PASSENGER

Edwin O. Parrish, of the New York Central Railroad, Testifies at Inquest on Authers' Baby to Having Seen Mrs. Turner on His Train.

Toronto, Sept. 30.—"I saw her on that train that day." With these words spoken in answer to a question from Assistant County Crown Attorney Monahan, at the inquest into the death of the Authers infant at the morgue last night, Edwin O. Parrish, conductor of the New York Central Railroad, identified Mrs. Turner, charged with the murder of the child, as a woman whom he had helped off the very train from which the body of the infant had been thrown.

The witness gave his evidence in a quiet and convincing manner, and every effort of counsel for the prisoner failed utterly to shake him.

Parrish was the third witness called, and his evidence struck the first note of interest that has been heard since the inquest was opened a week ago.

Later Harry Gmelin of Niagara Falls, who has lived with the prisoner for a number of years told the story of their goings and comings. As his evidence drew to a close the prisoner who had sat quietly throughout the hearing flushed noticeably, and as she was being led from the room by Police Matron Mrs. Whiddon, she collapsed into the arms of two police officers, with a cry that was half sob and half a moan. In an ante-room she was quickly revived, but was not again brought back to the court-room.

Mrs. Jennie Swazie, who keeps the boarding-house where Harry Gmelin, heretofore supposed to be Mrs. Turner's husband, and who lived with her for years as such, boards, told of Mrs. Turner's appearance at her house in September, with yet another baby which she took away and the whereabouts of which is a mystery.

Conductor Parrish told of the movements of his train on the Thursday, Sept. 16, the day on which the body was thrown from the window of one of its cars, as it was on its way to Lewiston from Niagara Falls, on the early afternoon trip.

"Can you say if you ever saw this lady before?" asked Mr. Monahan, indicating Mrs. Turner.

"I think I have," replied the witness. "I'm pretty sure I have."

"When?"

"On that train, that day."

Asked what fixed the incident in his mind, Parrish described how the train had stopped at Lewiston, and told of helping Mrs. Turner to alight from it.

He described her clothes and later identified a black hat and tailor-made suit as like those which she had worn. He seemed anxious not to overstate his identification, but was sure of both the time and the woman.

On cross-examination, T. C. Robinette, K.C., strove to shake him. He asked if he had not been shown a photo of the woman, but Parrish replied that he had not. He asked if she had been pointed out to him, but this also was answered in the negative.

Asked how he came to notice this one woman out of the hundreds that he saw daily, he replied:

"When she came down the platform she was very pale, but she was smiling. She smiled the same way just now," he added.

The very ghost of a smile here flittered across the prisoner's face, wavered, her lips trembled irresolutely and her hand was raised nervously to her mouth, which again took on the almost plaintive droop which had marked it as her most attractive feature since she has been seen in the courts.

HARD WORDS FOR PEARY FROM AMERICAN PAPERS

New York, Sept. 30.—The Herald publishes opinions on the polar "feud," from the editors of such representative dailies as The Chicago Record Herald, Chicago Journal, Washington Post, Washington Star, New Orleans Picayune, Buffalo Express, Baltimore News, Cincinnati Times Star, Baltimore American, Washington Herald, St. Louis Post Despatch, Louisville Courier Journal, and San Francisco Call, and all are inclined to censure Commander Peary. Such words as "churlish," "selfish," used to term Peary's behavior in refusing to bring back Cook's records. The San Francisco Chronicle says editorially. "There is no generosity in Peary's endeavor and no courtesy to his opponent. He is in the game not for sport, but for money, and the verdict of the country is that Dr. Cook is a gentleman and Peary a cad, and that without reference to whether either of them reached the north pole. That Dr. Cook reached the spot which the instruments he carried indicated as the north pole. The contrary belief as to what Peary did there has ceased to cause much curiosity. Nobody cares whether he got to the north pole, but there would be much satisfaction if it were known that he would now go there and stay there. It is a good place for him."

Philadelphia Cheers Cook.

Philadelphia, Sept. 30.—Dr. Frederick A. Cook, the Arctic explorer, came to this city last night at the Academy of Music, and received a great reception at the hands of a great crowd at the Pennsylvania railroad station. His ride to the Bellevue Hotel, and up to the City Hall was a continuous ovation.

Dr. Cook's right hand it literally flayed with so much hand-shaking, and he is now compelled to offer his left hand.

Montreal, Sept. 30.—Warrants were issued yesterday for the arrest of Harry Bousfield and Pete Paterson, members of the Board of International Mine Workers of America, who at present are attending the Mine Workers' convention in Indianapolis. They will be charged with conspiracy against the Dominion Coal Co.

PROVINCE LOST A GOOD THING

Montreal, Sept. 30.—Jas. A. Brooks, on behalf of the purchasing syndicate, confirmed last evening the report that the Young and O'Brien property of seventeen acres, purchased in July from the Ontario Government for $10,500, had passed into the hands of some Montrealers for about $400,000.

The original owners, A. J. Young of North Bay, and M. J. O'Brien of Renfrew, expended $2,400 on the property which now passes into the hands of Dr. Miller Hersey, James A. Brooks, Alex. Pringle, James Robinson, ex-M.P. for Northumberland, N.B.; Shirley Ogilvie, John P. Black, Lieut.-Col. Smart and Victor E. Mitchell.

CANNOT PREVENT CANADIANS CROSSING

Niagara Falls, N.Y., Sept. 30.—There is nothing in the law which can prevent the 600 or more Canadian men and women from coming to this side of the river daily to work in American shops and offices, even though the Canadians maintains residences in the Dominion.

That is the opinion given by Daniel J. Keefe, commissioner general of immigration, in reply to the inquiry of the common council.

MONTREAL DRUGGISTS WILL FIGHT THE LAW

Montreal, Sept. 30.—That the local druggists will put up a bitter fight against the new early closing laws, which compel all storekeepers to close their places of business on two evenings a week, was shown yesterday morning when the drug men issued an ultimatum to the City Council. They declared that if they were not permitted to sell their usual wares on these evenings they would not keep them open for the purpose of dispensing drugs.

CURTISS AND WRIGHT FLY

New York, Sept. 30.—Wilbur Wright circled the great statue of Liberty at the entrance of New York harbor in his aeroplane yesterday, while in the upper city two huge dirigible balloons fell ingloriously to earth.

Wilbur Wright made three sensational flights and Curtiss made one brief, though successful, test flight of 30 seconds' duration. Capt. Baldwin, with his dirigible landed in the Hudson River less than an hour after the start, while Tomlinton, after remaining in the air from 11.36 a.m. until 1.30 p.m., came to earth near White Plains, 22 miles from his starting point, after the oil tanks began to leak.

KING'S COUNTY ELECTION PROTEST

One man got $5 from a mysterious stranger, who threw money on the ground before him, and another found that someone had secretly placed a case of liquor in his wagon. He did not discover his good fortune till half a mile from town, where the liquor was distributed among the boys. Another had some mysteriously placed in his granary.

Crowds fill the Puerta del Sol and the surrounding streets, acclaiming the news which marks a glorious ending of the war and the early return of the troops.

BRITISH FLEET AT ANCHOR OUTSIDE SANDY HOOK.

Photographs from the N. Y. Herald by John Nichols.

New York, Sept. 30.—Carefully nosing their way from Fire Island through a dense fog and choppy seas, three British warships—the Drake, the Duke of Edinburgh and the Argyll—dropped their anchors five miles off Sandy Hook.

There they remained throughout the day, awaiting the arrival of the Inflexible, with Admiral Sir Edward Hobart Seymour aboard, but late in the afternoon a wireless message was received from Sir Edward announcing that the Inflexible would arrive off the Hook at daylight.

In anticipation of the arrival of the British naval contingent, which will occupy a conspicuous place in the great parade, large crowds had gathered on the shores of Staten Island and Long Island.

HAMILTON CAN ENTER INTO CONTRACT WITH HYDRO ELEC.

Chief Justice Sir William Meredith Dismisses Action Brought by Broker Morris to Prevent City Applying for Government Power.

Hamilton, Sept. 30.—After several years' struggle, Hamilton is free at last to enter the Government's project for cheap electric power. The legal entanglements that R. S. Morris, stock broker, attempted to rear in the way of the council applying to the Hydro-Electric Power Commission for a supply of power, were brushed aside yesterday afternoon by Chief Justice Sir William Meredith. C. J. Holman, K.C., who, with City Solicitor Waddell, represented the City Council, was not even called upon to present an argument, and his lordship dismissed with costs the action brought by Mr. Morris to prevent the council taking power from the commission.

"I think whoever attacked the Hydro-Electric bylaw went far afield to find grounds for this action," was one of the caustic observations made by his lordship.

Geo. S. Kerr, K.C., who represented Mr. Morris, did not even attempt to show that there had been bribery and corruption, as he charged in his statement of claim, and although T. J. Stewart, M.P., and Ald. Wright admitted making the statements he had termed as misrepresentations with regard to the power situation, when the question was before the ratepayers last June, Mr. Kerr did not try to substantiate his claim that they were misrepresentations.

Mr. Kerr confined his case to two points, that the voters' lists used last June, when the ratepayers turned down the Cataract contract and voted for a contract with the commission, were improper lists, because they contained the names of electors as well as ratepayers, and secondly, that the council was bound by the contract with the Cataract Power Co., put through by last year's council.

His lordship found that the lists used were proper and that the voting was regular and continued:

"Then, with regard to the other point raised by Mr. Kerr, the right of the council to enter into a contract with the Hydro-Electric Commission, in view of the contract entered into by the council of 1908 with the Cataract Company, which is perhaps the most substantial part of the case, I think it is quite clear that there is no power in the court to overrule the action or the judgment of the council with regard to the matter of entering into a contract with the Hydro-Electric Power Commission.

"Apparently the Cataract Company is not suing for its account. If it did sue for it, the question would be immediately raised, and having regard to the course of litigation and the importance for the question, it might be two or three years before final judgment would be reached in the case, even if the view of Justice Anglin prevailed as to the effect of the contract. What would be the result? It would be that this corporation would have been tied from getting power from anybody in the meantime, without any right to avail itself of any opportunity that was afforded in the meantime to enter into a contract with somebody else. It seems to me that upon the plainest business principle, as well as according to the law, it was for the council to determine whether it was expedient in the condition of matters which existed to enter into this contract or not, that having in good faith come to the conclusion, the ratepayers having sanctioned their doing it also, which appears to be an essential to the right of their entering into a contract, this court has no right, no power, no jurisdiction to interfere with the judgment and acts of the council.

"The Legislature has left to the council, elected by the ratepayers, the business that the council shall do, and I think it would be a most unfortunate thing if judges, without any special training or aptitude for dealing with the large commercial business matters, which engage the attention of councils, should assume to supersede their judgment as to the expediency of any course proposed to be taken upon such questions as these.

"In my opinion the action fails and must be dismissed."

CANADIAN NORTHERN HAULING IMMENSE AMOUNT OF WHEAT

Montreal, Sept. 30.—The amount of wheat marketed on the Canadian Northern Railway in the three provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta has averaged 400,000 bushels daily during the past two weeks, and during one particular day the amount ran up to no less than 438,000 bushels.

D. D. Mann, vice-president of the C. N. R., who was at the Windsor last evening, also stated that the number of cars loaded and moved on the same railway en route for Lake Superior indicate an increase of no less than 66 per cent. over 1908, and added that the bushels of wheat received on the Canadian Northern during September will exceed nine million.

GRAND TRUNK PACIFIC TO BE READY NEXT JUNE

Montreal, Sept. 30.—It can now be officially stated that the Grand Trunk Pacific will be completed by June 1 next, passengers and freight being carried from the head of Lake Superior to within sight of the Rocky Mountains. The announcement was likewise made that the G.T.P. will have a grade through the Rockies of four-tenths of one per cent.

At the sixth annual meeting yesterday, the election of officers resulted: C. M. Hays, president; E. J. Chamberlain, vice-president and general manager; directors: Sir Charles Rivers-Wilson, Alfred W. Smithers Maurice, George Carr Glynn, Frederick Firebrace, Rt. Hon. Lord Wolby, William Wainwright, M. M. Reynolds, W. H. Biggar, E. H. Fitzhugh, A. Allan, E. B. Greenshields, Hon. Geo. A. Cox, E. B. Wood and J. R. Booth.

R. R. HALL WAS EXAMINED THIS MORNING REGARDING TALKS WITH ASHLEY AND GATES

His Evidence Does Not Agree With That of the Two Men in Question—Did Not See "Theatre Line" So Many Witnesses Have Told of

Thomas Nicholls Was Not Present When Called Upon and Mr. DuVernet Spoke of Getting a Warrant.

Arthur Morgan Must Have "Made the Mare Go"—Mr Watson's Request for Dismissal of Several Charges Not Granted.

Mr R. R. Hall was examined at the protest trial this morning, and his evidence conflicted with that of previous witnesses on different points. He denied having offered Ashley or Gates easy money for their affidavits, gave testimony, which, if accepted, would go to show that Mr. Leary was not in that "little east room" at the time he was supposed to have been placing the money under the lid for the alleged line of waiting ones, and also said in reference to this line that it was impossible for such a condition to exist. Mr. Hall further stated that there was "no money going" that day.

JAMES HARRISON.

James Harrison, a resident of Peterborough, was at Mr. Stratton's committee rooms on election day about three o'clock in the afternoon. Saw P. C. McHarry there and talked for about half an hour with him. Saw other faces there I knew, but can't say what their names are. Witness said he was in the big room and also in the small room. Saw several others going in the small room, but did not know what happened. There was no one in the little room when I went in, witness said. I saw four or five persons go in and out before I went in. After I went into the small room Mr. Leary came in. I was told the little room was a lavatory and went in for that purpose. I did not know it was Mr. Leary I was talking to. I was told afterwards that it was Mr. Leary who was in the room with me.

Mr. Watson objected to witness telling what occurred between Mr. Leary and himself as there was no charge bearing on this point.

To Mr. Watson Harrison said he was working at nights at the Quaker Oats Co. at the time of the election and was strolling around town on the day of the election. After leaving the Liberal rooms he went towards his home in the northern part of the city. He was in no particular hurry and he voted at Lee's shop just before five o'clock. Witness asked who that was in the room with him after he had come out and was told that it was Robert Leary. Witness did not see Mr. Stratton there but, recollected that he had seen W. S. Davidson there. He did not know Mr. Davidson at the time but remembered his face. The little room he saw the persons going in and coming out of was the one in the corner. I was sitting five or six yards from the door of the little room, witness said. He could not say how many persons were in the big room. Said he was subpoenaed last night and again this morning.

You were at the solicitor's office last night?

No I was not.

Just think about that now.

I don't need to think. I know for sure.

You might have got $50, Mr. Watson put in.

I didn't want it that way, Harrison said.

To Mr. DuVernet witness said he had been asked not an hour ago to go to a solicitor's office.

You didn't go then? Mr. DuVernet said.

No I didn't want to have anything to do with solicitors, and there was a laugh in the court room.

To Justice McMahon Harrison said he thought he was going into the lavatory when he went into the small room.

WITNESS NOT PRESENT

Thomas Nichols did not answer to his name.

"I want to put myself in a position to secure a warrant for this man," Mr. DuVernet said.

"Thomas Nichols, please come forward and answer to the subpoena that has been served upon you," the court crier called out three times, and there was no response.

"Robert Mitchell was called by the crier and a man stepped into the box. It turned out that his name was Robert Nichols and he was told to step down.

"Perhaps this man can tell us something about Thomas Nichols." Mr. Watson said, but such was not the case.

WOULD NOT DISMISS CHARGES.

Mr. Watson asked their Lordships to dismiss charges No. 187, 7 and 11, on the ground that the witnesses who had given evidence in connection with them had been proved unreliable.

"I am prepared to argue the point with Mr. Watson," Mr. DuVernet said.

"My learned friend is a little fresh this morning," Mr. Watson retorted.

Justice McMahon—"I think we had better hear all the evidence first. We'll dispose of all the charges together."

Mr. Watson submitted to their Lordships a number of the charges he thought should be thrown out on the ground that the evidence of the witnesses had been discredited. They were what have become known as the "Leary charges," and have reference to the alleged paying out of money by Mr. Leary at the committee rooms on election day. Among the charges Mr. Watson drew attention to were No. 17, Aleept; No. 15, Hagland; No. 35, Pope; No. 173, Butler; No. 174, Williams.

ARTHUR McCLELLAN.

Arthur McClellan was called by Mr. Watson.

Mr. W. S. Davidson and Mr. Leary were asked to leave the court room while Mr. McClellan was in the box. Mr. Watson wanted to have Mr. Leary remain but the judges ruled he should leave.

A MATTER OF INTEREST

"The lover of truth must be a seeker after truth" said Rev. Prof. McLaughlin, of Victoria College, at last night's session of the Theological Conference at Victoria College.

"He will welcome new light upon the way. He will try not to be afraid of the shadows or of the bogies.

"The Bible has come down to us through the ages. We have not made it nor can we say just how it ought to have been or must have been made.

"The Bible is a collection of very old books. Seeing that they have come down to us from such a vast antiquity through so many authors, editors, transcribers and annotators, is it surprising that we may not always have formed correct views about them—that we may still have something to learn?

"We hear sometimes loud professions of loyalty to the past—of holding fast to 'the faith of our fathers.' I think I am as loyal to the faith as any man, but I want to know what all this has to do with the interpretation of Bible literature and history.

"Does it mean that I must hold with the Jewish fathers that the law is the absolute and perfect revelation of God, created before the world and in every part of equal value.

"Must I change history and law into allegory, as Philo and Clement and Origen did? Or, like Luther, must I regard the allegorical method as foolishness and follow him in making the Psalms and Genesis refer almost exclusively to Christ?

"Must I adopt the extreme literalism of Calvin or, with Jonathan Edwards, find Old Testament history full of types and shadows of the Christian Church 'made mystical' that God's people might have 'exercise for their pious wisdom and study'?

"Must I believe with Wesley that 'giving up witchcraft is giving up the Bible'? Does not loyalty to the faith of the fathers mean loyalty to Jesus Christ and to the essential truths of the Divine Word rather than to some particular theory or manner of interpretation?

"We must put emphasis in the right place. If it is history we are looking for, the Biblical record must submit to the same tests as other history.

"But if we are looking for a divine revelation, why waste time in doubtful disputation as to dates, placing the books, etc.? Origen rightly said that the sacred writing had body, soul and spirit. No evolutionary theory that recognises the presence of God in the minds of His people need be feared."

Prof McLaughlin declared that "any man with an honest mind is compelled to accepted at least some of the results of modern criticism.

Speaking on "The Prophets in the Early Church," Rev. Prof. Bland, of Wesleyan College, Montreal, stated that the problems of the early church were very much like those of the church to-day and that scepticism was rampant in those days, even as it is now.

"There is one thing of which we can have no doubt," said Rev. Dr. Elliott, of Wesley College, Winnipeg, in speaking at this morning's session on "Some Aspects of the Teaching of Jesus in the Sermon on the Mount." "Jesus was a man.

"The question arises, what was the significance of the term man as used by Jesus to designate himself. We may at once discard the meaning which involves moral weakness. Jesus does not anywhere speak of himself as sinning and needing to repent, but everywhere assumes his own sinlessness.

"I think we may conclude that Jesus taught that He was an ideal man, or that He was humanity which, in a very vital sense, possessed divinity.

"He must have endorsed the statement of Nathaniel and Martha, 'Thou art the Son of God,' and the stronger statement of Thomas, 'My Lord and my God,' or He was either playing a part or infatuated. But His whole life breathes both reality and sanity.

"I regard everything whatsoever as a realization of God, as something in which God reveals and realizes His being or nature. Science is learning that there is no dead inert atom and is declaring what she regards as the material ultimate to be a mysterious force."—Toronto Telegram.

FOR THE LADY WHO CALLS

The lady who has a large circle of acquaintances always finds it a difficult matter to keep track of the reception days of her friends and often mistakes are made, that might have been avoided if care were taken to make a record of such days. And then there are the teas, at homes, and parties to be remembered too and when a hostess is planning an affair, she is always worried lest she overlook some one who has extended hospitality to her some time previous. To avoid these mistakes, a social register has been issued by the Review, that will be a boon to the busy lady. There are pages for each day of the month on which the record of the calls received and paid with the address of the visitor appear, then there are pages for social engagements, visits paid, addresses and memoranda, all of which prove very valuable data to have. These books are on sale at all the book stores and at the Review Office for 50 cents and there has already been a good demand for them.

MONTREAL, Sept. 29.—(Special.)—At the Canadian Pacific live stock market, the offerings consisted of 1200 cattle, 400 sheep, 400 lambs, 650 hogs and 150 calves. Cattle prices have advanced 25c to 50c per hundred pounds since Monday, in spite of liberal offerings, but an active trade was done.

The market for sheep was steady under a fair demand, and sales at 3¾c per lb. The demand for calves was very good, but supplies were small. Sales were made at $3 to $10 each. Something About Moose and Deer

It is now pretty well known among hunters that the best deer hunting country in Ontario is on the line of the Canadian Northern Ontario and that hunters receive special attention. Mr. C. Price Green, Passenger Agent of the line is a hunter himself who goes right with the parties and looks after them, in fact he located most of them. This year the line will be opened north of Sellwood into the midst of the Moose Country, they are reported very thick, the Engineers say that they have never seen anything like it, the Moose season up there opens October 15th, fifteen days before the Deer. We have something special on a new place that will take three parties of deer hunters

DEATH IN A SCRATCH

Simple Injuries with Serious Results

Morris Quatzam, an eleven year old Windsor boy, has just died as the result of a scratch on his wrist. Poison entered the wound which was caused by falling off his bicycle, and despite the physicians, the boy died. Such incidents as these—by no means infrequent—ought to make people realize the danger that may lie even in the smallest flesh wound.

Take a simple illustration: When a dirty knife, a rusty needle, a splinter of dirty wood, a barbed wire fence, or a thorn, scratches the hand, the latter is inoculated with germs, of which the air about us is full. Directly these germs are introduced through the breech in the skin, a battle ensues between them and certain organisms in our blood.

When the invading germs are too strong for Natures defences, in a few hours the finger will become hot and throbbing. A little later the wound may exhibit a whitish appearance in the middle of the swelling, and we have what is known as a festering or poisoned wound.

The way to avoid such serious results is to cleanse the wound and apply Zam-Buk. Zam-Buk is a powerful yet painless germ killer, and when applied to the broken skin is absorbed into the tissue, instantly destroying the germs that spread disease and inflamation.

The flesh is thus soothed and purified, the wound made perfectly healthy, and all poison and cause of festering removed. Having done this, Zam-Buk then proceeds to heal the wound or sore with new healthy tissue in a quick, painless, and perfect manner.

Zam-Buk must not be confused with ordinary ointments. Zam-Buk is a unique preparation, possessing antiseptic, soothing and healing qualities that are not to be found together in any other preparation. It is not only a unique healing balm, but it is also a skin food. For all skin diseases and injuries—cuts, bruises, burns, eczema, chafing, ulcers, ringworm, etc., it is without equal. It is also used widely for piles, for which it may be regarded as a specific. All druggists and stores sell at fifty cents a box, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price.

Sink holes are very numerous on the C.P.R. line between Sudbury and Kenora.

THOUGH MARRED BY UNFAVORABLE WEATHER LAKEFIELD FAIR A SUCCESS

It takes more than a threatening rain or even occasional showers to dampen the ardor of the patrons of the Lakefield Fair. A late arrival on the grounds Wednesday afternoon would be greatly surprised to find almost as big a crowd of fair visitors as on previous occasions, and the people all as happy looking under a sea of umbrellas as though old Sol was shining his brightest. The forethought of the management this year was especially opportune in providing a new and very comfortable grandstand. The grandstand has been build to accommodate about three hundred people, and it was filled to its capacity, the shelter of its corrugated iron roof being just what was wanted by the ladies when the rain was making it uncomfortable outside.

The receipts were about $300, showing that between 1,200 and 1,500 people were on the grounds.

Besides the new grandstand a new judges' stand, with a neat roof, has been erected, giving the judges quite a grand feeling when ensconced in their little pagoda.

A new inner ring for judging the horses has also been provided enclosed by a substantial fence of wire and a top-pole.

Evidently exhibitors knew of the improved accommodation and the special effort that had been made to make Lakefield's 1909 fall fair the best ever, and they come out with a big entry. All lines in the building were exceptionally good, especially fruit and vegetables. The ladies' work filled all the space alotted to them and was greatly admired by an interested crowd of ladies.

The sheep corner was better filled than usual but there were fewer hogs, perhaps the only section in which there was a decrease. Cattle, specially grades and dairy classes were a good entry, and some fine animals were on exhibition.

But the mainstay of the fair, as in former years, was the horses. Every class brought out a big entry, and the quality was of a high order. It would be hard to say any one section was better than the other, but probably the carriage horses were superior to the other classes some notable animals being shown. A part of the results is given in this issue, and the remainder will appear in the prize-list later.

FOOT RACE.

The mile race proved one of the most interesting events of the afternoon. There were four competitors but one dropped out after going a short distance. J. Snake, Chemong, came in first and second honors went to E. Jacobs, who also hails from the Indian village on Chemong Lake. M. McDonald finished third.

GOOD CARRIAGE HORSES

The judging of the carriage horses in front of the of the grand stand was followed with deep interest. Several splendid specimens of horse flesh were shown. H. Hall got first place for carriage team over 15 1-2 hands. Second place went to John Knox and third place to S. J. Chariton.

J. Staples carried off the premier honors in the class for carriage team 15 1-2 hands and under. W. Darcy was second and B. W. Wood third.

For single carriage horse over 15 1-2 hands, J. R. Stratton took first, R. Devell third and J. Staples third.

Mr. Louis, of Lakefield, carried home the first prize for single carriage horse under 15 1-2 hands. R. Dennes, of Peterborough, was second and W. Darcy third.

POTATO RACE.

The entries in the potato race were A. B. Mann, J. Snelgrove, N. Milburn, M. Dean and R. Hodson. Those taking part were mounted on horse-back and the novelty of the race made it exceedingly interesting.

THE HORSE RACES

About the time the horse races were called the weather cleared somewhat, and some good heats were run off.

The free-for-all was said to be the best race ever seen on the Lakefield grounds.

In the green race there was a little excitement. While the first heat was being run, with W. Northey leading, closely followed by Dr. Pukinghorn, a young colt ran out on the course directly in front of the horses. Northey's horse collided with the colt rolling it over several times, but getting clear without an upset. Dr. Pukinghorn next ran over the colt, which was attempting to rise, upsetting the sulky and spilling the doctor on the wet course. The horse continued the race and kept the course in spite of numerous attempts to stop it or get it off the track, and was only caught after the entire circuit of the course had been made, and the horse arrived at the place of the spill. The delay was only momentary, as the doctor was in the seat in an instant, resumed the race, and amid a thunder of applause, came home in second place.

THE OFFICERS.

The officers of the Lakefield Agricultural Society for 1909 are as follows:—

President—S. J. Wallace.
Vice-President—John Fairbairn.
Secretary-Treasurer—W. Sherin.
Honorary Directors—Levi Payne, T. Fitzgerald and Robert Garbutt.
Board of Directors—W. A. Baker, M.D.; G. W. Mann, R. Dell, Thompson Braden, T. T. M. Bain, W. J. Stillman, W. H. Down, H. C. Garbutt, F. McKee and W. J. Bullock.
Auditors—W. M. Graham and A. Fairbairn.

LANG AND MAHER.

The Daylight Store, Peterborough's clothing establishment for "men who know," had their big fall fair exhibit on the grounds, and every available spot of vantage was decorated with one of their signs, which were striking witnesses of the quality of Messrs. Lang & Maher's goods. The exhibit was a choice one and would have been fine evidence for the firm, but owing to the threatening appearance of the weather, was not entirely unpacked and displayed. Mr. Lang and his genial assistant, G. Wesley, were on hand to meet their old friends, and make the acquaintance of new ones.

GRAFTON & CO.

Standing in its old familiar place in front of the main building was the handsome show tent of Messrs. Grafton & Co., the well-known Peterborough clothing store. Mr. Conway was in charge, but did not open up his trunks and display his fine lines, to the disappointment of the crowd, who always look for something choice at this exhibit. The Grafton people manufacture their garments, and their reputation is behind every article they sell. This makes a splendid guarantee of quality of the Grafton clothes, and their patrons buy with confidence. In all sorts of conspicuous places the signs of the firm were displayed, telling of the many virtues of their goods, and being reminders of their numerous lines.

Took an Overdose

The drunk and disorderly arrested yesterday had a very meek, subdued manner about him when he appeared before the Magistrate this morning. He said that he took a mixture of port wine and brandy to relieve an attack of cramps and as he was not in the habit of taking spirits, the effect of the dose caused him to lose his equilibrium. He was discharged.

NEW METHOD OF STREET LIGHTING

Ald. Buller Suggests a More Effective Street Lighting System in Business Sections

At last night's meeting of the Fire, Water and Light Committee, the chairman, Ald. Buller, suggested a new arrangement for street lighting, which would not be any more expensive than the present system and more benefit would be derived. During his visit to Grand Rapids, at the time of the Fire Chief Convention, he noticed how brilliantly the business sections of the city were illuminated. This was accomplished by the placing of several small colored incandescent lamps on every two or three poles on each side of the road, and at each corner. A string of lamps was slung diagonally across from each corner, and the effect was very pleasing. The merchants, who were effected by this method of lighting, paid a frontage tax.

JAMES GATES SENSATIONAL WITNESS AT THE STRATTON PROTEST TRIAL

WEDNESDAY AFTERNOON.

James Gates, who gave evidence at the session of the election trial yesterday afternoon, gave testimony that absolutely astounded the spectators. Among other things he admitted he would take a false oath for $400. He also gave other evidence of a startling character, and told of trying to play a double game by indicating his willingness to take $400 for taking a false affidavit and then give it away to the opposition forces that it was false. After an examination by Mr. DuVernet and a long cross-examination, Justice McMahon said that no weight whatever could be placed in Gates' evidence, in view of the statements he had made. Charles Williams, the first witness called, said he lived in Peterborough. He voted at the election. He was at the committee rooms between 4 and 5 o'clock. He walked up there out of curiosity more than anything else. He saw men going into the little room one at a time. He went into the room. He saw a Mr. Butler go into the room. He went in himself immediately after Butler. He got $2 after he went into the room, Mr. Leary placing it on the table.

He was later asked to sign a declaration. He didn't do so.

To Mr. Watson witness said he was working in the morning. No one had consulted him about giving evidence. He repeated he went to the committee rooms purely out of curiosity. He was upstairs about half an hour. He left about 4.30. He saw nobody there he knew. Mr. Leary said to witness and Mr. Butler, "all right I'll see to you in a few minutes" There were 40 or 50 in the big room at the time. Mr. Leary called Mr. Butler into the little room. When Butler came out Williams went in. Williams told Mr. Leary his name. Mr. Leary asked him where he voted. He replied at McGill's store. Williams said he thought he might as well have some money as anybody else. When Leary asked Williams where he voted, the former told him he would have to hurry up when he was told it was McGill's store. Williams told Mr. Watson he voted in the morning in spite of the fact that Leary had apparently been given to understand that he hadn't voted at the time he was given the money. Williams was in the Conservative rooms in the afternoon. He was uptown in the morning. He saw Alex. Hutchinson there. He was accompanied to the rooms by Butler. No mention of getting money was made. He had no thought of getting money. Williams didn't know whether he might sell his vote or not.

He recollected meeting Mr. Davidson and another man on Chambers street about two months ago. It was about eight o'clock at night. One of them read out a declaration and asked him to sign it.

Mr. Watson—I am told that you said in their presence that you didn't get the $2 on election day."

"I never said any such a thing. They said Mr. Leary says he don't know you. The two were in a rig. They had been to the house. I said I didn't feel like signing it. I said I wouldn't go up to see Mr. Stratton to-night. The other gentleman asked when I would be coming up town and said, "Will you call at the Examiner office?"

"Then, according to your statement you were given the $2 as an inducement to vote."

"Probably Mr. Leary thought so. I didn't."

Mr. Ernest Bartlett was in Stratton's committee rooms on the afternoon of the election. He saw a number of men standing in a row waiting to get into the small room. He saw Mr. Gus Hay go in. He went there with John Meharry.

"I went over to some men standing in a row. There were ten or twelve men in the row." He went to the rooms in the afternoon on two occasions.

To Mr. Watson:—"I heard there was money being paid out at the Liberal rooms and that there was an awful tough crowd there. That's why I went down."

Mr. Bartlett saw a number of men there he knew. Part of the crowd standing in the row to get into the small room were immigrants. He didn't go to the rooms for the purpose of getting evidence. Bartlett saw Mr. Leary come to the door of the small room. He didn't see inside the small room, and therefore couldn't say how many men were in the small room. He went to the Conservative rooms to tell what was going on. P.C. Meharry went back with him to the Liberal rooms. He and Mr. Meharry were not sitting close enough to hear what was said to the witness.

Robert J. Mitchell was never in Mr. Stratton's or Mr. Burnham's committee rooms.

T. D. McGregor, of Peterborough, was at Mr. Stratton's committee rooms at 4.30 on the day of the last election. He saw a number of men there and Mr. Dickson Hall with the voters' list. He asked where he would vote. He saw an adjoining room. He saw nobody there and saw nobody go in there. He saw no persons standing in a line.

AN ASTOUNDING WITNESS.

James Gates has been in Canada from England for 27 months. He went to Mr. Stratton's committee rooms on election day. He knew Mr. Robt. Leary. He saw him at the committee rooms. He went to the committee rooms about 2.30 and got into the small room to see Mr. Leary. There were lots of others waiting. He got a two dollar bill after the orthodox way from Mr. Leary. He saw several others go into the room.

"I never saw anybody who went into that room grumble because he didn't get any money," said Gates.

Gates said he came from Chelsea, England, where he was with the Chelsea Temperance Loan Society as summonsing officer.

"Don't wink at me," said Mr Watson to the witness, who persisted in this form of facial indulgence whenever he made what he thought was a sharp retort.

The cross-examiner and the witness had some very amusing passages.

Witness objected to Mr. Stratton looking at his list of witnesses that he had written down on a slip to let Mr. Watson see.

At election time he was not doing any work at all. Three or four days before he had been working for twelve months or so at the American Cereal Company's office.

Mr. Watson—"Would you sell your vote?"

Answer—"I didn't have a vote to sell."

"Did you try to get $400 out of Mr. Stratton or Mr. Hall?"

"No; decidedly not."

"But you told Mr. Hall and Mr. Stratton that you'd take an affidavit that you didn't receive any money at the election if they gave you $400?"

"I was asked by Frank Fairen to go to Mr. Hall's office."

"Did you go there on the 21st of September?"

"I went there on the 14th, 15th, 18th and the 21st of September."

The witness said among those there on the 21st were Mr. Stratton and Mr. Hall. Mr. Watson told Gates he was informed that the witness had said he would make an affidavit for $400 that he had seen Mr. Leary pay no money. Witness admitted this was correct. Mr. Ashley was present at the time. Ashley at the same time said he would make an affidavit that he had received no money in consideration of a payment of $200. Mr. Hall didn't tell him that it would be impossible for him to pay it. The $400 was offered the witness to clear the country. Gates said Mr. Walter Davidson and Mr. R. H. Leary were in the adjoining room listening to what was said in the office.

"What do you think of the story?" asked Mr. Hall of Davidson and Leary.

"I wouldn't give ten cents for it," said Davidson.

"Neither would I," said Leary.

These replies were made, according to the witness.

Take Two—protest

Witness told Ashley to come away as there was no money in it.

Gates admitted he said he would meet the gentlemen in Mr. Hall's office at the sessions. Witness intimated he would tell a lie if there was enough in it. He didn't tell them he would swear against them at the sessions. At that time the witness was under subpoena.

"I have been in Mr. Moore's office but never told him anything about the $2 under the cardboard."

He had spoken of this feature of the committee rooms only on election day, among "us who got it."

He went into Stratton's committee rooms and went into the small room about four o'clock on the afternoon of election day. Mr. Leary and he were in there alone. When he got in Mr. Leary said: "I suppose you've done it." He said no more. Witness said. "Good day, Mr. Leary." Mr. Leary put the $2 under the box and walked over to the window and turned his back on the witness. "He hid it and I found it. I knew I was going to get the money. Everybody else got it. I didn't see anybody get it. They shut the door so I couldn't see it."

"You are a friend of Mr. Burnham's?"

"No more of Mr. Burnham's than Mr. Stratton's. Not as much. My wife's working for his wife."

This reply provoked quite a lot of laughter.

Witness said Mr. Moore had paid him $50 since the election. The money was paid him for his statement. Mr. Moore gave him a cheque for $50 on the Bank of Nova Scotia in Mr. Moore's office. Mr. Burnham made out the statement. Witness had never spoken to Mr. Burnham before this. He was given the cheque sometime in March. He had never got any other consideration from any Conservatives. The witness said the statement he made was absolutely true.

A FALSE OATH PRICE.

"You'd make a false affidavit for $50, $100 or $200?" asked Mr. Watson.

"No. $400 is my price."

Witness said he had been promised nothing whatever in case the petition was successful. In the statement made the names of two whom he saw getting money was mentioned. The statement Gates made, which was a lengthy one, was read over by Mr. Watson.

Justice McMahon—No weight can be attached to his evidence.

The witness was then dismissed. Mr. DuVernet brought him back, however, and he told of a conversation with Mr. Frank Fairen in which Fairen said it was too bad that poor Leary should be drawn into the thing the way he was. On the 13th of September he again met Fairen on the street. On the first occasion Fairen had asked him how much he would take to get out of the country. He told Fairen $200. He told of calling at Mr. Hall's office on September 13th and Mr. Hall told him he didn't need to leave the country and asked him why he wouldn't come over to the Liberal side. Gates said he asked Mr. Hall if he would be expected to say "yes" in the witness box when he should say "no." Mr. Hall, he stated, told him he should.

Mr. Watson objected to further examination of the witness on the grounds that the witness had been declared by the court untruthful and unworthy of belief.

Justice McMahon ruled, however, that Mr. DuVernet should be permitted to continue his examination. During it he corroborated what Ashley had said.

In reply to a question from Mr. DuVernet witness said: "I told Mr. Hall that I would go away if I got the $400. That was on the 15th."

On the 21st Gates was walking up and down George street and he saw Frank Fairen, who spoke to him concerning the matter. That night witness and Ashley went up into Mr. Hall's office.

"If I should have got the $400 for signing a false affidavit I should have given it to Mr. Burnham."

Gates said Mr. Burnham took down the true statement just as witness had told it to him. He told Mr. Burnham he would give him truthful information. No suggestions were made by anybody as to what witness would say. It had been arranged that witness would get $50 for the statement and he had said he wouldn't make the statement unless he received it. That was the only money he got outside of his witness fees.

The court adjourned til 10 o'clock to-morrow morning.
Thursday morning.

FIRE, WATER AND LIGHT COMMITTEE ACCEPTED TENDERS

Snider & Hickey Will Make Firemen's Uniforms—R. B. Sturgeon to Install Porcelain Battery Sink at Fire Hall—Better Light on Gilmour Street—Other Business Transacted.

The Fire, Water and Light Committee met last night with Ald. Buller in the chair. Around him were seated the mayor, Aldermen Turner, Morgan and Hicks. The business transacted was the complying with the requests for better lighting at different localities in the city, imposing a fine of $3.93 on the Peterborough Light and Power Co. for lights not in commission, accepting the tender of R. G. Sturgeon for the installing of a battery sink at the fire hall and accepting the tender of Snider & Hickey for the making of the firemen's uniforms.

Ald. Turner brought up the matter of lights. He said the lights on Gilmour street were a necessity. Ald. Morgan said the ratepayers in the east ward also wanted more light on the subject. The chairman read a petition signed by a large number of Gilmour street residents, who asked that the present light be removed and ten or twelve incandescent lamps be placed along the street. Ald. Morgan asked for two incandescent lights at Cricket place, two at the corner of James and Rogers streets, and for the removing further west of the light at the corner of Douro and Mark streets.

The chairman stated that the residents on Lansdowne street, near the boundary, wanted some lights, but he had told them that the committee might not be able to grant their request on account of it being the boundary line. Ald. Morgan thought they were entitled to receive consideration. The chairman wanted to know where the funds were coming from, as the committee were, if anything, ahead of their appropriations, and he did not feel disposed to grant anything without the money was available. However, Ald. Turner moved that the Gilmour street petition be granted except that the committee decide on the number of lights necessary and included the other requests for lights in the motion. An amendment was added that the motion should have effect, provided the appropriations meet the expenses which will be incurred. Ald. Morgan seconded the motion and it carried.

The secretary was next authorized to pay a gas bill of the fire hall and purchase an order book for the use of the city treasurer.

A number of complaints were read about lights being out at different times in the night, and this included Chief Howard's monthly report. On motion the Peterborough Light and Power Company were fined $3.96.

For the installing of a porcelain battery sink in the fire hall the following tenders were received—

Geo. Hutchinson	$80 00
McGregor & Reid	$72 00
R. G. Sturgeon	$60 00

The last named tender looked good to Ald. Hicks and he moved that R. G. Sturgeon be given the contract with the understanding that the work be done according to specifications. The motion was seconded by Ald. Turner.

The tenders for the making of the firemen's uniforms were next opened and read. They were as follows:

Snider & Hickey	$300 00
Ed. Huff	$324 60
Merrill & Meredith, three tenders, the lowest being	$309 00
W. Fowler	$312 00

On motion of Ald. Hicks and Ald. Morgan, the tender of Snider & Hickey was accepted. The uniforms are to be made of Forbes serge and according to specifications.

Chief Howard stated to the committee that the firemen had asked him to inquire if they would be agreeable if the money in the benefit fund was used for the purpose of buying furniture for the hall. They had $75 in the bank at the present time, and if a grant was received from the committee the necessary articles could be purchased. Ald. Hicks said he was not in favor of the firemen's money being spent in this manner. The chairman explained that the scheme in view would allow the firemen to be comfortable and secure rest at the hall when off duty. This could not be done at the present time. He pointed out that the idea was all right, and was in operation in the larger cities, and it meant that in case of fire the men would be available the greater part, if not all of the time.

The matter was left over for further consideration.

THAT WATCH OF YOURS

Is in many respects similar to a railway engine. Let an engine be run without oil or cleaning and before long it will stop dead. Upon examination it will be found that the friction and wear and tear has ruined the machinery, and it is fit only for the scrap iron heap. Likewise your watch. You put it in your pocket, and while there is a kick in it, you, in your mistaken economy, do not consult the watchmaker, and consequently rob your watch of years of good service and also much of its former accuracy. The time-keeping qualities of a good watch are maintained and often improved by timely and skilful attention. If you have been one of the neglectful ones call around and see us.

GAMES OF CHANCE TO BE STOPPED

At County Fairs — Government Will Protect the Farmer

The game of chance, by which annually thousands of innocent country people are "flim-flammed" out of hard-earned money at fall fairs, is to be stopped if the Ontario Department of Agriculture can do it. J. Lockie Wilson, superintendent of Agricultural Societies, has arranged to send a number of private detectives to the various fairs in Ontario, who will see to it that the law is rigidly enforced. These detectives are being sent out by the Department without the knowledge or request of fair officials.

"In many instances," Mr. Wilson said this morning, "these gamblers carry on their nefarious practices without the knowledge of the directors, having secured space on the grounds ostensibly for legitimate business. The penalty for the infringement of the provisions of the Agricultural Societies Act is not less than $20 and not more than $100 and costs.

Under the clauses of the Act "the officers of any such society shall prevent all immoral or indecent shows, and all kinds of gambling and all games of chance, including wheels of fortune, dice games, pools, coin tables, draw lotteries, or other illegal games at the place of holding the exhibition or fair, or within 300 yards thereof, and any association or society permitting the same shall forfeit all claim to any legislative grant during the year next ensuing."

WILL RESTRICT THE LICENSES

Commissioners Object to Employment of White Girls in Chinese Cafes

Toronto, Sept. 29.—The Board of Police Commissioners decided yesterday afternoon to secure the opinion of the City Solicitor on the subject of refusing restaurant licenses to Chinamen who employ white women. Should the City Solicitor find that the Board had such power, it would lessen the difficulty that lies in the way of stopping the growing evil of white women frequenting Chinese joints in the city under the pretence of being employed in such places as waitresses and domestics.

For their prompt action in saving Miss McLean's life when she had fallen into the water at Sunnyside a few weeks ago, Police Constable Taylor and McKnight were granted merit marks at this afternoon's meeting.

A. G. Cloutman was appointed special constable for Island Park.

The Board decided that hereafter persons desiring licenses for moving picture shows must prove to the Board that the residents in the district do not object to such shows. Also they must produce a certificate from the City Architect showing that the plans for the building that is proposed to be erected are perfectly satisfactory.

Have you heard — "I wish I had another situation just like that"? Its one of the many good ones in "A Knight for a Day" at the "Grand", Saturday Oct. 2. Plan now open.

LAID AT REST

The funeral of the late Joseph Gilmen took place this morning at nine o'clock to St. Peter's Cathedral, where requiem high mass was said by Rev. Father P. J. Kelly, and thence to St. Peter's cemetery, where the remains were laid at rest, Rev. Father Wm. Meagher officiating. Many of the friends of the deceased attended the obsequies, which were of a very solemn nature. The floral tributes were many and beautiful, and were an evidence of the high esteem in which the young man had been held by his friends and associates.

MORE STUDENTS FOR THIS TERM

The attendance of students at the Peterborough Normal School this year promises to be larger than that of last year, when 158 were enrolled. This year there are 156 students, and the number of young men is 27. Between ten and fifteen more students are expected during the next few days.

Mrs. Dickey was married when fourteen years of age and Mr. Dickey was only a few years her senior.

Of the twenty-two children, not one has ever suffered from a serious illness.

Here is health and strength and bodily vigor personified. The parents are well—therefore there have been no weak, puny, peevish children.

The health of the child depends much on the health of the parents. Thus, there is the necessity of expectant mothers especially paying great attention to their general health.

The Princess and The Silk Hats

Many amusing stories are told about incidents that occurred during the famous visit of the Prince and Princess of Wales to Canada. One of the best of these is recounted along with several others in a remarkable article in October Busy Man's Magazine, entitled "The Protectors of Royalty in Canada," or the Work of Canada's Secret Service. At Sussex, N.B., when the royal representatives were returning from across the continent, it was a bitterly cold October day, and a large concourse was at the station, accompanied by the band, to greet the distinguished party. It was usual, as soon as the car door opened, for the musical bodies joining in the welcome to play the National Anthem. All the persons on the platform of the royal car, at the first notes of the familiar air, as well as all the male members in the waiting throngs, invariably stood with heads uncovered as a mark of respect. Just before the door opened, the Princess of Wales, ever thoughtful of the comfort of those about her, told the gentlemen that it would be unwise for them to remove their hats on the platform as, on account of coming out of a warm compartment to the chilly atmosphere of an October morning, there would be danger of them contracting cold. Accordingly when the band struck up "God Save the King" those persons on the platform kept on their headgear. As soon as the selection had been played a tall, lanky countryman on the outskirts of the crowd yelled, "Why don't them galoots on the platform take off their hats? Don't they know nuthin?" and the assembly enjoyed a general laugh. After the ceremony, as the Princess was bidding good-bye to the Mayor of Sussex, she humorously remarked, "Will you please tell your friend who made the observation, that I am responsible for the gentlemen on the car not removing their hats."

HARRY DIRECT WON FREE FOR ALL AT LAKEFIELD FAIR

The ring events at the Lakefield Fair yesterday produced some fast entries and exciting races. Harry Direct, owned by Dr. Johnston, and driven by Murton Storey, took three heats of the four, and won easily. The first heat was a great one to watch, as Tom Tariff and Lulu Chimes were running abreast, with Harry Direct some distance behind, but by clever handling the big black won out.

The green race was won by W. Northey's Maud N., with Dr. Pulkinghorn's May Sphynx in second place.

While the first heat was being run with W. Northey leading, closely followed by Dr. Pulkinghorn, a young colt ran out on the course, directly in front of the horses. Northey's horse collided with the colt, rolling it over several times, but getting clear without an upset. Dr. Pulkinghorn next ran over the colt, which was attempting to rise, upsetting the sulky and spoiling the doctor on the wet course. The horse continued the race and kept the course in spite of numerous attempts to stop it or get it off the track, and was only caught after the entire circuit of the course had been made, and the horse arrived at the place of the spill. The delay was only momentary, as the doctor was in the seat in an instant, resumed the race, and amid a thunder of applause, came home in second place.

BEN SIMPSON IS A WINNER

Proving the Best Captain That Hamilton Tigers Ever Had

The Toronto Star says;—Ben Simpson is proving the best captain the Hamilton club ever had, as far as putting the men through their drill is concerned. Ben believes in the work being taken seriously, and never hesitates to tell the players where they are fined and to hand it to them when they get careless or sulky. As a result there is more real work being put in now than has been in some time on a Hamilton rugby field. Simpson's method is best explained by the following little incident, which happened at a recent practice. One of the half backs boozled a couple of passes and Ben called him down. The player in question got a little sulky, and when he got the ball and a pass to Simpson was called for, he chucked it at the captain rather sharply, and in in every way acted like a spoiled child as some of the big fellows have a habit of doing once in a while. "Here, cut that out," said Ben, "if you don't want to play the game, we'll put you out and let somebody that will in your place." The stab had its effect and no more trouble with this player.

THE RING

San Francisco, Sept. 29.—The fiercest boxing in training quarters that has been seen here since Sharkey trained here years ago is now being given by Stanley Ketchel, who Tuesday knocked out three sparring partners in succession before each had completed two rounds with him.

Ketchel believes he cannot overdo aggressiveness, and he has collected a camp of husky sparring partners. The three men he knocked out are Charlie Miller, the giant motorman; Steve O'Connor and "Montana Cyclone."

FATE—AND THEIR NAMES.

The Meeting Between Charles Barton and John Quill.

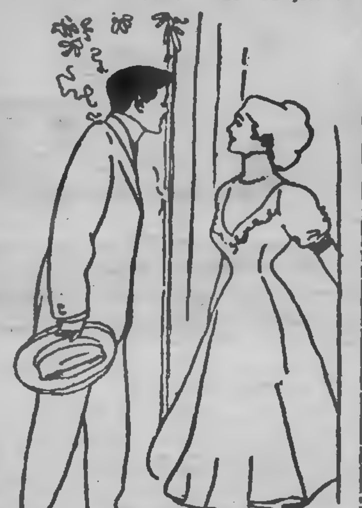
By CLARA A. CRADY.

[Copyright, 1908, by Associated Literary Press.]

Charles Barton separated himself from the train with which he had been associated for the greater part of thirty-six hours and drew in a great breath of Lynnville's exhilarating air. Then he set out with long, swinging strides to mount the hill beyond which lay the village proper.

So much information he had deigned to accept from the loquacious station master, but to the latter's plainly expressed curiosity as to whom he sought in the village Barton had turned a deaf ear. He was aware of the fact that news acquired wings in small places, and it was part of his plan to take John Quill by surprise. Taking, as he was, advantage of an unexpected business trip east to meet face to face his hitherto unseen correspondent, he had no doubt as to the success of his plan.

That John was only nineteen and an orphan Barton knew, but he had respected the younger man's reticence concerning himself to such an extent that he had never tried to force his confidence further. The ubiquitous picture postcard was responsible for the correspondence, which had its beginning more than two years before, when Barton, in a spirit of fun, had answered a request in the "Postcard Exchange" of an illustrated weekly for views of his state.



"HE WILL NOT BE BACK FOR SOME TIME," SHE INTERPOSED HURRIEDLY.

The response had been prompt and was accompanied by so many ingenious questions that Barton, in order to do justice to his native state, had found it necessary to write a letter. It was strange how soon he came to watch for the weekly letter which became an established custom, but only he himself knew how far the simple faith, the unconscious hero worship, that breathed in every line of John Quill's letters were responsible for Barton's escape from the many temptations that surround a young man alone in a western town.

He had reached the end of the village before his eyes found the little brown cottage, with its big honeysuckle on each side of the gate and its square porch overgrown with the same vine. Everything looked as John had once described it to be.

He knocked firmly on the front door of the cottage. It was quickly opened, and Barton found himself gazing into the prettiest face he had ever seen.

He asked, "Is this where John Quill lives? I'm Charles Barton," offering his card. She put out her hand somewhat hesitatingly, he thought, and the bit of pasteboard fluttered to their feet. With a muttered apology, he stooped to pick it up. When his eyes again sought the girl's face there was a confusion in it which the slight accident hardly warranted.

"I'd like to see your brother," he suggested politely.

He was not prepared for the sudden terror which flashed into her face, and, with a view to putting her at her ease, he continued smilingly: "You see, I'm taking the relationship for granted. The likeness to a picture of himself, which John once sent me, is too great to admit of a doubt."

The girl flushed and at the same time looked relieved. "Yes," she breathed softly, "I'm his sister. And I'm sorry, but my—John is away at present."

Barton's face fell. "I, too, am sorry," he said simply and lingered.

The girl eyed him doubtfully. She seemed to be undecided, but finally asked slowly, "Will you come in?"

But he had seen the effort which the words cost her, so he prevaricated slightly.

"No, thanks. I have my train to make. When will your brother be back?" is a quick after thought. "I could stop off again if"—

"He will not be back for some time," she interposed hurriedly. "Do not ask me where he is," appealingly, "for I cannot tell you."

A suspicion was dawning in Barton's mind. "Excuse me," he begged gently. "Perhaps your brother is in some difficulty, some trouble, and I could help him."

"No, no; you cannot help him—I mean, he is in no trouble," she corrected herself hastily.

"There's something wrong there," he reflected as he retraced his steps toward the station. "Why didn't the boy tell me in his last letter that he was going away? Is it possible that the young cub has managed to disgrace himself and left his sweet little sister to bear the burden? But, oh! I'm sure he's not that kind. A few inquiries in the village might—but Charles Barton is no spy. I'll let the matter drop for a few days; then I'll try again to gain the shrinking confidence of John Quill's sister. And woe to those who are at the bottom of the trouble!"

But when, four days later, he mounted the hill that led to the village he was forced to confess that the interest which he felt in John Quill's sister far exceeded any he had ever entertained in respect to the youth. The girl's sweet face was ever before him.

As he entered the village he came face to face with the girl of his thoughts. She was coming out of a big house, and she carried a huge bundle—sewing, he rightly judged as he hastened to relieve her of it. The radiant blush with which she thanked him Barton took as a favorable sign.

"I've come back," he said eagerly.

"I'm so glad—I mean," as she detected the look that leaped into his eyes, "I'm glad of this chance to confess in person something that has been worrying me greatly. I was going to write"— She was interrupted by the postmistress, who, taking advantage of her position to gratify a very natural curiosity, came running out on her porch.

"Hey!" she shouted. "Here's a letter for you," frantically waving the missive in question. Barton stepped forward to take it, and in doing so his eyes inadvertently fell on the superscription. He read no farther than the name, but there was a question in his eyes when they met hers. She answered it bravely.

"Yes, it is mine. My name is Jonquil March. There never was a John Quill." She was walking faster, and her face was very red.

"Why did you do it?" he asked simply.

"Because my life here was so desperately lonely after mother, who was all I had, died. Oh, I don't suppose that you'll understand! But I've always longed for the great west, where I was born, but which I scarcely remember. At first it was a desire to know it better that made me drift into the correspondence, and I continued with it because I came to enjoy it for its own sake," she concluded with unconscious abandon.

"But the photograph?" Barton groped.

"It was taken after some theatricals several years ago," she explained. "She," pointing back toward the post-office, "never suspected, because I used to do newspaper corresponding under the name of John Quill." They were at her gate. "I do not expect your forgiveness," she faltered.

"Do you know why I came back?" he demanded.

"No," Jonquil's tongue faltered, but her eyes told a different story.

"Because I love you," he declared masterfully, "and because I want to marry you and take you with me to the great west you love so well. Say that you love me, too, if only a little bit," he pleaded.

"But the trick," she temporized. "How can you forgive"—

"Bless the trick!" interrupted Barton joyously. "Why fight with it when it has been the means of bringing me a wife?"

Cause of Misery.

Here is an observation from Carlyle: "All misery is faculty misdirected—strength that has not yet found its way." This is undoubtedly true. All suffering and failing can be traced back to one getting out of the true path. It may not sometimes be one's fault. Ignorance or environment may intervene and lead us astray. But all progress consists in one finding the true way of one's strength: to see that the faculty is rightly directed.

Finding this path is the end of knowledge and civilization. This means doing the right thing, physically, mentally, morally; obeying God's law—that's it; that is all there is to it. That is what keeps the strength and faculty intact and makes life worth living. The perfect mortal is the one whose faculty is rightly directed and whose strength has found its way. It is that that makes the true, manly, useful, happy life; that makes the life last longer and keeps it sweet and wholesome while it lasts.—Ohio State Journal.

"Through Fire and Water."

A glance into the past is furnished by the words: "I would go through fire and water to serve you." The old trials by ordeal, once the custom in England, are here referred to, when the ordeals both by fire and water could be performed by deputy. Often this was the service of friendship, but just as often done for a certain sum. In the one ordeal the person passed through a place where red hot plowshares were set up at irregular intervals, the man or woman being blindfolded and barefooted. In the other the person, bound hand and foot, was thrown into the water; if he swam safely to dry land he was innocent. His death was proof of his guilt. The phrase, however, may have an indirect reference to the thought in Isaiah: "When thou passest through the water I will be with thee; when thou walkest through the fire thou shalt not be burned."

THE YOUNGER SET

Author of "The Fighting Chance."

"You," interrupted Rosamund, "ought to be downtown unless you've concluded to retire and let Wall street go to smash. What are you pretending to do in Sherry's at this hour, you very dreadful infant?"

"I've been lunching with Mr. Neergard, and would you mind"—

"Yes, I would," began Rosamund promptly. But Alixe interrupted. "Bring him over, Gerald." And as the boy thanked her and turned back: "I've a word to administer to that boy, Rosamund, so attack the Neergard creature with moderation, please. You owe me that at least. Here he is now, and don't be impossible and frighten him, Rosamund."

The presentation of Neergard was accomplished without disaster to anybody. On his thin nose the dew glistened, and his thick, fat hands were hot. But Rosamund was too bored to be rude to him, and Alixe turned immediately to Gerald:

"Yes, I did get your note, but I am not at home on Tuesday. Can't you come— Wait a moment. What are you doing this afternoon?"

"Why, I'm going back to the office with Mr. Neergard."

"Nonsense! Oh, Mr. Neergard, would you mind"—very sweetly—"if Mr. Erroll did not go to the office this afternoon?"

Neergard looked at her—almost—a fixed and uncomfortable smirk on his round, red face. "Not at all, Mrs. Ruthven, if you have anything better for him"—

"I have—an allopathic dose of it. Thank you, Mr. Neergard. Rosamund, we ought to start, you know. Gerald!" with quiet significance. "Goodby, Mr. Neergard. Please do not buy up the rest of Long Island, because we need a new kitchen garden very badly."

Mrs. Ruthven's motor moved up from its waiting station. Rosamund was quite ready to enter when Alixe said cordially: "Where can we drop you, dear? Do let us take you to the exchange if you are going there."

Now, Rosamund had meant to go wherever they were going merely because they evidently wished to be alone. The abruptness of the check both irritated and amused her.

"If I knew anybody in the Bronx I'd make you take me there," she said vindictively, "but as I don't you may drop me at the Orchils', you uncivil creatures. Gerald, I know you want me anyway, because you've promised to adore, honor and obey me. If you'll come with me now I'll play double dummy with you. No? Well, of all ingratitude!"

And she smiled dazzlingly upon Gerald, then turned up her pretty nose at him, but permitted him to attend her to the Orchils' door.

When he returned to Alixe and the car was speeding parkward he began again eagerly:

"Jack asked me to come up, and, of course, I let you know, as I promised I would. But it's all right, Mrs. Ruthven, because Jack said the stakes will not be high this time."

"You accepted?" demanded Alixe in quick displeasure.

"Why, yes, as the stakes are not to amount to anything."

"Gerald!"

"What?" he said uneasily.

"You promised me that you would not play again in my house!"

"I—I said for more than I could afford."

"No; you said you would not play. That is what you promised, Gerald."

"Well, I meant for high stakes. I—well, you don't want to drive me out altogether, even from the perfectly harmless pleasure of playing for nominal stakes."

"Yes, I do."

"W-why?" asked the boy in hurt surprise.

"Because it is dangerous sport, Gerald."

"What! To play for a few cents a point!"

"Yes, to play for anything. And as far as that goes there will be no such play as you imagine."

"Yes, there will—I beg your pardon—but Jack Ruthven said so."

"Gerald, listen to me. A bo—a man like yourself has no business playing with people whose losses never interfere with their appetites next day. A business man has no right to play such a game anyway. I wonder what Mr. Neergard would say if he knew you"—

"Neergard! Why, he does know."

"You confessed to him?"

"Y-es; I had to. I was obliged to—to ask somebody for an advance."

"You went to him? Why didn't you go to Captain Selwyn or to Mr. Gerard?"

"I did; not to Captain Selwyn. I was ashamed to. But I went to Austin, and he fired up and lit into me, and we had a muss-up, and I've stayed away since."

"Oh, Gerald! And it simply proves me right."

"No, it doesn't. I did go to Neergard and made a clean breast of it. And he let me have what I wanted like a good fellow."

"And made you promise not to do it again?"

"No, he didn't. He only laughed. Besides, he said that he wished he had been in the game."

"What!" exclaimed Alixe.

"He's a first rate fellow," insisted Gerald, reddening, "and it was very nice of you to let me bring him over today. And he knows everybody downtown too. He comes from a very old Dutch family, but he had to work pretty hard and do without college. I'd like it awfully if you'd let me—if you wouldn't mind being civil to him once or twice, you know. I'm going to propose him for the Stuyvesant and the Proscenium. Why not?"

"I see. And now you propose to bring him to my house?"

"If you'll let me. I asked Jack, and he seemed to think it might be all right if you cared to ask him to play."

"I won't!" cried Alixe, revolted. "I will not turn my drawing rooms into a clearing house for every money laden social derelict in town! I've had enough of that. I've endured the accumulated wreckage too long—weird treasure craft full of steel and oil and coal and wheat and heaven knows what! I won't do it, Gerald. I'm sick of it all—sick, sick!"

The sudden, flushed outburst stunned the boy. Bewildered, he stared round eyed at the excited young matron, who was growing more incensed and more careless of what she exposed every second.

"I will not make a public gambling hell of my own house!" she repeated, dark eyes very bright and cheeks afire. "I will not continue to stand sponsor for a lot of queer people simply because they don't care what they lose in Mrs. Ruthven's house! You babble to me of limits, Gerald. This is the limit! Do you or does anybody else suppose that I don't know what is being said about us—that play is too high in our house, that we are easy in our choice of intimates as long as they can stand the pace? Do you think I was educated for this—for the wife of a chevalier of industry?"

"M-Mrs. Ruthven!" he gasped. But she was absolutely reckless now, and beneath it all perhaps lay a certainty of the boy's honor. She knew he was to be trusted—was the safest receptacle for wrath so long repressed. She let prudence go with a parting and vindictive slap and opened her heart to the astounded boy. The tempest lasted a few seconds. Then she ended as abruptly as she began.

To him she had always been what a pretty young matron usually is to a well bred but harebrained youth just untethered. Their acquaintance had been for him a combination of charming experiences diluted with gratitude for her interest and a harmless sop of sentimentality. In her particular case, however, there was a little something more—a hint of the forbidden—a troubled enjoyment, because he knew, of course, that Mrs. Ruthven was on no footing at all with the Gerards.

"Dear Mrs. Ruthven," he blurted out with clumsy sympathy, "you mustn't think such things, b-because they're all rot, you see, and if any fellow ever said these things to me I'd jolly soon"—

"Do you mean to say you've never heard us criticised?"

"I—well—everybody is—criticised, of course"—

"But not as we are. Do you read the papers? Well, then, do you understand how a woman must feel to have her husband continually made the butt of foolish, absurd, untrue stories, as though he were a performing poodle? I—I'm sick of that, too, for another thing. Week after week, month by month, unpleasant things have been accumulating, and they're getting too heavy, Gerald, too crushing for my shoulders. Men call me restless. What wonder! Women link my name with any man who is kind to me! Is there no excuse then for what they call my restlessness? What woman would not be restless whose private affairs are the gossip of everybody? Was it not enough that I endured terrific publicity when—when trouble overtook me two years ago? I suppose I'm a fool to talk like this, but a girl must do it some time or burst. And to whom am I to go? There was only one person, and I can't talk to—that one. He—that person—knows too much about me anyway, which is not good for a woman, Gerald; not good for a good woman—I mean a pretty good woman, the kind people's sisters can still talk to, you know."

"I want you to believe me your friend," said Gerald in the low, resolute voice of unintentional melodrama.

"Why, thank you. Are you so sure you want that, Gerald?"

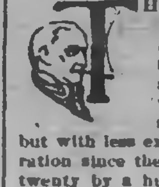
"Yes, as long as I live!" he declared, generous emotion in the ascendant. A pretty woman upset him very easily even under normal circumstances. But beauty in distress knocked him flat, as it does every wholesome boy who is worth his salt.

And he said so in his own naive fashion, and the more eloquent he grew the more excited he grew and the deeper and blacker appeared her wrongs to him.

She was very light hearted that evening when she dropped him at the Stuyvesant club and whisked away to her own house, for he had promised not to play again on her premises, and she had promised to be nice to him and take him about when she was shy of an escort.

On her way home Alixe smilingly reviewed the episode until doubt of Selwyn's approval crept in again, and her amused smile had faded when she reached her home.

Chapter 11



THE house of Ruthven was a small but ultra modern limestone affair, between Madison and Fifth, a pocket edition of the larger mansions of their friends, but with less excuse for the overelaboration since the dimensions were only twenty by a hundred. Into this limestone bonbon box tripped Mrs. Ruthven, mounted the miniature stairs with a whirl of her scented skirts, peeped into the drawing room, but continued mounting until she whipped into her own apartments, separated from those of her lord and master by a locked door.

Into this limestone bonbon box tripped Mrs. Ruthven.

That is, the door had been locked for a long, long time. But presently, to her intense surprise and annoyance, it slowly opened and a little man appeared in slippered feet.

He was a little man and plump, and at first glance his face appeared boyish and round and quite guiltless of hair or of any hope of it.

But as he came into the electric light the hardness of his features was apparent. He was no boy. A strange idea that he had never been assailed some people. His face was puffy and pallid, and faint blue shadows hinted of closest shaving, and the line from the wing of the nostrils to the nerveless corners of his thin, hard mouth had been deeply bitten by the acid of unrest.

For the remainder he wore pale rose pajamas under a silk and silver kimono, an obi pierced with a jeweled scarfpin, and he was smoking a cigarette as thin as a straw.

"Well!" said his young wife in astonished displeasure.

"Send her out a moment," he said, with a nod of his head toward the maid. His voice was agreeable and full—a trifle precise and overcultivated perhaps.

When the maid retired Alixe sat up on the lounge, drawing her skirts down over her small stockinged feet.

"What on earth is the matter?" she demanded.

"The matter is," he said, "that Gerald has just telephoned me from the Stuyvesant that he isn't coming."

"Well!"

"No, it isn't well. This is some of your meddling."

"What if it is?" she retorted, but her breath was coming quicker.

"I'll tell you. You can get up and ring him up and tell him you expect him tonight."

She shook her head, eying him all the while.

"I won't do it, Jack. What do you want him for? He can't play with the people who play here. He doesn't know the rudiments of play. He's only a boy. His money is so tied up that he has to borrow if he loses very much. There's no sport in playing with a boy like that."

"So you've said before, I believe, but I'm better qualified to judge than you are. Are you going to call him up?"

"No, I am not."

He turned paler. "Get up and go to that telephone!"

"You little whippet," she said slowly, "I was once a soldier's wife—the only decent thing I ever have been. This bullying ends now—here, at this instant! If you've any dirty work to do, do it yourself. I've done my share, and I've finished."

He was astonished. That was plain enough. But it was the sudden overwhelming access of fury that weakened him and made him turn, hand outstretched, blindly seeking for a chair. Rage, even real anger, were emotions he seldom had to reckon with, for he was a very tired and bored and burned out gentleman, and vivid emotion was not good for his arteries, the doctors told him.

He found his chair, stood a moment with his back toward his wife, then very slowly let himself down into the chair and sat facing her. There was moisture on his soft, pallid skin, a nervous twitching of the under lip. He passed one heavily ringed hand across his closely shaved jaw, still staring at her.

He swore at her.

"I want to tell you something," he said. "You've got to stop your interference with my affairs, and stop it now."

"I am not interested in your affairs," she said unsteadily, still shaken by her own revolt, still under the shock of her own arousing to a resistance that had been long, long overdue. "If you mean," she went on, "that the ruin of this boy is your affair, then I'll make it mine from this moment. I've told you that he shall not play, and he shall not. And while I'm about it I'll admit what you are preparing to accuse me of. I did make Sandon Craig promise to keep away. I did try to make that little fool Scott Innis promise, too, and when he wouldn't I informed his father. And every time you try your dirty bucket shop methods on boys like that I'll do the same."

He swore at her quite calmly. She smiled, shrugged and, imprisoning her knees in her clasped hands, leaned back and looked at him.

"What a ninny I have been," she said, "to be afraid of you so long!"

A gleam crossed his faded eyes, but he let her remark pass for the moment. Then, when he was quite sure that violent emotion had been exhausted within him, "Do you want your bills paid?" he asked. "Because if you do Fane, Harmon & Co. are not going to pay them."

"We are living beyond our means?" she inquired disdainfully.

"Not if you will be good enough to mind your business, my friend. I've managed this establishment on our winnings for two years. It's a detail, but you might as well know it. My association with Fane, Harmon & Co. runs the Newport end of it and nothing more."

"What did you marry me for?" she asked curiously.

A slight color came into his face. "Because Rosamund Fane lied about you."

"Oh! You knew that in Manila? You'd heard about it, hadn't you—the western timber lands? Rosamund didn't mean to lie. Only the titles were all wrong, you know. And so you made a bad break, Jack. Is that it?"

"Yes, that is it."

"And it cost you a fortune and me a—husband. Is that it, my friend?"

"I can afford you if you will stop your meddling," he said coolly. "You have made a point of excluding Gerald?"

"Yes."

"Very well. I'll telephone Draymore. And"—he looked back from the door of his own apartments—"I got Julius Neergard on the wire this afternoon, and he'll dine with us."

He gathered up his shimmering kimono, hesitated, halted and again looked back.

"When you're dressed," he drawled, "I've a word to say to you about the game tonight and another about Gerald."

"I shall not play," she retorted scornfully, "nor will Gerald."

"Oh, yes, you will, and play your best too. And I'll expect him next time."

"I shall not play!"

He said deliberately: "You will not only play, but play cleverly, and in the interim, while dressing, you will reflect how much more agreeable it is to play cards here than the fool at 10 o'clock at night in the bachelor apartments of your late lamented."

And he entered his room, and his wife, getting blindly to her feet, every atom of color gone from lip and cheek, stood rigid, both small hands clutching the footboard of the gilded bed.

Chapter 12

DIFFERENCES of opinion between himself and Neergard concerning the ethics of good taste involved in forcing the Siowitha club matter, Gerald's decreasing attention to business and increasing intimacy with the Fane-Ruthven coterie began to make Selwyn very uncomfortable. The boy's close relations with Neergard worried him most of all and, though Neergard finally agreed to drop the Siowitha matter as a fixed policy in which Selwyn had been expected to participate at some indefinite date, the arrangement seemed only to cement the man's confidential companionship with Gerald.

This added to Selwyn's restlessness, and one day in early spring he had a long conference with Gerald—a most unsatisfactory one. Gerald for the first time remained reticent, and when Selwyn, presuming on the cordial understanding between them, pressed him a little the boy turned sullen, and Selwyn let the matter drop very quickly.

Boots Lansing.

But neither tact nor caution seemed to serve now. Gerald, more and more engrossed in occult social affairs of which he made no mention to Selwyn, was still amiable and friendly, even at times cordial and lovable, but he was no longer frank or even communicative, and Selwyn, fearing to arouse him again to sullenness or perhaps even to suspicious defiance, forbore to press him beyond the most tentative advances toward the regaining of his confidence.

Gerald and Neergard left the office together frequently now. They often lunched uptown. Whether they were in each other's company evenings Selwyn did not know, for Gerald no longer volunteered information as to his whereabouts or doings. And all this hurt Selwyn and alarmed him, too, for he was slowly coming to the conclusion that he did not like Neergard, that he would never sign articles of partnership with him and that even his formal associateship with the company was too close a relation for his own peace of mind. But on Gerald's account he stayed on. He did not like to leave the boy alone for his sister's sake as well as for his own.

Matters drifted that way through early spring. He actually grew to dislike both Neergard and the business of Neergard & Co., for no particular reason perhaps, but in general, though he did not yet care to ask himself to be more precise in his unuttered criticisms. But Neergard broke his word to him.

And one morning before he left his rooms at Mrs. Greeve's lodgings to go downtown Percy Draymore called him up on the telephone, and, as that overfed young man's usual rising hour was notoriously nearer noon than 8 o'clock, it surprised Selwyn to be asked to remain in his rooms for a little while until Draymore and one or two friends could call on him personally concerning a matter of importance.

First there was Percy Draymore, overgroomed for a gentleman, fat, good humored and fashionable—one of the famous Draymore family noted solely for their money and their tight grip on it; then came Sanxon Orchil, the famous banker and promoter, small, urbane, dark, with that rich, almost oriental, coloring which he may have inherited from his Cordova ancestors, who found it necessary to dehumanise their names when Rome offered them the choice, with immediate eternity as alternative.

Then came a fox faced young man, Phoenix Mottly, elegant arbiter of all pertaining to polo and the hunt—slim legged, hatchet faced and more presentable in the saddle than out of it. He was followed by Bradley Harmon, with his washed out coloring of a consumptive Swede and his corn colored beard, and, looming in the rear like an amiable brontosaurus, George Fane, whose swaying neck carried his head as a camel carries his, nodding as he walks.

"We heard last night," said Draymore, "how that fellow—how Neergard had been tampering with our farmers—what underhand tricks he has been playing us, and I frankly admit to you that we're a worried lot of near sports. That's what this dismal matinee signifies, and we've come to ask you what it all really means."

"Why did you not call on Mr. Neergard?" asked Selwyn coolly. Yet he was taken completely by surprise, for he did not know that Neergard had gone ahead and secured options on his own responsibility, which practically amounted to a violation of the truce between them. "I know nothing about it. I did not know that Mr. Neergard had acquired control of the property. I don't know what he means to do with it. And, gentlemen, may I ask why you feel at liberty to come to me instead of going to Mr. Neergard?"

"A desire to deal with one of our own kind, I suppose," returned Draymore bluntly. "And, for that matter," he said, turning to the others, "we might have known that Captain Selwyn could have had no hand in and no knowledge of such an underbred and dirty"—

Harmon plucked him by the sleeve, but Draymore shook him off, his little piggish eyes sparkling.

"What do I care?" he sneered, losing his temper. "We're in the clutches of a vulgar, skinflint Dutchman, and he'll wring us dry whether or not we curse him out. Didn't I tell you that Philip Selwyn had nothing to do with it? If he had, and I was wrong, our journey here might as well have been made to Neergard's office, for any man who will do such a filthy thing"—

THE PICNIC AT CHEMONG VILLAGE A BIG SUCCESS

Chemong Team Won Baseball Game by Score of 23-20—Smoke Was the Winner in Five Mile Race—Picnic May be Held Annually.

The first excursion of the Rama and Georgina people arrived in Chemong village on Thursday, September 22nd. There were about two hundred passengers on the steamer Geneva, besides the Rama nightingale band and the Georgina singers. The wharf was crowded with villagers when the boat arrived and the visitors were given a great reception. The bells on the town hall were rung, flags were raised and the excursionists taken to the different homes of their hosts, and were royally entertained. At 10.30 in the morning a football match was played between the Rama and Chemong teams, and the latter were victorious by the score of 5—0. Dinner was served in the town hall and at two o'clock a baseball game was played between Georgina and Chemong teams. The home nine won by the score of 25—20. The contest was a exciting one and the visitors looked goo to win until the last innings, when Chemong made seven runs. Order had to be called on several occasions as there was so much cheering and excitement. At the conclusion of the game a five mile race was held and was won by Albert Smoke, of Chemong. The track was three laps to the mile and there were four starters, S. Syers, of Rama; Jack Jacobs, of Chemong; Wm. George, brother of James George, the Beaverton runner, and Albert Smoke. Jacobs secured a lead of a quarter of a lap and held it for one mile and then fell back, with Syers at his heels. Shortly afterwards he was compelled to quit because of cramps. Smoke began to sprint, and when he passed the Rama runner the latter quit, and this left only two in the race. Smoke passed George twice before the 11th lap, and once again at the 4th mile. The crowd loudly cheered for the Chemong runner, and his time for the distance was 27.10. He did the last lap in 55 seconds and finished fresh. The villagers are very proud of Smoke, who intends to run in Lakefield and Orillia this fall, and is willing to try any distance from five to fifteen miles. After the race was over tea was served in the town hall and more sporting events were held, until it became too dark. In the evening a splendid concert was given. Chief Canoe, of Georgina Island, acted as chairman, and he proved to be a very capable and humorous one. He is a well educated gentleman and speaks good English. Others present were Chief Stinson, of Rama; Chief I. Johnston, of Scugog; ex-Chief R. Paudash, Chief Joseph Whetung, of Chemong, and the Rev Posnor and family, of Georgina Island.

The excursionists left on Saturday morning at 6.30 o'clock, and old and new acquaintances, loved ones and lovers had to part. The brass band played Annie Laurie as the boat left the wharf. The captain of the Geneva gave the excursionists a very low rate, and he was well pleased with the trip. He intends to run an excursion to Chemong next year, and it will probably become an annual affair.

R. R. HALL WAS EXAMINED THIS MORNING

Arthur McClellan said he had lived in Peterborough thirteen or fourteen years and was a broker. He was a son of Superintendent McClellan of the Trent Canal. On election day he was at Babb's lane in No. two ward. Was there all day with the exception of half an hour. He left there about 2.45 and went to the Royal Bank to do some banking. He was outside scrutineer in the interest of the Liberal party. Got to booth a few minutes before three, and went directly back to polling sub-division, getting back there about ten minutes after three, and was there all the rest of the day. Witness knew Mr. Leary and saw him that day at Babb's lane at polling sub-division. Saw him there a few minutes after he had returned from the bank, between ten and twenty minutes after three. Mr. Leary drove up, asked how the vote was coming in, talked a few minutes, and then drove away. Would not say positively if there were anyone with Leary, there might have been. There was no possibility that it was not Mr. Leary. Did not see Leary again before five o'clock. Babb's lane was just an average division. Witness looked after canvassing in that division. He was quite sure there was nothing illegal or wrong in that division.

CROSS EXAMINED.

"You wouldn't be asked to do the dirty work for the Liberals?" Mr. DuVernet started.

"No."

"You're not that kind of a man, I presume?"

"No."

"Did you ever hear decent Liberals complain that there was too much money going?"

"I will swear I did not."

"Did you hear anyone say that there was too much money going?"

"We all did. Everybody in town heard that—from the Conservative party."

"How did you come to be scrutineer?"

"I hardly can say."

"Who appointed you?"

"I don't know who appointed me."

"Who spoke to you about it?"

"I don't know. I lived in that ward."

"You can't tell who spoke to you about it?"

"I think Mr. Leary spoke to me about it. He was chairman of that ward."

"Who did you get your papers from?"

"I don't know who I got them from. They were lying on the table. I might have got them from John O'Brien or Mr. Leary. Mr. O'Brien was looking after the rooms."

"Is your recollection bad?"

"No, not usually, but I want to be careful when I'm swearing."

"Did you cash a cheque at the bank?"

"No."

"What did you go there for?"

"I went to pay a note."

"What time did you get to the bank?"

"It was seven minutes to three."

"Sure of that?"

"No. It was between seven to ten minutes to three."

Witness said it was about half a mile from the Liberal rooms to Babb's lane.

"Can you swear if Mr. Leary brought anybody to the poll?" Mr. Watson asked.

"No. I can't swear that."

"Didn't he bring a voter?"

"I can't swear to that."

"Did Mr. Leary get out of the rig?"

"I don't know."

"Will you swear that he didn't get out?"

"No. I won't swear that."

"You reported to Mr. Leary the names of those who had not yet voted?"

"Yes."

"How many were there?"

"I don't remember now."

"When he got the list did he drive away?"

"No. I think he stayed awhile, but I'm not sure."

Witness did not know what kind of horse or vehicle Leary had. "I didn't notice," he said.

"How long was Leary at the poll?"

"I don't remember."

"Was he there five minutes?"

"I don't know; perhaps it was less."

"That's all you know about it?"

"Yes."

Witness agreed to Mr. Watson's statement that there was in the air that there was money going.

G. N. GORDON.

G. N. Gordon was next called by Mr. Watson. He said he was a barrister. He was inside scrutineer for Mr. Stratton at May's school house. Witness knew R. H. Leary fairly well.

Did you see Mr. Leary at North Monaghan that day?

Yes; I saw him around four o'clock at May's school house. It was 10 or 15 minutes after four o'clock. He stayed there 10 or 15 minutes talking to scrutineers of both parties and the deputy-returning officer. It might have been longer than 10 or 15 minutes.

Mr. Gordon said he talked to Mr Leary with the others. He conversed with him about driving back to the city at night. Witness thought it was about three or four miles from the city to May's school house. Witness suggested to Leary that he (Gordon) drive back to the city with Leary at that time, but Mr. Leary intimated that witness would be able to get back to the city after the poll closed. Witness could not say that he saw Mr. Leary as soon as he arrived at the school house. He might have been outside a while.

To Mr. DuVernet Mr. Gordon said he was not sure how far May's school house was from the Liberal committee rooms. He thought it was 2 or 3 miles.

"I don't do much driving," witness said, "and don't really know how far it is."

"Did Mr. Leary vote at that poll?"

"No. I am sure of that."

Mr. Leary then came into the room quite unauthorized!

"It might have been quite unauthorized. I am not sure on that point."

Witness said he remembered looking at his watch when he was talking to Mr. Leary, and it was between 10 and 15 minutes after four. He had looked at his watch because he thought he might be able to leave the poll then and drive back to the city with Mr. Leary.

"I heard that Leary had paid a man in the city at four o'clock on election day. I went to Mr. Hall and told him that I had seen him in North Monaghan a few minutes after four o'clock" Mr. Leary said.

Witness did not know exactly what time he got to the Liberal committee rooms. He thought he had left May's school house about 5.20. He went to the Liberal rooms, and then to his office, and got there before the stenographers had left. They usually went home at six o'clock.

Mr. Gordon was shown a map of North Monaghan and the city.

Mr. Watson said something about the distance between May's schoolhouse and the city, and Mr. DuVernet told him to stay quiet, "that the map would speak for himself."

RAN SHORT ON TIME.

Arthur Morgan;—I have lived at Peterborough all my lifetime. On election day I was driving a rig for Mr. Leary. Mr. Leary went with me after dinner, at one o'clock. We drove around to the different polling divisions in the city. This would take us an hour or so. We got to the committee rooms about half past two to three. I left him at the committee rooms. I took Mr. Leary out again at a quarter to four. I drove him up to Babb's Lane. I had orders from Mr. Leary to be there at that time. When I called we left at once. We drove to May's schoolhouse, North Monaghan. We were there fifteen or twenty minutes. Then we drove back. It was 10 minutes to five when we got back to the committee rooms. I know it was ten minutes to five when we got back to the committee rooms. On the way going out we called at a couple of voting places. Babb's Lane was one of them going out. I can't remember the other one. We called at one coming back. I don't remember what polling place it was. We were 15 or 20 minutes at May's. I went up to the committee rooms after I got back. I didn't go upstairs. The rooms downstairs were full of people. The horse had been going all day and was pretty well "dished in."

To Mr. DuVernet;—I don't know about what time we reached Babb's Lane. We went down to another polling division near the Edison. We stayed at the booth about 15 minutes. We stayed at May's 15 or 20 minutes.

By the length of time the stops were made and from the fact that the witness said the committee rooms were left at 3.45 and reached again at 15 minutes to 5.

Mr. DuVernet showed the witness that the horse, which was pretty well "dished in" must have made quite a spurt, making the two and a half miles to May's schoolhouse and return in 15 or 20 minutes, and told the witness to think it over. The witness did without clearing the atmosphere to any extent as regards the remarkably Dan Patch like clip the horse made the distance in.

Witness said he sat in front of the committee rooms for a quarter of an hour before Mr. Leary came out and before they started for May's. Mr. Leary came to the door and said he would be ready. Morgan said it was 3.15 when he looked at the clock coming from the committee rooms to get Mr. Leary. Before this he stated it was 3.30. Mr. DuVernet reminded the witness of this and the latter said it was 3.30. He was positive of this.

You told my learned friend you were at the rooms at a quarter to four and if you waited 15 minutes that would bring you to four o'clock.

R. R. HALL CALLED.

Mr. R. R. Hall said he had nothing to do with the organization of the Liberal forces in connection with the campaign.

I was following the elections considerably. The rooms were on Simcoe st. I was in the committee rooms practically every Saturday night from the opening to the closing of the campaign and occasionally during the week when I was not out in the country.

Considerable time was spent in examining a sketch of the rooms and getting Mr. Hall to explain the layout and proportionate size of the rooms and what they were used for.

I didn't know of anybody having special charge. I was in the committee rooms on election day. I went down before 9 o'clock and practically spent the rest of the day in the rooms upstairs. I spent the whole day there except the lunch hour. I wanted to see that the scrutineers were in their places, and the polling sub-divisions manned. Upstairs that day the crowd in attendance would vary from 35 to 100 up to five o'clock. Some were sitting around chatting and talking, others looking up where they voted. I was in and out of the east and west rooms all the afternoon.

DIDN'T SEE "THEATRE LINE."

Q—It was said by two witnesses that there were people standing in a row to get into the small room like people trying to get into a theatre.

A—That's not so it was utterly impossible for any such a condition to exist.

You know Mr. Leary,

Yes, I know him very well.

Mr. Hall said Mr. Leary left the committee rooms a little before 3 o'clock in the afternoon to visit some polling sub-divisions.

"How did you fix the time at a little before three o'clock?

I had told Mr. Leary to go out to polling sub-division No. 2 to see how the vote was coming in and to see if any assistance could be given.

What time did he get back?

"He came back about 3.30, gave his information to me, and then left for North Monaghan."

"He was there about a quarter of an hour?"

"Practically."

"During that time he was there were you with him?"

"Yes. I was talking to him in the west room. I wasn't in the east room with him."

"Do you know he left at a quarter to four?"

"That's the time he had fixed to go out. He said it was a quarter to four, and then he left. I don't know with whom he left. He got back just before the poll closed."

"With one exception these six people who have given evidence say he was there between four and 4.30 o'clock.

"There's not a particle of truth in it."

"Did you see any of these people?"

"Well, there were so many coming and going I couldn't say."

"Did you know Ashley?"

"No. I didn't know him. I couldn't say whether Butler, Williams or Gates were there. Meharry was there. I can't place Butler. Meharry was there in the afternoon about 2.30. I would think. He is a policeman and was in plain clothes. I knew he was a Conservative and on the opposite side, and wondered at him being there."

"Who else were around there that day?"

Dickson Hall, A. H. Stratton, J. R. Stratton, John O'Brien, Mr. Kelly and J. D. Clarke were among some named by Mr. Hall.

"What about witnesses swearing about money going?"

"I didn't see any money going. There was no money going that I saw. I was approached for money by several and told them there was no money going."

Mr. DuVernet—"That's absurd."

Mr. Hall said among those who spoke of money he distinctly recalled Matthew Clancy. Mr. Elgin Meyers was downstairs in the afternoon with the voters' list, and told people where to vote. Mr. Hall recognized Ashley.

"The only occasion on which I had any conversation with Ashley, was on the night of September 21st, 1909. He and Mr. James Gates came to my office about 8 o'clock. I went into my private office with Mr. Stratton and introduced them to him. I had heard that Mr. Gates was anxious to sell himself, and I thought it well to know something about the disposition and character of a person of that kind. The first time Gates came into my office he introduced himself. He told me he heard there was some money going in connection with the giving of evidence at the protest. He said 'I'm going to swear against Mr. Stratton and your partner, Mr. Davidson. I'm going to swear I got five dollars between Mr. Davidson and Mr. Stratton and $2 from Mr. Leary.' He said Gates wanted $400 to take an affidavit that he had not received any money. Mr. Hall told him he would not do anything in a matter of that character. He asked Gates to see Mr. Stratton. Ashley was also brought up in the conversation with Gates as a party who would sell also.

"When Ashley and Gates came in on the 21st, Mr. Stratton was in the office with me. I told Gates Mr. Stratton will be here to-night. I told him to come to meet you. Now, what do you want to do?"

Mr. Hall said that both Ashley and Gates were willing to take affidavits that they got no money, and saw no money in circulation on election day. Gates wanted $400 and Ashley $200. Mr. Hall called in Mr. Davidson and Mr. Davidson, who were in a section of the office adjoining his private office.

Mr. Davidson said "There's not a word of truth in what you said and I wouldn't give you ten cents." Mr. Leary thought the same. On leaving the room Gates said "We'll meet you in the session with a bunch of Englishmen who will surprise you."

Mr. Hall—"There was no declaration drawn for either of them to sign. There is no charge against me in connection with the election. Gates didn't mention about Mr. Burnham giving him $50. I never heard of this till he said so in the box."

To Mr. DuVernet—"We got particulars of the charges about the end of May or the beginning of June. I got four declarations altogether. I would say there were in the neighborhood of 100 declarations gotten altogether."

"You proceeded to get as many declarations as you could. You knew that was improper."

"No, I did not."

"You knew Mr. Gates was a witness."

"I didn't know he was subpoenaed. I thought he would naturally be a witness."

He thought the same of Ashley.

"Do you tell the court you weren't trying to trap these two men?"

"You may call it that."

"You thought it would be necessary for the defence to have a trap for these Englishmen?"

"I didn't think it necessary, but Gates seemed anxious."

"Why didn't you kick him out of the office when he mentioned $400?"

"I heard that Gates had been working a ring of Englishmen. I wanted to find out something about the character and disposition of his men."

"Some parties asked me if there was punishment for bribery and corruption. If any person asked me that question I would tell them they were liable to imprisonment and a fine."

"When Gates came first I had arranged that I should send for him when he was to come back. I got Mr. Frank Fairen to arrange for him coming back. Gates could see Mr. Davidson and Mr. Leary were in the room if he had looked when he came in. I thought Gates' conduct was discreditable. I didn't prepare a declaration for Gates. I didn't ask him to sign one. I never heard him asked to sign one. Mr. Davidson may have prepared one. Gates mentioned if he got the $400 he would go Vancouver, Minneapolis, or California."

Mr. Hall said he didn't think he was encouraging Gates when he asked him what he was going to do with the $400. He didn't think it was encouraging Gates when he asked him back again.

"You say you were at the committee rooms on election day. What was your duty there? Had you duties to perform?"

"I did work there upstairs in the three rooms."

"How many chairs were there in the little east room?"

"Two chairs and a table."

Who was in the east room with you?

Mr. Hall recalled Mr. Davidson and Mr. Hugh Darke. There were other voters whose names he couldn't recall. Mr. Stratton was at the rooms most of the afternoon.

Was he there at four o'clock?

Between four and five where was he?

I think he was down stairs.

Were you talking to him in the afternoon?

Yes between 3 and 4.

Was he in the east room with you at the same time?

Yes.

Was he in the west room with you?

Yes.

What was Mr. Leary supposed to be doing?

Looking up the names of the voters and seeing that the votes were brought in for No. 3 Ward.

Were you in the little east room with Mr. Leary?

Not that I recollect.

Were you in the west room with him?

Yes.

How long?

Possibly ten minutes.

During the whole afternoon were you in the east room with Mr. Leary?

I may have been there with him but I don't recollect.

When the adjournment took place at five minutes after one Mr. DuVernet had not concluded his cross-examination of Mr. Hall.

MESSRS. DAVIDSON, HALL AND STRATTON MAKE COMPLETE DENIAL OF THE CHARGES

"Absolutely False" is What They Say to Practically Every Accusation of Improper Conduct at the Election.

Mr. Davidson Says Between 75 and 100 Affidavits Were Secured—Tried to Get All He Could.

Liberal Leaders Were Asked for Money, But Gave Cold Shoulder to Inquiring Ones.

(When the court resumed at two o'clock yesterday afternoon Mr. DuVernet continued his examination of Mr R. R. Hall. Mr. Hall said:

"Matt." Clancy asked if there was money going, and was told there was not. That was about four o'clock. Three or four other persons also asked witness about money. Witness saw Mr. Meharry there. Mr. Leary was there part of the time Meharry was present, witness thought.

Was Mr. George E. Elliott there?

I think he was.

Did you see Mr. Duff there?

No. He lives in Lakefield. I do not think he took any part in Mr. Stratton's election. I suppose he was a Liberal sympathizer.

The men who spoke to you were laboring men, were they?

Yes, those who spoke to me about money were.

Do you remember what you were doing about 4.30?

No; I'm not sure. There was no special incident to recall it to my mind.

What were you doing when Mr. Leary returned the last time?

I saw him in the main room when he came in. He asked me how matters were going, and I told him all right so far as I could learn. This was just before the polls closed. He would have no time to do any work.

Did you take any voters to the poll?

No.

Did you see any of these six men, which my learned friend speaks of, about affidavits?

I remember getting affidavits from Pritchard and Banks.

Who did you send out for them?

They came in. I don't know what caused them to come. I didn't go out after them.

Mr. Watson then took charge of the witness.

"You are charged by my learned friend about the interviews you had with Gates. What about that?

Witness said he thought Gates and a bunch of Englishmen were embarking on a blackmailing expedition against Mr. Stratton, and he thought it should be looked into.

Mr. Hall denied pressing anyone to make an affidavit.

WALTER S. DAVIDSON.

Walter S. Davidson, called by Mr. Watson, said he was at the Liberal committee rooms all day on October 26th last. He had his dinner sent in to him.

Were you there between one and five o'clock?

Yes, both up and down stairs.

Were there many people there?

Yes, between 50 and 200.

Witness denied that there was a line of people pressing to get into the Liberal quarters. "The statement that such a condition existed is absolutely false," Mr. Davidson said.

Witness said Leary was working around the Liberal rooms on election day, "just like the rest of us." He was absent in the afternoon. Witness remembered this because he wanted Leary at one time and he was absent. Later Leary told witness that he was going to Monaghan to do anything that had to be done there before five o'clock. Witness thought Leary left for the township about 3.45. He did not think it would be more than half an hour between the time he has asked for Leary when he was absent and the time he spoke to him when Leary was going to Monaghan. Leary came back to the rooms about 4.50. R. R. Hall was at the rooms all the afternoon. Witness did not know Ashley, Alsept, Harland, Pope, Butler and Charles Williams at the time of the election. He had no knowledge, directly or indirectly, of money being paid to these men at the Liberal rooms on election day. There was nothing to indicate that there "was money in the air."

What do you say to the charge that you did some bribing?

They are all absolutely false.

Have you any knowledge of any such act on the part of Mr. Leary?

None at all.

Is there any foundation, directly or indirectly, that you know of, to lead you to believe that Mr. Leary guilty of anything of the kind?

None at all.

Or as regards anything of the others charged?

None at all.

Mr. Davidson said Gates had been pointed out to him on the street as the man mentioned in the particulars. He had seen Gates at the office of Hall, Mould & Davidson on the evening of September 21, but did not speak to him. Continuing his story Mr Davidson said, in part:

"I know that Gates was in Mr. Hall's office with Mr. Stratton. I was in the general office when Mr. Leary came in. I am in the office three or four nights a week. I was not there by appointment. Mr. Hall asked Mr. Leary and I into his office. We found Mr. Hall, Mr. Stratton, Gates and Ashley. I think Mr. Hall said Gates had some proposition to make and Gates proceeded to make

MIGHTIEST SHIP AFLOAT

Neptune is Launched at Portsmouth—Eight of Class

Portsmouth, Eng., Oct. 1.—The Neptune, Great Britain's eighth battleship of the Dreadnought class, of her eleventh, including the three battleship cruisers, was successfully launched here yesterday by the Duchess of Albany. The bulkheads of this super-dreadnought are so heavily armored that experts consider her practically unsinkable by a torpedo.

The Neptune was commenced at Portsmouth, Jan. 9, of this year. She has a displacement of 20,250 tons, length 510 feet, and beam 86 feet. She is consequently ten feet longer and two feet wider than any of her predecessors. She exceeds the Dreadnought type by 2,270, and the Bellerophen type by 1,650 tons. She has turbine engines of 24,000 indicated horsepower, giving a speed of 21 knots an hour.

The Neptune has been described as "the last word" in battleships. Her ten twelve-inch guns will be of the fifty calibres pattern, which has a greater range and penetration than the twelve-inch guns now in use, and in addition she will carry four-inch guns for repelling torpedo attacks. The Admiralty considers her the most powerfully armed vessel thus far built.

Several American admirals have made pilgrimages to Portsmouth in the hopes of seeing something of the Neptune. They have, however, been generally disappointed, as the Admiralty is keeping the improvements incorporated in her a secret.

THE GERMANS GET OVATION

New York, Oct 1—Twenty-five thousand men of arms marched yesterday past the representatives and special envoys of 37 nations, while two million citizen spectators shouted themselves hoarse in cheers. The military parade was the climax of the Hudson-Fulton celebration.

Although there was applause in overwhelming volume for the British sailors, the most conspicuous reception of the day went to the sailors of the German fleet, a picked body of magnificent men.

The total count of the U. S. troops in line yesterday outnumbered the enlisted roll of the American regular army before the Spanish-American war. Four thousand, four hundred police kept the crowd in line.

POST OFFICE TAKES OVER WIRELESS

London, Oct. 1.—The Government has completed arrangements to take over all the coast stations of the Marconi wireless system, excepting the long-distance stations at Poldhu and Clifton, which the company retains for its projected trans-Atlantic service.

The Government pays $75,000, gets also the right to use all existing patents and all improvements made during the next fourteen years.

The Marconi stations will now be operated for communication equally with all ships, irrespective of their wireless system. The postoffice is taking over also all the Lloyds' wireless stations.

The Admiralty has long urged the vital importance of vesting the control of wireless telegraphy in the postoffice.

TO SAVE MRS. ROBINSON PETITION FOR NEW TRIAL

Toronto, Oct. 1.—In the unusual circumstances of the case of Mrs. Robinson, accused of murder and sentenced to be hanged early in November, a petition is being circulated by Dr. Augusta Stowe Gullen, asking for a new trial.

The fact that the verdict of the jury was twice given for acquittal is a substantial ground for the request, and it is the view of the petitioners that official steps should be taken at once to interest the public and to intercede for Mrs Robinson to prevent the extreme penalty being enforced.

Should it be found impossible to get a new trial, steps will be taken according to a resolution adopted last night by the Toronto Suffrage Association, to place all data relating to the lamentable case before His Excellency the Governor-General, accompanied by a request for pardon.

Mrs. Swift feared that the public misconceive the attitude of the association and imagine that the action was merely sentimental or a condoning of the murder of illegitimate children.

Dr. Stowe Gullen made it clear that no such motive was present. The case was one for scientific care and treatment and not for hanging. There could be no reasonable doubt of the insanity of a woman under the stress of such circumstances. The woman might be hanged before the man who compelled her to commit the deed was brought to trial.

WAS TO HARSH WITH AUTOISTS

St. Catharines, Oct. 1.—Auto owners from Buffalo, New York, Toronto and Hamilton will be interested to learn that Judge Carman has suspended Constable A. B. Tufford, on instructions from the Attorney-General's Department, pending the investigation of charges to the effect that Tufford arrested for fast driving, an automobilist who gave the constable a ride to his home, picking him up on the road. In another case it is said an automobilist was held up at Beamsville by Tufford, hailed before the magistrate and fined. Then Tufford telephoned to the constable at the next town, Grimsby, giving the time the automobile left Beamsville. On this information the autoist was arrested at Grimsby and fined there also.

HANGS HIMSELF BY HIS LEGS

New Orleans, Oct. 1.—Hanging himself by the feet instead of the neck was the novel method of self-destruction employed by Sam Yong Ping, an aged Malay fisherman, on the Gulf Coast of Louisiana. The Malay is said to have been the wealthiest fisherman in the Barataria Bay settlement. During last week's storm, the chest in which his fortune was stored was swept away. His body was found hanging from a tree, his legs tied firmly to the branch.

Corner In Ontario Tobacco.

Windsor, Oct. 1.—To corner the entire output in Essex and Kent counties, the Imperial Tobacco Co., has purchased every available pound in this district, paying prices running from ten to fifteen cents, the normal rate is about eight cents. Over twenty buyers gobbled up the whole crop in two days.

The output in this county is estimated at four million pounds, while Kent grows between one and two million.

MAJOR WYATT DIES SUDDENLY

Toronto, Oct. 1.—While waiting for his wife to prepare him a cup of tea for his luncheon at about two o'clock yesterday afternoon, Capt Henry F Wyatt, senior partner of the brokerage firm of Wyatt & Co., went upstairs at his residence at 48 Crescent road, Rosedale, and a few minutes later he was found dying by Mrs Wyatt, who went to call him to the table. Heart failure is given as the cause of death by Dr. Allan Baines, 228 Bloor street, the family physician, and by the chief coroner.

Capt. Wyatt went home at noon, and a few minutes later when his luncheon was ready, his wife called to him, but receiving no reply, she went upstairs to tell him. As she reached the top of the stairs, she was attracted to their bedroom by the sound of heavy breathing and hurried in to find him in a semi-conscious condition, lying across the bed. Dr. Baines was summoned, but before he arrived, Capt. Wyatt had expired.

Capt. Wyatt was widely and favorably known in the city, both socially and through his business connections. He was married six years ago at the King's Balmoral estate in Scotland to Miss Begg, daughter of a prominent Scotch distiller of Aberdeen, and on that occasion the couple received a handsome wedding gift from His Majesty King Edward.

Almost as fast as the cars are emptied after bringing wheat from the west for transhipment to the seaboard, they are being refilled with the product of the Pennsylvania mines and returned to the towns and cities of Manitoba and Saskatchewan.

SEVEN MEN WERE INJURED

Glace Bay, N.S., Oct. 1.—After a shooting affray between strikers and Dominion Coal Co. police, seven strikers had to have bullet wounds dressed.

A little to the westward of No. 2 mine, is the seashore, and along the cliffs facing the sea appear small seams of coal. These are of little or no economic value. From these seams, boys and poor people had been digging some coal and carrying it away in bags.

The land is included in the Dominion Coal Co.'s leases, and the officials had forbidden digging coal from these seams. Along this headland is a favorite resort of idle persons. Two boys were seen taking a bag of coal from the cliff, and four policemen armed with revolvers, proceeded to arrest them. A crowd gathered, and commenced jeering the policemen.

The police fired first in the air and then into the crowd. One man had his ear shot off. The wounded men were arrested on a charge of "unlawful assembly."

THREATENED HIS FAMILY

Kingston, Oct. 1.—For threatening to shoot his wife and family, John Hickey of Clarendon was given two years in the Central Prison. The accused came home drunk, abused his wife by kicking her, and then shot off a rifle. The ball passed close to her head, and entered the wall. He shot at her on another occasion, and the family lived in fear of him all the time.

Private Wm. Roach, R.C.H.A., was placed under arrest and handed over to Sheriff Young of Guelph. He is wanted there for alleged theft of $30 from a farmer, by whom he was employed.

WHEAT HAS TAKEN AN ADVANCE OF 14 CENTS

After a Dull Month of Trading September Option Suddenly Soars Under Influence of Mysterious Operators and Riot of Shorts Sets In.

Chicago, Oct. 1.—The wheat squeeze which disturbed the ennui of speculative routine with a 14-cent advance in the September option on the Board of Trade here yesterday was the cleanest cut of any corner in many years. The so-called Patten deal of last spring was an open secret long before final delivery day, but what happened yesterday came out of a clear sky.

For a month there had been practically nothing doing in September option, which closed Wednesday at $1.06 and sluggishly slept through most of yesterday's session lightly above that figure. There was known to be a short interest out, but that control of the long side had been secured was undreamed of by those not in the deal. The trader or traders in control are said to have held about 1,000,000 bushels, while the scattered short interest ran between five and ten millions.

No colossal winnings or losses are involved, although some of the weaker shorts were hard hit when "shoestring" resources are considered. The efforts of some of these to extricate themselves during the last frenzied half hour were described by a spectator as pitiful. A small sum multiplied into comparatively heavy losses with distressing rapidity.

September wheat was at $1.07 when the riot of the shorts began. Conditions had been bearish and although September had held sturdily in price, shorts still believed the break would come. Receipts in the northwest continued heavy and Europe refused to buy, a situation usually followed by lower prices. As the final moment of the trading month drew near and the break did not materialize, the true condition of affairs became apparent.

One of the most influential traders on the board waited until the top had been reached, and then delivered the actual wheat at $1.21—100,000 bushels of it. Little wheat came out until $1.18 was reached. At this figure and above a neat profit was garnered. Deliveries amounted to 615,000 bushels going to scattered interest. It was necessary to extend the delivery period three times before the last account was squared.

The hour for delivery of actual wheat is from 1.30 to 2 p.m. It was 3.45 before the last transfers had been made.

While several firms are reported to have profited by the deal, common report credited control of September to an eastern man. This trader is said to have bought around a dollar, and to have recouped nicely the sum lost two years ago in an attempted squeeze, which failed. He is likewise said to have been the man who made July shorts come to his terms at New York last summer. In some quarters it is insisted that the deal which ended yesterday was manipulated by Chicago interests. Confirmation of either story is not obtainable.

R. H. Leary Makes Complete Denial of the Charges Against Him.

"Never Handled Any Money Whatsoever in Connection With Election," He Says.

THIS MORNING'S SESSION

In opening his cross-examination of Mr. Stratton Mr. DuVernet asked him if he had not had considerable experience in election matters.

"I've taken part in four or five elections."

"You have had experience in organizing elections?"

"Well, no."

"There was no formal organization at the last election?"

"No formal organization."

"I believe that as far as you are concerned you put up all the money?"

"As far as I know I put up my own expenses."

"You didn't know Mr. Davidson and Mr. Bryson were paying out money?"

"I did not."

"Were you working with Mr. Davidson or Mr. Leary?"

"No."

"Did you have much of a recollection about Mr. Leary when you were examined before?"

"I don't think so, I hadn't much to do with him."

"You said in your examination for discovery that you saw him at the committee rooms Saturday nights and on election day."

SAID HE HAD NO MONEY.

Mr. Stratton said he got back at the election rooms on the afternoon of the election day at about 2.30. He stayed there about three-quarters of an hour. He came back about 4 and stayed till 5 p.m. Mr. DuVernet questioned Mr. Stratton about several replies he made at the examination for discovery.

"You say you were asked for money yourself?"

"I was."

"By laboring men?"

"Yes."

"How many asked you on the street?"

"Three or four parties."

"Then up at the committee rooms how many asked you?"

"There might be one, might be two."

"What did you say?"

"I said I had none."

"Who sent them there?"

WHAT MR. STRATTON CHARGES.

Mr. Stratton said that he was prepared to swear that Mr. Farrish, a Conservative detective, did. Mr. DuVernet commented on the witness making reckless statements and said he would be given an opportunity to prove what he said about Farrish sending anybody to see him about getting money.

Mr. DuVernet read from the examination for discovery:—"Do you remember anybody asking for money." A.—"No they didn't ask me. They were asking others."

"At that time you knew you were asked for money?"

"Yes."

"You don't remember any of these parties that asked you?"

"No."

(Examination for discovery) — "Can you recollect any of these wicked men who asked you for money?"

"No, I don't remember their faces."

"You say you told them to go to the Conservative committee rooms?"

"Yes."

"Ashley was working for you, was he?"

"No, he was not."

"Where was it you saw Mr. Ashley first."

"I saw him in the Examiner office."

"What was he doing there?"

"I went over to see what he was doing."

"Did you know he was a voter?"

"No."

"Nothing mentioned about money or elections?"

"No."

"Did Mr. Glover bring people to you?"

"I think some people were brought to me."

"Who brought them?"

"A young man named Fairess. I have distinct recollection of several parties bringing some people into my office."

DIDN'T KNOW HIM BY NAME.

"Did you know Fairess?"

"I knew he was blind in one eye. I didn't know him by name."

"Were they brought in in your interest?"

"Yes."

"How many?"

"May have brought in 10, may have brought in 5."

"Do you remember how many Mr. Glover brought in?"

"The same applies to him."

"How many came to you altogether?"

"Quite a number."

Q "How many?"

"Fifteen to twenty-five."

Mr. Stratton here stated that he paid very little attention to the pre-

MOROCCO AND EGYPT

Some time ago the world—that is, the human world—was shocked by a very definite statement regarding the worse than barbarous treatment of prisoners by Mulai Hafid. Some weeks ago, the French consul at Fez, instructed by his government, lodged a protest against the Sultan's revolting conduct. That savage sovereign was asked to give his promise that he would respect the laws of humanity by prohibiting all mutilation or wounds intended to cause lingering death or doom the sufferer to long years of dependence or to starvation. We are informed that Mulai Hafid gave the required assurance that all such "punishments" should cease to be inflicted in Morocco. "Punishment," the term used in the consul's despatch, is hardly applicable to the deeds of savage revenge for which this ruler of men was himself, alone responsible. He was a fugitive and a rebel not very long ago under a regime which, whatever its faults, did not torture prisoners. After he had made himself master of the country, those who had supported his claims against those of the late Sultan, commended his "firmness." He was thus encouraged to give free rein to his vindictive passions and received the most inhuman practices that had made the administration of so-called justice in Morocco an infamy. It is vain to ask who is responsible for this re-awaking of the spirit of savagery. Who, again, is responsible for the perfunctory complaisance of the French consul at Fez and his acceptance of Mulai Hafid's promise that what he renewed shall cease? And, again, what is the use of asking. Both France and England have spent millions in putting down brutal savagery in other parts of the world—including East, West and inter-Africa—where the ignorant offenders had had no chance of learning the usages of civilization. At this very moment the campaign is still prosecuted against the alleged atrocities of the Congo regime. The German government was forced to take up the charges of shameful maladministration against a scandal—rousing official offender. Mr. Grogan, whose feet had traversed Africa from south to north—Cape to Cairo Grogan—was fined for raising unauthorized hands against not quite guiltless natives. So touchy, indeed, has public opinion become in the defence of the natives of Africa that when the assailants and murderers of British officers was duly punished by the Egyptian authorities, there were not wanting members of Parliament to protest against such retribution as cruel and unjust.

Yet when Mulai Hafid commits acts of barbarity so atrocious that even to read of them makes one shudder at the fiendish malice of the inventor, the ruler who found it useful to apply the mos majorum to his subjects (through the grace of a jealous potentate), is hardly rebuked by the Powers most concerned in seeing Morocco civilized.

We may be reminded that when Mr. Kipling is singing the reformation of Egypt he celebrates Sergeant What's His Name's stick as "really half the trick" in effecting Pharoah's transformation. Some might interpret his language as indicating a policy of brutal force. In reality the policy was just the opposite. Cruelty, capricious tyranny and all sorts of injustice it has, from the first, been the determined purpose of those who represented England in Egypt to remove. While the drill sergeant was working in Egypt a new miracle, drilling "a black man white," and making "a mummy fight," in the civil and industrial domain another marvel was being realized, the results of which every visitor can realize. Where wrong was done in England's dealings with Egypt was in permitting the millions whom Gordon had done so much to emancipate and civilize to be again enslaved through the faineantise of those who think "the Empire still is the Strand and Holborn Hill," while their master who risked his life to deliver them was allowed to perish in despair. Happily his spirit lived after him and those who felt its power could not rest until his work was done over again. A dozen years ago the advance up the Nile had already won its first triumphs, and when in September, 1898 the battle of Omdurman was won, Mahdism heard its death knell and the sufferers from that retrogressive tyranny were once more free.

We know, of course, that the modern history of Egypt implies a rivalry between France and Britain, which lasted, even after the end of the Dual control—even after Fashoda. But happily for all concerned, there came a day when the old disputes were ended by a settlement which satisfied both France and England, was accepted by Spain and was regarded as fair by the ex-Sultan. Had the details of the understanding been carried out, there is reason to believe that to-day Morocco, instead of being what it is, would have been fast developing into a state in which liberty, order and justice were recognized forces, in which life and property would be secure and native and strangers at peace. Why was such a development interrupted?—Montreal Gazette.

Y. W. C. A. NOTES

The season's prospectus is just out and offers splendid opportunities to every department. The class work is carefully planned, so that more than one class can be taken advantage of in one evening. To-morrow evening a social hour, followed by a musical programme, will be enjoyed, we trust, by many.

Each Saturday afternoon the little girls meet from 2 to 4 o'clock for a Bible lesson, followed by sewing, cooking and gymnastic classes. There will be a meeting on Sunday afternoon at 4.15, in the association parlors, when short, bright, heart to heart impressions of the Muskoka Conference will be given by those who so enjoyed the first conference.

On Monday evening, at 7.30, Miss Steinhoff, domestic science normal teacher, will meet with all who wish to join her association class in general cookery.

Miss Nichols continues to meet with her class for the study of the different English subjects. This is a great opportunity for employed girls to fit themselves for larger positions of trust and remuneration. Miss Nichols' class meets from 7.20 to 8.45 each Tuesday. At this same hour the business girls' gymnasium class is held. Following immediately these classes, Dr. Malcolm McCulloch will lecture on 'Emergencies and Home Nursing.' These lectures or talks will be of a very practical nature. This hour should appeal to every girl, and we hope that many will take advantage of this opportunity to gain the knowledge which everyone should have in times of emergency and sickness.

Friday is Bible class night. Tea is ready at 6.30 in the domestic science room. From 7 to 8 the study hour, and from 8 to 9 the Sunshine Club holds its meeting.

Many other classes might be mentioned, but instead we ask you to call at the Y.W.C.A. for the prospectus.

PRETTY WEDDING AT HALL'S GLEN

Nuptials of R. Northey and Miss Lena Payne—Presentation to the Bride

Special to the Review.

Hall's Glen, Sept. 27.—"Maple Rise," the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Lazarus Payne, North Dummer, was the scene of a pretty home wedding on Wednesday evening, September 22nd, at six o'clock, when their daughter, Lena Victoria, was united in marriage to Mr. Robert Northey, son of Mr. James Northey, sr., of Smith.

The bride, leaning on the arm of her father, entered the drawing-room to the strains of Lohengrin's wedding march, which was played by her sister, Miss Clara Payne. The ceremony was performed by the pastor, Rev. Gr. Marvin, assisted by Rev. Mr. Bedford, of Lakefield.

Mr. Henry Little ably assisted the groom, while the bride was attended by her sister, Miss Ada Payne, and Miss Emma Hatten, cousin of the bride, as flower girl.

The bride looked charming in a beautiful princess gown of cream, satin-figured voile, trimmed with satin, over-lace and insertion, wearing a bridal veil, and carried a shower bouquet.

The bridesmaid was becomingly attired in pale blue silk striped voile, trimmed with white satin and overlace and also carried a bouquet.

The flower girl wore a dainty dress of cream lustre, with trimmings of applique and lace, and carried the wedding ring on a tiny silver tray in a basket of flowers.

The house was tastefully decorated with autumn leaves and flowers. During the ceremony the bridal party stood under an arch of evergreens and asters.

After congratulations were extended, the guests, numbering about 75, partook of an excellent supper, which was served in the dining room.

The groom's gift to the bride was an elegant fur-lined coat with sable collar, to the bridesmaid a hand-painted brooch, to the flower girl a necklace of pearls set with rubies.

Many useful and beautiful gifts were received from relatives and friends, among them being a handsome piano case organ, and a dinner and tea set of Carlsbad china, from the bride's parents.

At the close of the evening, amid a shower of confetti and rice, and followed by the good wishes of their many friends, the young couple left for their future home in Smith.

The bride's going-away suit was of blue Venetian broadcloth, with white satin dechene blouse and white hat with plume.

At the close of the prayer service held at Bethel church Thursday evening, Sept. 16th, the following address was read, accompanied by a purse containing $12.50. The address was read by the pastor, Rev. G. W. Marvin, M.A., B.D., Ph.D., the presentation being made by Mrs. Jacob White:—

To Miss Lena Payne:

Dear Friend,—We, the members of the congregation of Bethel Church, now that you are about to leave us, desire to express our appreciation of your worth and work. We will miss your genial smile and kindly presence, but especially your faithfulness in the work of the church. From the earliest period of your life, have you been closely connected with the varied activities of our beloved Zion, but especially in the service of song will you be remembered. You have been especially faithful in your department of church work. We have felt that you as a member of the elect family have put first things first in your life and work. Please accept this purse of money as a slight token of our regard and appreciation; and may the true riches of Heavenly grace adorn your character and enrich your life more and more unto the "perfect day," where in the Divine abode "they neither marry or are given in marriage, but are as the angels of God."

Signed on behalf of the congregation.

Mrs. Jacob White,
Mrs. Ed. Hamblin,
Miss Dora Payne,
Miss Ethel Matthews,
Miss Ina Dunford.

Miss Payne made a suitable reply, expressing her appreciation of the gift.

Something About Moose and Deer

It is now pretty well known among hunters that the best deer hunting country in Ontario is on the line of the Canadian Northern Ontario and that hunters receive special attention. Mr. C. Price Green, Passenger Agent of the line is a hunter himself who goes right with the parties and looks after them, in fact he located most of them. This year the line will be opened north of Sellwood into the midst of the Moose Country, they are reported very thick, the Engineers say that they have never seen anything like it, the Moose season up there opens October 15th, fifteen days before the Deer. We have something special on a new place that will take three parties of deer hunters.

Linen of Snowy Whiteness

The real beauty of linen lies in its whiteness. It must come from the washing spotlessly clean. So, naturally enough, it is always rubbed twice as hard, and so wears out twice as fast.

But here is a new way to wash linen as well as other fabric—a way that saves half the rubbing and doubles the life of the garment.

This new way is the way of Taylor's Borax Soap. For no other soap saves both labor and garments as does this wonderful soap—it saves its own cost many times over.

Taylor's Soap

Here is the Taylor way: Place the white clothes in warm, soapy water and let them soak over night. Then draw them out one by one and rub them lightly with Taylor's Borax Soap. When well soaped, roll them up and lay them in the bottom of the tub under water. Let them soak in this way for half an hour. Then rub them gently on the washboard, rinse and wring them out. Hang them on a rope clothes line, for wire may put iron rust spots on the clothes.

Scalding is never necessary with this soap, for it removes the dirt by itself. The borax softens the water, so less soap is required, and also much less rubbing.

Colored clothes are washed the same, only they should not be left to soak over night, and never boiled.

Follow these simple directions and your clothes will come out fresh, clean and free from any "soapy smell." The white goods will be whiter, the colored goods brighter and the woolens softer than ever before.

Borax not only softens the water, but also softens the hands—it leaves them even whiter than ever before. Also it purifies and sweetens—it destroys every germ and prevents the possibility of contagion.

MESSRS. DAVIDSON, HALL AND STRATTON

a statement. Gates said he was willing to make an affidavit that he got or saw no money paid for $400. In fact he would do almost anything for $400. Ashley said he would do the same thing for $200.

"Gates said if he didn't get the money he was going to charge Mr. Leary with giving him $2 and charge me with giving him $5 at my office. Ashley said he would charge Mr. Leary with giving him $2 at the committee rooms. Gates first suggested making an affidavit. I told Gates that there was no truth in the charges, and that I wouldn't give him ten cents. Leary also said the charge against him was false. Mr. Hall mentioned something that the proposition could not be entertained and Gates said, 'We'll meet you at the sessions with a bunch of Englishmen that will surprise you.'"

"Mr. Davidson said that Ashley had told him on a previous occasion at his office that there was no truth in the charge against witness. Ashley was asked if he would make an affidavit, and he wanted to know how much there was in it. Witness told him he was not paying people to tell the truth. Ashley said the other side had offered him $50 to make an affidavit.

Witness denied ever offering anyone money to make an affidavit, and he knew nothing about affidavits being paid for by the respondent. Witness saw Alsept in his office about two months ago. Someone brought him in. Alsept said there was no truth in the charge that he had received any money. He thought there was another Englishman present at the time. Alsept took a declaration to this effect willingly. Mr. Stratton knew nothing about these affidavits.

Switching to another subject, Mr. Watson asked Mr. Davidson if it was true that Mr. Leary was at the committee rooms up to 4.30 o'clock on the day of the election. Several had sworn to this.

"It is not true," Mr. Davidson said.

Witness said Pritchard told him that he had been taken to the White House and offered money to make an affidavit that he had received money at the Liberal committee rooms. Pritchard made an affidavit before witness that he had received no money. He made the affidavit without any inducement. Witness knew nothing about Mark Harland. Sidney Pope was brought to the office of witness and made affidavit denying that he had got money. It was done willingly. Witness saw Harry Butler in the Examiner office a couple of months ago. He thought Hugh Darke brought Butler to the Examiner office. The charge against Butler was read to him and he said it was not true. Butler was not asked for a declaration.

Justice McMahon read Butler's evidence to the effect that he refused to sign a declaration.

"I never asked him for a declaration," witness said.

Mr. Davidson told of Chas. Williams declaring to him that there was no truth in the charge that he had received money. R. Glover was present at the time. Williams was not asked to make a statement.

Mr. DuVernet cross-examined Mr. Davidson very closely.

"How many declarations did you get Mr. Davidson?"

"Can't say."

"Were there so many you can't say?"

"Were you trying to get as many as you could?"

"I didn't get as many as I could."

Witness told Mr. DuVernet that he didn't get an affidavit from either Butler or Williams. He asked Davidson why he didn't when they were concerned in such important charges. Mr Davidson said he took their word although he got declarations from others and admitted that he was after all the declarations he could get" as they were a handy thing to have.

Witness—"Ashley refused to take a declaration unless he was paid for it."

"Did he offer to make one if he was paid for it?"

"I can't say that he did."

"Then you want to take that back?"

"Ashley didn't object to making a declaration, but he wanted money."

"That's the way you put it now. Are you prepared to say now whether or not he refused to make the declaration? You did not get a declaration from him?"

"No."

"And you asked him for one?"

"Yes. Ashley told me there was nothing in the charge."

"There was no necessity to say any traps for him?"

"No."

"You were satisfied with what he had told you?"

"Yes."

"Then there was no necessity to get him to make any further declaration?"

"Not as far as I was concerned."

"How many did you interview and get declarations from?"

"Between 75 and 100."

"Brought into your office by Mr. Stratton's supporters?"

Mr. DuVernet asked who brought these men in, and Mr. Davidson named Mr. Glover and Mr. Darke as among those who did.

"Did you tell any of these men from whom you got your declarations that there was a penalty for bribery?"

"Not that I remember."

The witness swore that he never offered anybody any money. He offered no money to Ashley. Pritchard's declaration was drawn up in Mr. Davidson's office. Witness said he had an indistinct recollection of being asked for money in the committee rooms.

"Do you remember anybody being with you in the east room on election day?"

"There were so many I have no recollection of anyone in particular."

Asked how many chairs there were were in the east room Mr. Davidson said he wouldn't swear there was more than one. Mr. Leary was never very long in the west room at a time. Witness saw Mr. Stratton at the rooms several times. He thought Mr. Stratton spent most of his time downstairs between four and five on the afternoon of the election. Mr. Davidson had no recollection of seeing Mr. Leary at any particular time between two and four.

"Who brought Mr. Sidney Pope in to see you?"

"Don't remember."

"Did either Gates or Ashley say they got money from Leary?"

"I didn't hear them."

The evidence of the next witness was listened to with great attention. Mr. J. R. Stratton was the witness and, like Mr. Hall and Mr. Davidson, made direct denials of the statements of other witnesses.

Mr. Watson—"You were candidate at the last Provincial election in Peterborough?"

"Yes."

"Were you at the committee rooms during election day?"

"Part of the time."

"You know Mr. Leary very well?"

"Yes."

"He is a strong party man?"

"Yes."

"Did you have knowledge of the fact that Mr. Leary was working for you as party candidate?"

Mr. Stratton replied in the affirmative.

"Did you ever ask him to do anything?"

"No."

"How did he come to do what he did?"

"I suppose as a party man."

"Was there any party organization?"

"I think there was."

"How did the organization come about?"

The reply was to the effect that the workers organized voluntarily for the campaign.

"You were quite aware that Mr. Leary was working as well as he could?"

"Yes."

"Did you ask him to do any particular thing?"

"No."

"Was anything done under your direction?"

"I only directed myself."

Mr. Stratton said he thought there was 150 or 200 in the rooms upstairs on the afternoon of the election.

Mr. Stratton—"I got back in the afternoon somewhere about twenty minutes after two, or 2.30. I had been out to lunch. I remained there about three-quarters of an hour. I stayed at the rooms until about 3.15 and then left. Mr. Leary was there when I left. He was out somewhere. I don't know where. I got back a little before four. Mr. Leary was not there then. Mr. Hall had told him to go to North Monaghan. He came back a little before the polls closed. About ten minutes before. I asked him where he had been. He said at May's school house. I was in all the rooms when upstairs. I was in the corner room that day. There was a table there and something piled up in the corner. I think there were some chairs there. I was in the room on the afternoon of the election. I was in the room two or three times between 4 and 5 o'clock. There was no such condition as described by witnesses of people standing in a row. That is untrue."

Mr. Stratton—"When I came back at 2.20 Mr. Leary was there. He was doing the same as the rest of us, making himself generally useful. There did not seem to be good organization. The voters were going to the wrong polls. Between 3 and 5 there was a congestion. I went downstairs to take charge and direct the drivers where to take the voters."

Mr. Watson—"It has been said by these six men that they got money from Mr. Leary. Have you any knowledge of it whatever, directly or indirectly?"

"None whatever."

"These persons have stated Mr. Leary was there between 4 and 4.30."

Mr. Hall said Mr. Leary had gone to North Monaghan. I didn't see him about. I'm sure I would have seen him if he had been there."

Justice McMahon—"If he hadn't been up the chimney."

"These men say they didn't ask for money, but they heard inside the rooms there was money going."

"I saw none and heard of none."

"Did anybody ask you for money?"

"Yes."

"Where did that take place?"

"That took place in the committee rooms and on the street."

"Who asked you?"

Three or four workingmen asked me for money."

"Did they get it?"

"They did not."

"Where did you first see Ashley?"

"He was decorating a safe in the Examiner office. I came in one evening when he was painting it. That was the first time I ever saw him."

"When was that?"

"That would be a couple of months ago."

"Did he say anything about the election?"

"Never mentioned it."

"When did you next see him?"

"I saw him on the street at various times, but not to speak to him."

"When did you first see Gates to know him?"

"In Mr. Hall's office on September 21st."

Mr. Stratton denied having asked Mr. Davidson to give Gates $5.

"How did you happen to be at Mr. Hall's office on the 21st of September?"

"Mr. Hall telephoned for me to come at eight o'clock that night as a party would like to make an application. He introduced me to Mr. Ashley and Mr. Gates."

"What took place?"

"Mr. Gates stated that he had a proposition to make that for $400 he would make any sort of declaration we wanted, that he would go away to Vancouver, be a million miles away when court opened."

"What did Gates say about Leary?"

"He said Leary had paid him $2 in the committee rooms."

(Mr. Stratton said something about Gates saying something about $5 which he claimed Mr. Davidson gave him and which statement was later denied by Mr. Davidson, but his remark could be distinctly heard by the reporter.) He said Mr. Ashley had got $2 from Mr. Leary in the committee rooms and would swear it at the election trial if he didn't get the $200. When the statements were repeated to Mr. Davidson he said they weren't true and wouldn't give ten cents. Mr. Leary said the same."

Mr. Watson—"Do you know anything about Alsept?"

"I do not."

"Mark Harland?"

"I do not."

"That is before the election I didn't know anything about Alsept. Later Alsept came into my office to see me and said the charge against him was not true."

Mr. Stratton knew Sidney Pope. He remembered an interview he had with him.

"So far as you are concerned there is no truth in any of the charges?"

"None."

"So far as you know there is no truth in any of the charges?"

"None whatever."

"They are all the same way?"

"No truth in them."

This concluded Mr. Watson's examination and the court was adjourned until 10 o'clock this morning.

FOR THE LADY WHO CALLS

The lady who has a large circle of acquaintances always finds it a difficult matter to keep track of the reception days of her friends and often mistakes are made, that might have been avoided if care were taken to make a record of such days. And then there are the teas, at homes, and parties to be remembered too and when a hostess is planning an affair she is always worried lest she overlook some one who has extended hospitality to her some time previous. To avoid these mistakes, a social register has been issued by the Review, that will be a boon to the busy lady. There are pages for each day of the month on which the record of the calls received and paid with the address of the visitor appear, then there are pages for social engagements, visits paid, addresses and memoranda, all of which prove very valuable data to have. These books are on sale at all the book stores and at the Review Office for 50 cents and there has already been a good demand for them.

MEMORIAL SERVICE

A memorial service was held in St. Luke's church, Toronto, on Wednesday night, to commemorate the life and work of the late Mrs. S. P. Davidson. The service was conducted by the Women's Auxiliary and nearly all the branches of the society in the city were represented. The preacher was the Lord Bishop of Algoma who came especially for the occasion. The loss sustained to the society by the death of Mrs. Davidson is keenly felt by her former co-workers. Many of the clergy of the city attended and the service was of a very solemn and impressive nature.

COW TESTING ASSOCIATIONS

From records being received at Ottawa from members of cow testing associations there is apparent a very marked variation in the earning power of the various cows in the same herd. There is every indication of many of last season's variations being repeated, such totals will show in many cases twenty-five dollars difference in income between two cows in the same herd. In some herds this is increased to forty dollars. For instance, in a herd of cows an eight year old cow gives actually 4,200 lb. milk and 180 lb. fat more than a five year old in the same stable during the same time. Placing a value of only 20 cents per pound on the butter, the one cow is thus seen to earn over forty dollars more than the other.

This is the important point to notice: there are hundreds of farmers in the Dominion in whose herds just such a remarkable difference between cows can be found, but the owners are probably unaware of the extent of such differences and will continue to be without the information so essential in these days of close margins until a record is kept of the production of each individual cow in the herd. Just a few minutes figuring per month will add vastly to the interest of the daily milking, besides providing a sure guide for reaping more profit per cow. The keeping of such records may have a special attraction for some younger member of the family.

BARNARDO BOYS BADLY TREATED

Mariposa Farmer Charged With Ill-treating Two English Youths

Lindsay, Sept. 3[illegible] before Magistrate [illegible] heard against a Mariposa farmer for assaulting two Barnardo Home boys, named respectively, Albert E. Carter, 15 years of age and John W. Young, 8 years of age, who were indentured to the Mariposa farmer.

The charge was made by Mr. Chas. H. Black, inspector for the Homes, who stated that as a result of an anonymous letter received, he went to where the boys were living and after investigation and interrogating the boys, along with information gleaned from neighbors, he concluded that the farmer was not a fit person to have charge of the boys, he therefore took them back to the Home in Toronto.

He saw a scar on the face of each boy. The general answer among the neighbors was "it is not a fit place to keep a dog, let alone a boy."

Albert E. Carter stated that he was indentured with his employer on Oct. 29th, 1907, and on the morning in question, which was a Sunday, his master hit him with a wrench at first striking him with his fist in the back and face. The wrench hit him on the right temple and left a large swelling. Asked why he was so abused the boy said he did not get up that morning until seven o'clock and he should have been up at six.

The assault happened in the separating room. Carter admitted not always telling the truth but said he always did whatever he was told to do. Crown Attorney Devlin acted for the prosecution, and Mr. Jordan for the defence and to the questions and cross questions of both the boy answered most intelligently.

CONCERT AND SOCIAL

A splendid concert program will be given at the Y. W. C. A on Friday evening. Cocoa and home made cake will be served. Plan to be at the Y.W.C.A.

GAMBLING IS A MENACE TO CANADA'S NATIONAL LIFE

So Said Rev. Dr. Cody at St. Luke's Church Last Night—Defines Gambling as a Perversion of Certain Natural Instincts.

"The perversion of certain natural instincts in a man or a woman which in themselves are not wrong," was one of Rev. Dr. Cody's definitions of gambling at St. Luke's church last night. His subject was "Gambling—a National Menace," and the occasion of his preaching at St. Lukes was the annual harvest festival of the congregation.

The reverend gentleman denounced gambling and betting in the strongest terms, arguing that Christian bodies everywhere should pass resolutions asking that the laws in regard to race track betting and gambling be changed. At present, he remarked, the law was radically unsound. "We cannot over-estimate the magnitude of the evil," Canon Cody stated. He believed that a similar campaign should be waged against it as was being carried on against the liquor traffic. It was a national evil, nothing begetting more crime than it. According to statistics, Dr. Cody said that seventy-five per cent. of the embezzlements, forgeries and bankruptcies in the Dominion were the results of gambling.

Dr. Cody's remarks were most interesting. He is a fluent and eloquent speaker and his words cannot fail to make a deep impression. The service last evening was one of joyful thankfulness to Almighty God for a bountiful harvest. Everywhere were evidences of the harvest in the shape of fruit, grain and flowers. The rector, Rev. Dr. Langfeldt, was assisted in the services by Rev. Canon Davidson, of St. John's church, and Rev. E. A. Pearson, of the George street Methodist church read the first lesson and Ald. J. J. Turner the second one.

THE SERMON.

Rev. Canon Cody based his sermon on the words found in the 23rd and 24th verses of the 19th chapter of St. John's Gospel. "Then the soldiers, when they had crucified Jesus, took His garments and made four parts, to every soldier a part, and also his coat. Now, the coat was without seam, woven from the top throughout.

"They parted my raiment among them and for my vesture they did cast lots."

The speaker thought that a day when a congregation was returning thanks for a good harvest was a most opportune time to consider a national evil—gambling. He began by picturing to his hearers the scene surrounding the instance of gambling referred to in the verses of his text. The Saviour of the world upon the cross, and cold, hard men gambling for His legacy. This evil was rife among the Jews of that day. Although there was no identical text in the Bible prohibiting gambling, one read such sentences as "money is the root of all evil." "Be kind one to another," and "Thou shalt not covet." The preacher, continuing, said that gambling was unearned gain at the cost of another. The magnitude of the evil could not be over-estimated, but the law was of little assistance in any effort to wipe it out. It has been stated that gambling came next to drunkenness in the curse it wrought upon society. It was not as openly repulsive as the drinking habit, but to anyone who ever visited a race track or Monte Carlo it was as equally repulsive. People generally were ignorant of its rapid growth, it being difficult to keep line with legitimate and illegitimate speculation.

BETTING DEFINED.

Rev. Canon Cody defined betting as being a stake upon a chance for gain without labor. It was a determination to gain the ownership of a property by chance. It was the perversion of certain natural instincts. There were such instincts as the spirit of adventure, the love of freedom, the rightful desire for money, which, in themselves, were not wrong.

The eloquent divine went on to show how betting violated one's natural instincts. The first one he referred to was the stewardship of money. In betting one was wasting money given him by God. One-third of the human race was hungry and the progress of Christianity was retarded because money was being wasted. No use of money was more anarchial than when expended in betting.

Secondly, it destroyed all proper view of the rights to property. If one lost by the shake of a dice or the shuffling of cards, then rightful ownership was denied. The transference of property by chance did away with all system. The speaker believed that gambling to a man of vigor was a sign of premature demoralization. Taking money that he had not properly earned was degrading, and would ultimately lead to utter moral deterioration.

Gamblers have been heard to remark, said the speaker, that it was not money for the money that they bet but for the exciting interest. "Eliminate the money element," he added, "and see how many would stay in the game."

Thirdly, it was a violation of the fundamental law of work, and fourthly it violated in point of selfishness, the law of brotherly love.

CONTRARY TO TRUE SPORT

Dr. Cody stated that the fifth violation of the evil of betting was against the true laws of sport. Everyone encouraged sport properly carried on. It was essential to the development of one physically. It made a boy manly, but nothing so lowers sport as betting. To an habitual bettor there was no real attraction in a game or a race. To him it was not sport but money getting. The best man was the one who played the game for the love of it, not for the stakes that had been put up.

Betting was a violation of the laws of common sense. Some gamblers made money, but the majority lost. If a business man failed, he was assisted by his banker or his friends, but what banker, asked the preacher, would come to the assistance of a ruined gambler.

Lastly, it violated the laws of strong character building. In gambling reason played no part. The best part of a man was set aside. Nothing was so conducive to the hardening of one's sympathies, to deception, to avarice and crime as general gambling, resulting invariably in a horrible death.

In conclusion the speaker dwelt upon active steps being taken to combat this evil in Canada. The supreme folly of it should be pointed out. He believed that equally as good results could be obtained as in the fight against the liquor traffic. Betting was unchivalrous and unchristian.

During the offertory the choir sang an anthem, with a solo by Miss Ruby Quartermaine.

GOOD GAME ASSURED FOR TO-MORROW AT RIVERSIDE

First Rugby Team of T.C.S., Port Hope, Will Meet the Local Collegiates at 3 o'Clock—Ladies Will be Admitted Free of Charge.

Followers of the rugby game are assured of an interesting exhibition at Riverside Park to-morrow afternoon at three o'clock, when the first team of the Trinity College school, Port Hope, will line up against the speedy local collegiate fourteen. The visitors are a strong and well balanced aggregation and intend repeating their performance of last year when they defeated the Collegiates. The P.C.I., however, are in better shape for a hard game this season and can be depended to give a good account of themselves. They have been practicing hard since their game with the Rough Riders last Saturday, and the weak points of the team, which were in evidence, have been remedied.

For admission gentlemen will be charged 15 cents and 10 cents extra for the grandstand. Ladies will be admitted free to the grounds and grandstand and the more the merrier.

THE ART OF PASSING IN THE FOOTBALL GAME

Before a football team is picked, the individuals must practice passing and catching, kicking, tackling, falling on the ball, making and blocking holes, interference and how to break it, giving and blocking a straight arm.

Passing is important. The game depends as much upon good passing as upon picking and running. Unless properly passed, the receiver can't handle the ball. The pass should be at or below the waist.

On the underhand pass the end of the ball rests in the palm of the hand, fingers around point of ball, which is tossed end over end. The spiral pass, so necessary now, is made by holding the ball near the middle, resting lengthwise across the palm and swinging the arm forward across the waist. As the swing ends, the hand is pulled over the ball, giving the spin.

Passing, by quarter-back, cannot be practiced too much. If the full-back, centre half or left is to go through the left side, the quarter must bring his right foot back behind his left, to give the back a chance to go straight through. The ball must be placed in the pit of the back's stomach.

Unless he gets the ball low the back cannot hit the line effectively. He must keep his hands at his sides until the ball is placed against his body.

When passing to a half-back for a line plunge on his left, the quarter should turn, step to the left and simultaneously pass the ball on a line a little lower than the waist. Successful plays outside wing or wing or around end depend much upon the passing. Speed is necessary, and unless the pass is sure, no back can start quickly.

Pass the ball just ahead of the running back, aiming at his outside hip. This makes him "keep coming." Immediately after passing the ball the quarter should get in behind the runner to help him along.

ACCEPTS CHALLENGE

I, the undersigned, Prof. T. A. Turner, of New York, do hereby accept the challenge of W. E. Genoe, and will skate him on any terms used in the little wheels in the Auditorium roller rink on any date he may mention for $100 a side or as much more as he cares to put up. Reply wanted before October 2nd.

PROF. T. A. TURNER.

BASEBALL

Schedule of dates for the world's series is as follows:—

Friday, Oct. 8, at Pittsburg.
Saturday, Oct. 9, at Pittsburg.
Monday, Oct. 11, Detroit.
Tuesday, Oct. 12, at Detroit.
Wednesday, Oct. 13, at Pittsburg.
Thursday, Oct. 14, at Detroit.

Odds of 6, and in a few instances of 7 to 5, on Pittsburg, as against Detroit, are already appearing on the betting boards in the world's series.

Tim Flood, the former Maple Leaf, and Jack Hoey, late of Holy Cross, Boston Americans, Toronto, and St. Paul, finished with the Little Rock Club in the Southern League.

Pitcher Arthur "Bugs" Raymond quit the New York Giants last night at Pittsburg. He says Manager McGraw fined him $1,700 of his $4,500 salary on one pretext or another and he didn't propose to stand it any longer. Other players on the same team complain to the same treatment.

Carlo Libeno, the Italian champion runner, is out with a challenge to run Fred Simpson, a 15-mile race indoors at a roller rink. He says he will put up a $50 side bet. Simpson says he will gallop anybody for any sum plus a percentage of the gate receipts. The race, if the Italian comes up with the coin, will probably be run at Excelsior Roller Rink the latter part of October.—Toronto Star.

Come with the crowds to Auditorium Roller Rink to-night and to morrow afternoon and night, and see the skating wonder, Prof. Turner. Band to night.

JAMES JORDAN A WITNESS CALLED BY MR. WATSON

test, but admitted he interviewed these 25 people.

"Did you ask any to go to Mr. Hall's office for the purpose of making declarations?"

"For the purpose of letting him see what evidence they had."

"You say you had an interview with Mr. Gates at Mr. Hall's office. Do you say you didn't know you were going to meet him?"

"I do."

CONCERNING WHAT GATES SAID

"What statement was made by Mr. Gates that he would swear he was paid $2 by Mr. Leary?"

"Did Mr. Gates say he had been given $2 by Mr. Leary?"

"No. He said he would swear to it."

Mr DuVernet drew the attention of the witness to the fact that he stated in his examination in chief that Gates had said that he had been given $2 by Mr. Leary.

Mr. Stratton told of seeing Alsept and Pope to whom the charges were read.

"Did you point out any penalties to them?"

DIDN'T HAVE CHARGE OF ENGLISHMEN.

"Then you asked them to go down to Mr. Hall's office."

"Yes."

"Do you know the man referred to in your examination as Daddy Taylor?"

"Yes."

"He was the man who looked after the Englishmen?"

"I don't know."

"Did he take any men to you?"

"To the best of my recollection, no."

"Can you swear he was not looking after the Englishmen?"

"I can't swear positively."

Mr. Stratton explained that Mr. Meyers, who was here during the campaign was here for the purpose of doing Mr. Stratton's private correspondence. He was at the committee rooms also where there was so much work, as he was a good shorthand writer and stenographer.

"I understand that at the examination for discovery you say he did nothing for you in connection with the election?"

"Well no outside work or canvassing."

"You would say there were 150 or 200 men in the upper committee rooms on election day at one time?"

"Yes."

"I understand you to say between 3 and 5 there was a congestion of persons?"

"Yes, when the polls closed at five I suppose there were 600 or 700 on the street."

"Did you know a man named Kingscote?"

"I do?"

"Did you know he was looking after the Englishmen?"

"I do not."

"Did you see him during the election?"

"Not to talk to."

"You know he was working?"

"I suppose so."

"You didn't know he was in charge of the Englishmen?"

"Didn't know he was any more than anybody else."

To Mr. Watson:—"I will venture to say that not a five cent piece was paid to any man for an offer or promise."

Charles A. Kelly has been here about four years. He was in the central committee rooms on election day from 1.30. Mr. Leary was absent some time about 3 o'clock. He went again about 3.30 or twenty minutes to four. Witness thought he said he had to go to the country.

"I don't know when he got back. I was there till five o'clock. I was upstairs in the main room. I had no occasion to be in the corner room. It couldn't be possible for any persons to be standing in a row. It wouldn't be possible."

To Mr. DuVernet.—"There would be about 150 people in the upper room in the afternoon at one time. I didn't pay particular attention to see if the room was crowded. I was getting information. I had no occasion to go into the east room. Mr. Walter Davidson was back and forward in the west room. I saw Mr. Leary during the afternoon a couple of times. I didn't pay any attention to any driver. I didn't see Mr. Leary come back. I don't know where Mr. Leary went to in the country. He couldn't very well get back without me seeing him. I was at the top of the stairs all the time."

"Mr. Morgan says he came back?"

"I didn't see him."

HE PAID NOTHING EITHER.

Mr. R. H. Leary said he had resided here all his life. He recollected last election here, and was at the committee rooms part of the time on election day. There can be no doubt he was an active supporter of the Liberal candidate. At no time was he asked by the candidate to do anything. On election day in the forenoon he was looking after the polling divisions in No. 2 ward. From 10.30 to 12 Mr. Leary was in the committee rooms in the morning. He also visited polls in the morning and also went out to May's schoolhouse, North Monaghan. At 12 o'clock he went to a restaurant and had his lunch.

"Now, then, it has been stated by six men that during the afternoon you paid them money. Are these charges or statements of their's true or not?"

"They're not true."

"Who was in charge of your horse and rig that day?"

"Arthur Morgan."

Mr. Leary said he got back from lunch at one o'clock, left the rooms again at 1.30 and made a round of the divisions in his ward, getting back at 3 o'clock. He made another round of the polling divisions.

He recollected being at Babb's polling sub-division. He saw Arthur McClellan there shortly after three. At 3.30 he got back to the rooms and told Morgan to be back for him at a quarter to four. During his interval he had a talk with Mr. Hall, he also called to the room. He stayed there in the west room a very short time. He was in and out of both rooms, perhaps two or three times. The corner room was for the purpose of taking the reports of the workers and in the room were the names of all the voters in the city. Everybody used the corner room. There was a large table in the room. It would probably be a room 10x12. Witness thought they kept one chair there. In the main room in the afternoon there was never less than 25 people and when he left for Monaghan there would probably be 150 there. Mr. Leary knew Morgan called for him at a quarter to four. Witness knew the time because he looked at his watch at the time he got unto the buggy. He got back at 10 minutes to five. He knew the exact time, because he wanted to get back from his visit to May's school house at ten minutes to five. No stops were made on the way to May's school house. He stayed there 15 or 20 minutes. Concerning Ashley, who claimed he got $2 from Mr. Leary, the latter said he never saw him till the evening of the 31st of September, in Mr. Hall's office.

You saw Gates and Ashley at the office of Mr. Hall on Sept. 21st, Mr. Watson said.

Leary—I was told to be around by Mr. Hall. When I went there Mr. Davidson took me into a small room off Mr. Hall's office, where we could hear what took place.

What was that told

I don't know, but we heard what took place. Mr. Hall then asked us into his office. We went in.

Gates denied giving a statement to Mr. Moore. One of them said he would take an affidavit to leave the country or do anything for $400; the other one would do it for $200. Mr. Hall asked Mr. Davidson and myself if the charge was true, and we told him it was not. Ashley said he could get out on the midnight, as he only had a trunk to pack. He would get out or take an affidavit for $200. When Gates was leaving the room he said, "Good evening, gentlemen. We'll meet you at the sessions with a bunch of English evidence."

Witness said that Mr. Davidson stated that he had never given Ashley or Gates any money.

Did Gates say in your presence he had received $5 from Mr. Davidson.

No, sir.

Ashley says someone had given him a note to give to you, and he gave it to you.

No, sir. I never saw him till I met him in Mr. Hall's office.

You were in your right and sensible mind on election day, I hope?

Yes, sir.

I suppose you had some money in your pocket that day?

Yes, I had a little. I am never without some.

Mr. Leary said he never saw a row of men passing on to [illegible] him at the committee rooms. "If they were there I never seen them," witness said.

Witness said he never saw Alsept till he seen him giving evidence at the trial.

Did you hand out any money to anyone, for any purpose, legitimate or otherwise on election day at the Liberal committee rooms?

Nothing of the kind took place.

His Lordship Justice Magee asked witness if he had placed any money on the table, and then turned his back, as was stated in previous evidence?

Nothing of the kind took place.

Witness said he never saw Mark Harland till he seen him in the witness box.

Mr. Leary said he knew Sidney Pope. He was a gunner with the 21th Field Battery at Pettawawa in 1907. Mr. Leary was captain of the battery. Witness did not see Pope at the Liberal rooms on election day. He never saw Harry Butler there either.

Mr. Watson asked Mr. Leary some questions on other points, and his answers were to the same effect that he knew of nothing improper whatsoever in connection with the election.

MR. LEARY CROSS-EXAMINED.

Mr. Watson started his cross-examination of Mr. Leary in vigorous style.

What was your business at the time of the election, Mr. Leary?

I was getting leases for the privilege of boring for gas in North Monaghan.

Were you ever in the livery business.

Yes, till four years ago. I quit the livery business then.

Was that the time you gave up profanity?

I never used it.

Never used any profanity when in the livery business?

Never at all.

"A man is privileged to use a mild damn, isn't he? said Justice McMahon.

"Profanity means using the name of the Maker," Mr. Watson said.

"Oh, that's what you mean," Mr. DuVernet said to Leary.

Yes.

Mr. Watson put in a remark and Mr. DuVernet objected.

"I was endeavoring to assist my learned friend," Mr. Watson said.

"He doesn't want any assistance," Justice McMahon said to Mr. Watson.

Mr. Leary was closely examined regarding the evidence of Arthur Morgan, who was in the witness box yesterday, and told of driving Mr. Leary around the city and to North Monaghan.

Did you tell Morgan at 3.45 that you'd soon be ready to start to North Monaghan?

I do not think I did.

You don't deny that you came down and told him you'd soon be ready.

That is not correct—at a quarter to four.

If Morgan says that he's wrong there?

It's not correct.

Witness also admitted Morgan was wrong when he said calls were made on the trip to North Monaghan.

Did anyone ask you for money on election day?

People asked me for money.

Where?

Different places.

What places?

They asked me on the sidewalk in front of the building.

THE YOUNGER SET

Author of
"The Fighting Chance."

"One moment, Draymore," cut in Selwyn, and his voice rang unpleasantly. "If you are simply complaining because you have been outwitted, go ahead, but if you think there has been any really dirty business in this matter go to Mr. Neergard. Otherwise, being his associate, I shall not only decline to listen, but also ask you to leave my apartments."

"Captain Selwyn is perfectly right," observed Orchil coolly. "Do you think, Draymore, that it is very good taste in you to come into a man's place and begin slanging and cursing a member of his firm for crooked work?"

"Besides," added Mottly, "it's not crooked; it's only contemptible." And to Selwyn, who had been restlessly facing first one, then another: "We came—it was the idea of several among us—to put the matter up to you, which was rather foolish, because you couldn't have engineered the thing and remained what we know you to be. So"—

"Wait!" said Selwyn brusquely. "I do not admit for one moment that there is anything dishonorable in this deal, nor do I accept your right to question it from that standpoint, because I personally have not chosen to engage in matters of this—ah—description, is no reason for condemning the deal or its method."

"Every reason!" said Orchil, laughing cordially. "Every reason, Captain Selwyn. Thank you; we know now exactly where we stand. It was very good of you to let us come, and I'm sorry some of us had the bad taste to show any temper."

"He means me," added Draymore, offering his hand; "goodby, Captain Selwyn. I dare say we are up against it hard."

"Because we've got to buy in that property or close up the Slowitha," added Mottly, coming over to make his adieus. "By the way, Selwyn, you ought to be one of us in the Slowitha."

"Thank you, but isn't this rather an awkward time to suggest it?" said Selwyn good humoredly.

Fane burst into a sonorous laugh and wagged his neck, saying: "Not at all! Not at all! Your reward for having the decency to stay out of the deal is an invitation from us to come in and be squeezed into a jelly by Mr. Neergard. Haw! Haw!"

And so, one by one, with formal or informal but evidently friendly leave-taking, they went away. And Selwyn followed them presently, walking until he took the subway at Forty-second street for his office.

He went into his own office, pocketed his mail and still wearing hat and gloves came out again just as Gerald was leaving Neergard's office.

He walked leisurely into Neergard's office and seated himself.

"So you have committed the firm to the Slowitha deal?" he inquired coolly.

Neergard looked up and then past him: "No, not the firm. You did not seem to be interested in the scheme, so I went on without you. I'm swinging it for my personal account."

"Is Mr. Erroll in it?"

"I said that it was a private matter," replied Neergard, but his manner was affable.

"I thought so; it appears to me like a matter quite personal to you and characteristic of you, Mr. Neergard. And, that being established, I am now ready to dissolve whatever very loose ties have ever bound me in any association with this company and yourself."

Neergard's close set black eyes shifted a point nearer to Selwyn's. The sweat on his nose [illegible]tened.

"Why do you do this?" he asked slowly. "Has anybody offended you?"

"Do you really wish to know?"

"Yes, I certainly do, Captain Selwyn."

"Very well. It's because I don't like your business methods, I don't like several other things that are happening in this office. It's purely a difference of views, and that is enough explanation, Mr. Neergard."

"I think our views may very easily coincide."

"You are wrong; they could not. I ought to have known that when I came back here. And now I have only to thank you for receiving me, at my own request, for a six months' trial, and to admit that I am not qualified to co-operate with this kind of a firm."

"That," said Neergard angrily, "amounts to an indictment of the firm. If you express yourself in that manner outside, the firm will certainly resent it!"

"My personal taste will continue to govern my expressions, Mr. Neergard, and I believe will prevent any further business relations between us. And as we never had any other kind of relations, I have merely to arrange the details through an attorney."

Neergard looked after him in silence. The tiny beads of sweat on it now united and rolled down in a glittering drop and the sneer etched on his broad and brightly mottled features deepened to a snarl when Selwyn had disappeared.

For the social prestige which Selwyn's name had brought the firm he had patiently endured his personal dislike and contempt for the man after he found he could do nothing with him in any way.

He had accepted Selwyn purely in the hope of social advantage and with the knowledge that Selwyn could have done much for him after business hours, if not from friendship, at least from interest or a lively sense of benefits to come. For that reason he had invited him to participate in the valuable Slowitha deal, supposing a man as comparatively poor as Selwyn would not only jump at the opportunity, but also prove sufficiently grateful later. And he had been amazed and disgusted at Selwyn's attitude. But he had not supposed the man would sever his connection with the firm if he, Neergard, went ahead on his own responsibility. It astonished and irritated him. It meant, instead of selfish or snobbish indifference to his own social ambitions, an enemy to block his entrance into what he desired—the society of those made notorious in the columns of the daily press.

He was fairly on the outer boundary now, though still very far outside. But a needy gentleman inside was already compromised and practically pledged to support him, for his meeting with Jack Ruthven through Gerald had proved of greatest importance. He had lost gracefully to Ruthven and in doing it had taken that gentleman's measure. And, though Ruthven himself was a member of the Slowitha, Neergard had made no error in taking him secretly into the deal where together they were now in a position to exploit the club, from which Ruthven of course would resign in time to escape any assessment himself.

Neergard's progress had now reached this stage. His programme was simple—to wallow among the wealthy until satiated, then to marry into that agreeable community and found the house of Neergard. And to that end he had already bought a building site on Fifth avenue, but held it in the name of the firm, as though it had been acquired for purposes merely speculative.

Chapter 13

About that time Boots Lansing very quietly bought a house on Manhattan island. It was a small, narrow, three storied house of brick, rather shabby on the outside and situated on a modest block between Lexington and Park avenues, where the newly married of the younger set were arriving in increasing numbers, prepared to pay the penalty for all love matches.

It was an unexpected move to Selwyn; he had not been aware of Lansing's contemplated desertion, and that morning, returning from his final interview with Neergard, he was astonished to find his comrade's room bare of furniture and a hasty and exclamatory note on his own table:

> Phil! I've bought a house! Come and see it! You'll find me in it! Carpetless floors and unpapered walls! It's the happiest day of my life!
>
> BOOTS!
> House Owner!

And Selwyn, horribly depressed, went down after a solitary luncheon and found Lansing sitting on a pile of dusty rugs, ecstatically inspecting the cracked ceiling.

"I'm going to have the entire thing done over, room by room, when I can afford it. Look there, Phil! That's to be your room."

"Thanks, old fellow—not now."

"Why, yes! I expected you'd have your room here, Phil"—

"It's very good of you, Boots, but I can't do it."

Lansing faced him. "Won't you?"

Selwyn, smiling, shook his head, and the other knew it was final.

Found Lansing sitting on a pile of dusty rugs.

"Well, the room will be there, furnished the way you and I like it. When you want it make smoke signals or wigwag."

"I will, thank you, Boots."

Lansing said unaffectedly, "How soon do you think you can afford a house like this?"

"I don't know. You see, I've only my income now."

"Plus what you make at the office."

"I've left Neergard."

"What!"

"This morning; for good."

"The deuce!" he murmured, looking at Selwyn; but the latter volunteered no further information, and Lansing, having given him the chance, cheerfully switched to the other track.

"Shall I see whether the Air Line has anything in your line, Phil? No? Well, what are you going to do?"

"I don't exactly know what I shall do. If I had capital—enough—I think I'd start in making bulk and dense powders—all sorts; gun cotton, nitro powders"—

"You mean you'd like to go on with your own invention—chaosite?"

"I'd like to keep on experimenting with it if I could afford to. Perhaps I will. But it's not yet a commercial possibility—if it ever is to be. I wish I could control it; the ignition is simultaneous and absolutely complete, and there is not a trace of ash, not an unburned or partly burned particle. But it's not to be trusted, and I don't know what happens to it after a year's storage."

"Anyway," said Lansing, "you've nothing to worry over."

"No, nothing," assented Selwyn listlessly.

After a silence Lansing added, "But you do a lot of worrying all the same, Phil."

Selwyn flushed up and denied it.

"Yes, you do! I don't believe you realize how much of the time you are out of spirits."

"Does it impress you that way," asked Selwyn, mortified, "because I'm really all right?"

"Of course you are, Phil. I know it, but you don't seem to realize it. You're morbid, I'm afraid."

"You've been talking to my sister!"

"What of it? Besides, I know there was something the matter."

"You know what it is too. And isn't it enough to subdue a man's spirits occasionally?"

"No," said Lansing, "if you mean your—mistake—two years ago. That isn't enough to spoil life for a man. I've wanted to tell you so for a long time."

And as Selwyn said nothing: "For heaven's sake, make up your mind to enjoy your life! You are fitted to enjoy it. Get that absurd notion out of your head that you're done for, that you've no home life in prospect, no family life, no children."

"Do you mean to say, Boots, that you think a man who has made the ghastly mess of his life that I have ought to feel free to marry?"

"Think it! Man, I know it. Certainly you ought to marry if you wish, but, above all, you ought to feel free to marry. That is the essential equipment of a man. He isn't a man if he feels that he isn't free to marry. He may not want to do it, he may not be in love. That's neither here nor there. The main thing is that he is free as a man should be to take any good opportunity, and marriage is included in the list of good opportunities."

Sitting there in the carpetless room piled high with dusty, linen shrouded furniture, Selwyn looked around, an involuntary smile twitching his mouth.

"What about your marrying," he said, "after this talk about mine? What about it, Boots? Is this new house the first modest step toward the matrimony you laud so loudly?"

"Sure," said that gentleman airily. "That's what I'm here for."

"Really?"

"Well, of course, idiot. I've always been in love."

"You mean you actually have somebody in view?"

"No, son. I've always been in love with—love. I'm a sentimental sentry on the ramparts of reason. I'm properly armed for trouble now, so if I'm challenged I won't let my chance slip by me."

After a little while Selwyn went away, first to look up a book which he was having bound for Eileen, then to call on his sister, who, with Eileen, had just returned from a week at Silverside with the children preliminary to moving the entire establishment there for the coming summer.

"Silverside is too lovely for words!" exclaimed Nina as Selwyn entered the library. "Nobody wanted to come away. Eileen made straight for the surf, but it was an Arctic sea, and as soon as I found out what she was doing I made her come out."

"I should think you would," he said. "Nobody can do that and thrive."

"She seems to," said Nina. "She was simply glorious after the swim, and I hated to put a stop to it. And you should see her drying her hair and helping Plunket to roll the tennis courts—that hair of hers blowing like gold flames and her sleeves rolled to her armpits—and you should see her down in the dirt playing marbles with Billy and Drina shooting away excitedly and exclaiming 'Ten dubs!' and 'Knuckle down, Billy!' like any gamin you ever heard of—totally unspoiled, Phil, in spite of all the success of her first winter! And do you know that she had no end of men seriously entangled? Phil!"

"What?" he said.

His sister regarded him smilingly, then partly turned around and perched herself on the padded arm of a great chair.

"Come over here, Phil; no, close to me. I wish to put my hands on your shoulders, like that. Now look at me. Do you really love me?"

"Sure thing, Ninette."

"And you know I adore you, don't you?"

"Madly, dear, but I forgive you."

"No. I want you to be serious, because I'm pretty serious. See, I'm not smiling now. I don't feel like it, because it is a very, very important matter, Phil, this thing that has—has—almost happened. It's about Eileen. And it really has happened."

"What has she done?" he asked curiously.

His sister's eyes were searching his very diligently, as though in quest of something elusive, and he gazed serenely back, the most unsuspicious of smiles touching his mouth.

"Phil, dear, a young girl—a very young girl—is a vapid and uninteresting proposition to a man of thirty five, isn't she?"

"Rather—in some ways."

"In what way is she not?"

"Well, to me, for example, she is acceptable as children are acceptable—a blessed, sweet, clean relief from the women of the Fanes' set, for example."

"Like Rosamund?"

"Yes. And, Ninette, you and Austin seem to be drifting out of the old circles, the sort that you and I were accustomed to. You don't mind my saying it, do you? But there were so many people in this town who had something besides millions—amusing, well bred, jolly people who had no end of good times, but who didn't gamble and guzzle and stuff themselves and their friends, who were not eternally hanging around other people's wives. You have just asked me whether a young girl is interesting to me. I answer, yes, thank God, for the cleaner, saner, happier hours I have spent this winter among my own kind have been spent where the younger set dominated. They are better than those who bred them, and if in time they, too, fall short they will not fall as far as their parents. And in their turn when they look around them at the younger set, whom they have taught in the light and wisdom of their own shortcomings, they will see fresher, sweeter, lovelier young people than we see now. And it will continue so, dear, through the jolly generations. Life is all right, only, like art, it is very, very long sometimes."

Nina sat silent upon the padded arm of her chair, looking up at her brother.

"Mad preacher! Mad mollah! Dear, dear fellow!" she said tenderly. "All ills of the world canst thou discount, but not thine own."

"Those, too," he insisted, laughing. "I had a talk with Boots. But anyway I'd already arrived at my own conclusion that—that—I'm rather overdoing this blighted business."

"Phil!" in quick delight.

"Yes," he said, reddening nicely; "between you and Boots and myself I've decided that I'm going in for—for whatever any man is going in for—life! Ninette, life to the full and up to the hilt for mine!"

"I am going to say something that is very, very serious and very near my heart," said Nina.

"I remember," he said. "It's about Eileen, isn't it?"

"Yes, it is about Eileen."

He waited, and again his sister's eyes began restlessly searching his for something that she seemed unable to find.

"You make it a little difficult, Phil. I don't believe I had better speak of it."

"Why not?"

"Why, just because you ask me 'Why not?' for example."

"Is it anything that worries you about Eileen?"

"N-no, not exactly. It is—it may be a phase, and yet I know that if it is anything at all it is not a passing phase. She is different from the majority, you see—very intelligent, very direct. She never forgets, for example. Her loyalty is quite remarkable, Phil. She is very intense in her—her beliefs, the more so because she is unusually free from impulse, even quite ignorant of the deeper emotions, or so I believed until—until"—

"Is she in love?" he asked.

"A little, Phil."

"Does she admit it?" he demanded, unpleasantly astonished.

"She admits it in a dozen innocent ways to me, who can understand her. But to herself she has not admitted it, I think—could not admit it yet, because—because"—

"Who is it?" asked Selwyn, and there was in his voice the slightest undertone of a growl.

"Dear, shall I tell you?"

"Why not?"

"Because—because, Phil, I think that our pretty Eileen is a little in love with—you."

He straightened out to his full height, scarlet to the temples. She dropped her linked fingers in her lap, gazing at him almost sadly.

"Dear, all the things you are preparing to shout at me are quite useless. I know. I don't imagine, I don't forestall; I don't predict."

"Nina, you are madder than a March heiress!"

"Air your theories, Phil, then come back to realities. The conditions remain. Eileen is certainly a little in love with you, and a little with her means something. And you evidently have never harbored any serious intentions toward the child. I can see that, because you are the most transparent man I ever knew. Now, the question is, What is to be done?"

"I am, of course, obliged to believe that you are mistaken," he said. "A man cannot choose but believe in that manner. There is no very young girl, nobody, old or young, whom I like as thoroughly as I do Eileen Erroll. She knows it; so do you, Nina. It is open and aboveboard. I should be very unhappy if anything marred or distorted our friendship. I am quite confident that nothing will."

"In that frame of mind," said his sister, smiling, "you are the healthiest companion in the world for her, for you will either cure her or she you, and it is all right either way."

"Certainly it will be all right!" he said confidently.

For a few moments he paced the room, reflective, quickening his pace all the while, and his sister watched him, silent in her indecision.

"I'm going up to see the kids," he said abruptly.

The children, one and all, were in the park, but Eileen was sewing in the nursery, and his sister did not call him back as he swung out of the room and up the stairs. But when he had disappeared Nina dropped into her chair, aware that she had played her best card prematurely, forced by Rosamund, who had just told her that rumor continued to be very busy coupling her brother's name with the name of the woman who once had been his wife.

Nina was now thoroughly convinced of Alixe's unusual capacity for making mischief.

JAMES JORDAN A WITNESS CALLED BY MR. WATSON

What did you tell them?

I told them I did not know of any money.

Will you swear that Pritchard's statement that he was in the little east room with you is false?

It is not correct.

You don't suggest any reason why he should not tell the truth?

No.

Witness was not sure about the number of chairs in the room. There might have been one. He knew some chairs were taken out.

If either Pritchard or Banks say they were in that little room alone with you, could you swear that it was false?

No, I couldn't.

Banks says you called him in?

I never recollect so doing.

Will you swear that it is not true?

No, I can't recollect it.

Then won't you swear that you were not in that little room with voters alone on election day?

I will swear that I was never in there alone with a voter with the door closed.

Witness admitted he might have called a voter in to ask him if he had voted. He was asking people all day if they had voted, and where they had voted.

You've heard what has been said about this cardboard box?

It's not true.

You saw no cardboard box there?

No.

You would have seen it if it were there?

Yes.

Did you see any money in that little room?

No.

Did you spend any money during the election, even for legitimate expenses?

No, I did not.

You make that statement without qualification of any kind?

Yes.

You never placed money on the table, never covered it over, never turned your back? Mr. DuVernet asked.

Mr Leary repeated the words and stated they were true.

Have you any reason to think that these men who came here and swore you gave them money should perjure themselves?

No. Unless it was the $10 offered them last fall, and that they were hard up.

Were you at the committee rooms at four o'clock?

No.

What about these men (previous witnesses) who say they saw you?

They are mistaken.

Mr. Leary told about getting a stick and placing it in a position to keep the door of the little room open. The door would close were it not for the stick on account of the spring.

Witness never seen Ashley, and wasn't aware that A. Kingscote was working for the Liberals during the election. No one ever brought him a note from Kingscote.

Were there a hundred people with you in that east room on election day?

No.

Fifty?

No.

Twenty-five?

Not twenty-five voters.

Would there be ten voters?

Yes.

Witness said he never paid out any money at this election or any other election.

To a question put by Mr. DuVernet, witness swore that he never directly or indirectly paid out any money on election day or on the Saturday previous.

Then you say that all these witnesses who came here and swore that you gave them money have perjured themselves?

Yes, as far as I'm concerned. No money transaction took place between me and anybody concerning the election.

Witness was sure about various times specified, because he had looked at his watch frequently on election day. He had the habit of doing this. He was sure it was 4.50 when he got back from Monaghan. He would swear he saw Mr. Stratton at the committee rooms when he got back from Monaghan, but he did not speak to him.

Witness swore that he never paid any money to witnesses or paid out any money whatever in connection with the election case. Neither did he see any paid out.

Witness stated he was at the Babb's lane polling division three times on election day, nine o'clock, one o'clock and three o'clock. He saw Arthur McClellan at nine and at three o'clock. He did not see him at one o'clock.

Witness said he was talking to Mr. Stratton at the committee rooms before he went to North Monaghan.

This statement was not in accord with that of Mr. Stratton and Mr. Watson remarked that such a discrepancy of statements might be true, even in honest evidence.

JAMES JORDAN.

James Jordan was called by Mr. Watson, and said he knew Arthur Alsept, and he saw him on election day about 3.30 in the afternoon. Saw him on the other side of the road and nodded my head to him. That was all that passed between us. It was near the Commercial Hotel that he saw Alsept. Jordan said he left home in Ashburnham at 3.30, which time he remembered because he had asked his neighbor the time in order to put his clock right. He met Alsept on the street at 3.30 he said, and was at the Liberal committee rooms from 3.30 to 5 o'clock. He had no conversation with Alsept on the day of the election. He was at the Liberal committee rooms and saw no money being given out.

WAS CONFLICTING.

Mr. DuVernet started a rapid fire cross-examination of the witness.

Will you swear you got no money? he asked Jordan.

Yes, sir.

Were you at the Liberal rooms on election day?

Yes.

What time?

Half-past three to five o'clock.

Did you see Mr. Leary there?

Yes.

All the time?

Yes.

What was he doing?

Canvassing, I should call it. I don't know how you describe it.

And Mr. Leary was there from 3.30 to five?

Yes.

Did you see Mark Harland that day.

No.

Did you see Banks and Alsept?

Yes.

Who was with you when you were walking on the street?

Nobody but myself.

Did you hear any talk of money at the Liberal rooms?

No, sir.

Did you see any money?

No.

You're sure you saw Mr. Leary there?

Yes, but I want to say that between you and me he didn't give me any money.

You were in Mr. Hall's office?

No; far from it.

Did you make an affidavit?

Never in my life.

Ever asked to take one?

No.

Witness volunteered the information that he was in Mr. Moore's office last night. He said he did not know Swangye and Williams.

You know Alsept?

Yes; and I can tell you between you and me he is not altogether right in his head.

Was Mr. Leary at the committee rooms at four o'clock?

Yes.

But Mr. Leary says he left there at a quarter to four.

Well, if he says he left it must be true, but I'm sure he never gave me money whatsoever.

Witness was asked a few questions by Mr. Watson, after which adjournment took place.

THAT WATCH OF YOURS

is in many respects similar to a railway engine. Let an engine be run without oil or cleaning and before long it will stop dead. Upon examination it will be found that the friction and wear and tear has ruined the machinery, and it is fit only for the scrap iron heap. Likewise your watch. You put it in your pocket, and while there is a kick in it, you, in your mistaken economy, do not consult the watchmaker, and consequently rob your watch of years of good service and also much of its former accuracy. The time-keeping qualities of a good watch are maintained and often improved by timely and skilful attention. If you have been one of the neglectful ones call around and see us.

NURSES SAY CHILD FOUND NEAR RAILWAY TRACK IS THE AUTHERS BABY

Last Link in Evidence Against Mrs. Mary Turner, Charged With Slaying Baby, is Forged by Positive Identification of Tag Placed on Child at Hospital.

Toronto, Oct. 2.—With the positive identification of the tag found upon the body of the infant picked up beside the New York Central tracks by Nurse Wanless who wrote it at the General Hospital here, and by Nurse Cummings who attached it to the child's back at the time of its birth, all doubt as to the identity of the body of the infant found by the New York Central railway tracks was done away at the inquest into the death of the child at the morgue last night.

Then, also, was told the finding of the body by the flagman and the story of the negotiations of Mrs. Maude Turner with Mrs. Authers for the adoption of the infant and the story of the arrest.

Frank Fleming of Lewiston, flagman of the N.Y.C., said that while he was at his post watching the cliffs along which the tracks run, he saw a parcel which he afterwards found to contain the body of an infant, come tumbling down the bank at a culvert. He called Coroner Scott.

On cross-examination, Mr. Robinette tried to shake Conductor Parrish's identification by asking if the trains were not very crowded at this season, but the flagman said that he had heard that there were very few people on that train.

Miss Mary Walker, daughter of Mrs. Annie Walker, 62 Peter street, stewardess on the Cayuga, said that she had traveled to Lewiston on the Chippewa on Thursday, Sept. 16, with her mother and two Taylor boys. They met the prisoner at the dock. Her mother introduced her as Mrs. Miller. She was carrying a parcel like a shoe box, only longer. She had it on the boat and said that she would pass it through the customs as lunch, though she said it was pretty heavy for lunch. The witness rode on the N.Y.C. train to Buffalo, and Mrs. Miller got off at the Falls. She had the parcel in the train. They had discussed the Kinrade case on the way over. Mrs. Miller said that she was going over to get some papers from a desk. She said that the police had come to her before she had read of the case in the newspapers. Mrs. Miller did not wear glasses and had remarked that she had a headache because she had left them behind.

Cecil Taylor, who was with the party, corroborated Miss Walker's story.

An application for bail was made and granted shortly after Sheppard had been placed in custody. The sum of $1,000 was required and was furnished in two sureties of $500 each, given by Mr. R. R. MAIN AND CROSS PETITIONS DROPPED

Abrupt Ending of Protest Trial in West Peterborough—Leary Charges Thrown Out and Petitioner's Lawyer Could See No Use in Continuing the Case.

The West Peterborough election protest trial is over. The petition against the return of Mr. J. R. Stratton to the House of Commons, was dropped this morning as has also been the cross-petition against Mr. J. H. Burnham. Each side is to pay its own costs.

The abrupt ending of the trial came this morning a few minutes before 12 o'clock. After their Lordships Justices McMahon and McGee had thrown out the Leary charges on the grounds that the evidence produced by the prosecution could not be relied upon, Mr. DuVernet, counsel for Mr. Burnham, arose and said that in view of the fact that their Lordships had seen fit to dismiss every one of the Leary charges and to consider the evidence of the witnesses for the petitioner as unreliable, he did not intend to press the petition further. Naturally he had brought on his strongest case first and when it had been thrown out he saw very little use in pressing the petition further. He had conferred with Mr. Watson last night and an agreement had been reached to have the case dropped if the Leary charges were dismissed by their Lordships. He did not see any use in wasting the time of the court in view of the decision that had been given.

Mr. Watson, counsel for Mr. Stratton, confirmed what Mr. DuVernet had said regarding a conference last night. In view of the fact that the petition against Mr. Stratton was to be dropped he did not intend pressing the cross-petition against Mr. Burnham. He was amicable to the arrangement to have each side pay its own costs.

The court did not go into session this morning until 10.30 o'clock. The judges were in conference in private, and there was an air of expectancy in the court room. When the court went into session Justice McMahon reviewed the evidence in connection with the charges against R. H. Leary, in which the name of Pritchard and Banks figured. Pritchard denied the charge, and there was no proof that Banks had received money. "These charges will be dismissed," His Lordship said. As to the charges in which Gates and Ashley were mentioned, His Lordship was of the opinion that both men were wholly unreliable, and their evidence could not be accepted as trustworthy. He considered that the petition was based mainly on the declaration made by Gates, for which he had been paid $50. In view of the statements made by Gates and Ashley in the witness box, and in view of this evidence being flatly contradicted by such men as Messrs. Hall, Stratton, Leary, Gordon, Hunter, McClellan and others, he could do nothing but dismiss these charges also. His Lordship did not believe the evidence that there had been a "theatre line" at the committee rooms on election day.

Justice Magee then took up the charges of Harland and Alsept, Pope, Williams and Butler, and reviewed the evidence of each man, and also the evidence bearing on each point submitted by witnesses called by the respondent's side. He went into the evidence very fully and dismissed each and all of the charges. The evidence of the defence overshadowed that of the petitioner, and left no doubt in the minds of their Lordships that the charges had not been proved.

Justice Magee scored the tactics of the respondent's side in securing affidavits from men who were to be called as witnesses. It was highly improper.

Then came the ending of the trial as described above.

INSPECTORS DETAIN VICTOR

Rome, Oct. 2.—The King and Queen were motoring from Rome to Mont Cenis Thursday, and at the Barrier were held up by the four inspectors. Both Victor Emmanuel and the Queen were masked behind heavy automobile goggles, and could not be recognized. The inspectors, searching the car, found two cameras, and as these are prohibited within the fortification zone, they confiscated them.

They began a severe questioning of the King and Queen. Emmanuel answered the questions for a time, but the guards decided to hold the auto for examination by higher officials. Then the King removed his goggles. The royal couple were released, as soon as recognized, with the King's congratulations upon their faithful performance of duty.

A note was left addressed to her parents, who live near Avonton.

HOTELKEEPERS FINED $300

Chatham, Oct. 2.—Mrs. Bechard, proprietress of the Aberdeen Hotel, and Peter Toulouse, proprietor of the Idlewilde, were each fined $300 and costs on charges of selling liquor after hours. Cleveland, O., Oct. 2.—Capt. Jas. Stone, supervising inspector of steamboats at Buffalo, rendered a decision yesterday afternoon in the collision between the steamer City of Erie and the Canadian schooner C. T. Van Straubenzie off Dunkirk at 3 o'clock last Monday morning, in which two men and a woman were drowned.

In his report, Capt. Stone finds tht the schooner's starboard, or green, light, was not burning at the time of the accident, and therefore finds in his decision that the pilot of the City of Erie, Edward S. Pickett, is blameless.

BANK ROBBER IS CAPTURED

Pittsburg, Pa., Oct. 2.—After a month's confinement in the Cambria County Jail at Ebensburg, a prisoner, who when arrested for riding the "blind baggage" on Pennsylvania Railroad train No. 23, gave his name as John Drumboski, confessed that his real name is Wladyslay Symansky, and that he is one of the trio of young foreigners who on July 2 held up J. A. Templeton, manager of the branch Bank of Nova Scotia at Rainy River, Ont., and escaped with nearly $10,000.

EARL GREY LAYS THE CORNER STONE OF LEGISLATIVE HALL

Alberta's Parliament Buildings Will be Beautiful Structure—Whole Province Rejoicing Over Stone-laying Ceremony at Which Thousands are Present.

Edmonton, Oct. 2.—In a flood of Alberta sunshine from a sky of brilliant azure Earl Grey in the presence of an impressive gathering of western Canada statesmen and surrounded by an imposing array of military and a great throng of an enthusiastic populace "well and truly laid" the corner-stone of Alberta's magnificent new legislative and executive buildings.

The day was just such a day of beautiful weather as that of four years and a month ago, when His Excellency officially bestowed upon the province her autonomy.

The city streets were brilliantly illuminated the night before on the occasion of the reception of Earl Grey, and a great throng of holiday-seekers from the early hours of the forenoon until the time set for the opening of the ceremonies in the afternoon, paraded the gaily-decorated thoroughfares.

In front of the Yale Hotel, where the vice-regal platform was erected, the wide street was packed with a throng of humanity. When His Excellency reappeared on the balcony the cheering broke out afresh.

Earl Grey replied briefly to the address and cheers, expressing his gratitude at receiving the address and the loyal welcome which had been accorded him by the citizens. His Excellency then reviewed the procession.

P.E.I. ELECTION CASE OVER AGENCY WAS NOT PROVED

Charlottetown, P.E.I., Oct. 2.—The counsel for the petitioner in the trial of the election petition against A. L. Fraser, M.P., Conservative for King's, announced that they had decided not to take further evidence. Although evidence had been submitted to show corrupt practices, the difficulty was to establish agency. The dismissal of the petition was, therefore, asked for. The judges stated that they could not dismiss the case, but after three hours' consideration of the evidence they found that the evidence of the extensive use of liquor and treating was admitted, but agency had not been established, though this might have been done had the case been carried further. They confirmed Mr. Fraser in his seat, but said they would report to the Speaker that there should be further enquiry.

The proceedings stopped as the result of an agreement between the parties, whereby the counter-petition against J. J. Hughes, Fraser's opponent, is to be withdrawn; also the case, against Hughes for violation of the independence of Parliament Act. Fraser is to pay the cost of the election trial.

It is understood also that the petition against Prowse, Liberal for Queen's, will be dropped.

LUMBER YARDS BURNED HEAVY LOSS AT MIDLAND

Midland, Oct. 2.—Fire, which broke out about 10.30 yesterday morning in a pile of lumber in Manley Chew's big yards at Dollartown, just outside the Midland limits, burned over 12 acres of yards and caused a loss of about $250,000, fairly well covered by insurance. About 13 million feet of lumber was destroyed.

Several employes of the mill saw the blaze when it was small, but it got ahead of them. A spark from the burner is supposed to have started it. The town fire engine, the mill pump, supplying two two-inch hose lines, and three tugs acting as fireboats were employed in fighting the flames, the hundred mill employes and scores of citizens assisting. Through their efforts the mill was saved.

The principal losers are: Manley Chew, about $30,000, to lumber, docks, transit, etc., insurance $7,500; Turner Lumber Co., Cochrane & Munns of Sudbury, E. B. Foss Co. of Bay City, Mich., and the Salvage Lumber Co.

Less than two weeks ago the lumber yards of Chew Bros., Midland, were fireswept, with loss of about $200,000.

CHINAMAN AS SUPERINTENDENT

Pittsburg, Pa., Oct. 2.—The placing of a full-blood Chinaman as superintendent of a Presbyterian Sunday school has disrupted the school.

Yee Tang, a Christianized Chinaman, succeeded Edwin Gray as superintendent, a position the letter had held for twenty-six years. Yee Tang created consternation by announcing that he would not permit the Chinese to be taught individually by young women, as had been the case for years. He grouped the Chinese in lots of six or eight, with elderly women or men teachers. The Chinese students then dropped out, there being only two in the Sunday school now, and many young women teachers, resenting the new ruling as a reflection on them, have left the church.

HAMILTON IS GROWING SLOWLY

Hamilton, Oct. 2.—The assessment returns given out yesterday came as a great shock to those who believed that the city was going ahead by leaps and bounds. The increased assessment at present taxation, will add only about $20,000 to revenue. Wards two and five dropped off in population, but ward seven showed an increase of 481, and ward one added 344. There is a decrease of 133 in the number of children between 5 and 16 years. The total assessment amounts to $41,166,758.

THE TROUBLES OF FRANCE

A despatch from France which says that the French episcopate has issued a pastoral letter attacking the public school there, mentions that the letter condemns especially co-education, saying that the "mixture of the two sexes is contrary to morality and unworthy of civilized people."

The view must seem a curious one to Canadians. We have had co-education in this country, in all our provinces, for generations. If the system has affected injuriously the morality of our people, Canadians are not aware of it.

Nor can morality be injured without injury to religion. Yet, if the members of the French episcopate were to visit the Province of Quebec, they would find in a country where co-education prevails a more devoted Catholic people than even that part of the French people who remain devout Catholics.

Possibly the Catholic Church is under more sensible leadership in Canada than in France.—Ottawa Journal.

BRITAIN'S POSITION

Lord Northcliffe's estimate of the Anglo-German situation is worthy of more than passing notice. He regards the two peoples as generally friendly. There is little dislike of England among the inhabitants of Germany, and little hostility toward Germany in England. But that proves nothing. In 1869 the German and French peoples lived amicably side by side. There was no thought of war. But all the time official Germany under direction of Bismarck was preparing to smite France. The preparations for attack went forward on an enormous scale, for the most part behind a veil of secrecy. France was taken unawares, and we know how soon the Prussian legions occupied Paris.

In the same manner official Berlin is said to be concealing its hand today. That is Lord Northcliffe's belief. "We have the official figures of the German naval programme up to 1912, which are serious enough, but we know that these figures are just as inaccurate as were the figures made public by Germany prior to the Franco-Prussian war of 1871. We know that the German press, unlike that of the United States and Great Britain, is prohibited from telling the truth about these matters. We know that at The Hague Peace Conference, Germany declined to discuss the limitation of armaments or the use of floating mines at sea." He might have added that Berlin has refused to consider Great Britain's overtures looking to a mutual restriction of armaments.

The second point is that Great Britain requires a strong navy as does no other nation. This because of its maritime position. It draws practically all of its food supplies from across the seas. Other nations need only small navies in comparison. Powerful fleets are essential to the existence of Great Britain and the British Empire, but not to continental land powers. Lord Northcliffe brings the lesson home to the United States by pointing to the fear of a Japanese invasion experienced by the people of the Pacific coast states. That anxiety exists in face of the fact of Japan's immense distance and the further fact that she has no coaling stations on this continent. How would Americans like it if the potential enemy were eleven hours distant, with a population one-third larger than their own, and if that potential enemy were building warships as fast as they were.—Toronto News.

Baited Lover's Lions.

Paris, Oct. 2.—A young woman committed suicide in a frightful manner here last night. Having had a quarrel with her lover, who is a lion-tamer in a theatre in which three lions are introduced, during the course of a melodrama, the woman went behind the scenes and thrust her arm into the cage. The animals were wild with rage, and with a few blows of their claws, tore her head and breast to pieces.

Chinese Smuggling at Windsor.

Toledo, Oct. 1.—That Toledo has been a distributing point, and that scores of Chinese have been spirited into this country from Canada by the way of Windsor and Detroit in the last two months, is the opinion of Immigration Inspectors Miller and Fluckey here yesterday. Ford, who is a negro, pleaded that his wife committed suicide in a manner designed to cast suspicion upon him.

THE LOCAL OPTION MOVEMENT IN THE CITY

The Matter Appearing in This Department is Furnished by the Peterboroug Temperance and Moral Reform League Which Has Arranged for its Publication.

PETERBORO' LOCAL OPTIONISTS READY FOR THE FRAY

The local option campaign in Peterborough is nicely started. The temperance workers are well organized and enthusiastic. The supporters of the open bar are not showing their head. They are, it is understood, going to conduct a "quiet campaign." Should they decide to come out in the open it would make the contest more interesting, as it would then be possible to debate the questions at issue on their merits.

During the past three months, local option supporters have been gathering information for use in the campaign this fall. The best methods of organizing their forces have been studied. Plans for the prosecution of the work in hand have been laid with care.

Several well-attended and enthusiastic meetings of the temperance workers have been held in their rooms, 173 Simcoe street, during the past three weeks. Organization has been practically completed on the most approved lines.

There is a general committee, composed of leading citizens, which will have charge of the whole campaign on the temperance side. Citizens who would like to identify themselves with the movement are invited to put themselves in touch with this committee through the secretary, Mr. A. B. Cunningham. There is an executive committee which will work under the direction of the general committee. The executive committee is composed, for the most part, of the chairmen of various sub-committees. These sub-committees will handle matters relating to finances, the press meetings, advertising, the organizing of the voters, etc. These sub-committees are each working along definite lines. They are busy drafting their basis of procedure.

A Great Advantage

The temperance workers have a great advantage in the present campaign. They have scores of able supporters who are willing, anxious and proud to give their services for nothing for the cause of temperance. This advantage will be used to the utmost during the next three months as an effort will be made to find work for all volunteer assistance, no matter how numerous they may be.

Able Speakers Coming

While the "meetings" committee have not perfected their plans, arrangements are being made for the holding of a series of meetings which will be addressed by well known men from local option centres in Ontario and possibly from the States as well. Any person who has any serious doubts about the probable success of local option in Peterborough will be given every opportunity to make their doubts known early, so that they can be effectively answered. Care will be taken to guard against unfair methods to stampede the voters a day or two before the election, experience having shown that such means as the sending out of alarming and untruthful statements concerning the alleged failure of local option at other centres have often been employed.

The State of the Finances

It is recognized that considerable money will be needed to finance the campaign, and already a number of generous contributions have been received, as well as some rather touching small ones. A farmer, who stated that he lived some 20 miles from Peterborough, in a log house, recently called at the office and made a contribution to help the good cause. A poor woman, whose husband drinks, gave [illegible]. Several church organizations have given liberal financial assistance. Should any persons desire to contribute to the funds, they can do so through the treasurer, Mr. A. Brown, Water street. Small, as well as large donations, are invited.

Committee meetings will be held every week, and sometimes several times a week, from now until after the contest is over. Further announcements about the progress of the work will be made in these columns from time to time.

THE EXPERIENCE OF OTHER CITIES

"Can local option be enforced successfully in a city the size of Peterborough?" is asked occasionally. In order that all doubts on this score might be set at rest, the press committee wrote recently to the mayors of some 50 cities in the United States, all of which are larger than Peterborough, and which have been under local option for some time. They were asked if local option was a success with them. A large number have replied. A few state that a little drinking is still being done on the sly. They practically all claim, however, that the effect of local option has been to reduce drunkenness and crime of all sorts and to improve business conditions. A number of these letters will be published. The following is a copy of the letter from Mayor Wm. Green, of Topeka, Kansas. He writes:—"The prohibitory law in Topeka works splendidly, and it works easily. Last winter the state legislature enacted a new law prohibiting absolutely the sale of intoxicating liquors. Previous to that the law permitted its sale by druggists under prescribed conditions. While violation and prosecutions were frequent under the old law, it was well enforced, and was, in a measure, a success. All laws are violated, more or less, governed largely by the sentiment of the people, the opportunities of the law, the incentive for its violation."

"The new law, being more drastic, gives less opportunity, and under it, it is easier to convict, consequently violations are less frequent. The sale of liquor cannot be absolutely prohibited no more than any other crime, but Topeka and all other cities in Kansas, to-day are living proofs that the law prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors can be, and is, as well enforced as any other law against crime."

"The sentiment in favor of prohibition in Kansas grows as the law becomes more efficient and is more vigorously enforced. Cities which a few years ago were opposed to its enforcement and whose officials would not enforce it until compelled to by state law, are now in favor of enforcement."

"If the question of prohibition was re-submitted to the voters of Kansas to-day, I do not believe that ten per cent. (10 per cent.) of them would vote to reinstate the saloon. Yes, prohibition is a success not only in Topeka, but in every town, city and county in Kansas."

THE CATHOLIC TOTAL ABSTINENCE UNION

The Peterborough Total Abstinence Society was represented during the summer, at the annual convention of the Catholic Total Abstinence Union of the United States, which was held in Chicago. This is probably the strongest temperance organization on the continent. It has over 100,000 members.

A feature was an immense procession with bands, automobiles and floats. It was reviewed by Rt. Rev. P. P. Rhode, assistant Bishop of Chicago.

One of the most stirring addresses at a mass meeting attended by more than three thousand people was that of Rt. Rev. J. F. Regis Canevin, Bishop of Pittsburg, and some of his declarations, which were received with great enthusiasm, were vehement denunciations of the bar-room system. Here are some samples:

"The Catholic church is unalterably opposed to the liquor industry, and the Sunday saloon looms up as one of the most menacing evils with which the American citizen is confronted. The saloon never elevated any man, but rather its influence for years has tended to drag men down, and there is no man in this country who is better for the open Sunday saloon. Hundreds of thousands of poor wretches have been sacrificed upon the altar of liquor, and the time for a determined fight against the liquor industry has come.

"The saloon stands for nothing good in any community. The saloon has never brought a blessing to a city, to a home or upon an individual.

"The saloon is the foe of the home and the enemy of the church.

"Close up the saloon on Sunday and every other day of the week."

ABOUT BREWERIES

There seems to be prevalent in some places an idea that brewers may sell liquor to a local option district. It is true that a brewer whose brewery is in a local option municipality, may make beer therein, and may have a brewer's license, but the law governing a issue of that license contains the following clause:

"Provided, however, that no such sale shall be made either directly or indirectly within any municipality in which a by-law passed under subsection 1 of section 141 of the Liquor License Act is in force."

It is true that a brewer's warehouse license authorizes the sale of beer, but the government does not issue such license in local option municipalities, and the law governing them contains the following clause:—

"Nor shall any beers or spirits be sold or delivered by or on behalf of any holder of a Brewer's Warehouse License within any municipality in which a by-law passed under subsection 1 of section 141 is in force."

IT WORKS IN TWEED

The North Hastings Review publishes the following extract from a letter received from Dr. A. R. Farrell, of the town of Tweed, in which a local option by-law is in force:—

"If any one asks you how local option has done for Tweed, tell them it has almost entirely cleared out drunks. Last December, in one day, I counted 18 and I was not looking for them. Since May 1st I have been hunting and I only saw three in nearly three months, and they came from Stoco and Actinolite. The town is not so busy as it was four or five years ago, neither is Madoc. In the individual family I can show you improvement in at least twenty cases since May 1st. It has not hurt business generally, it has helped certain families very much. That is what some of those opposed to the measure say."

Be a Charming Woman

You never saw a beautiful woman who didn't have beautiful hair. The charms of a beautiful woman lie in her hair. Many women do not realise the attractions they possess because they do not give proper attention to the care of the hair.

The women of the "400" are famed for their beauty, not because their facial features are superior to those of other women, but because they know how to keep young by supplying vigor, lustre, and strength to the hair.

Up to a few years ago Parisian Sage could hardly be obtained in America. But now this delightful hair restorer can be had in every town in America. W. Madill, druggist, Peterborough, sells it for 50 cents a bottle, and guarantees it to grow beautiful luxuriant hair; to turn dull, lifeless hair into lustrous hair; to stop falling hair; to stop itching of the scalp. Understand, W. Madill will give you your money back if it fails.

GOOD PROGRESS IS BEING MADE

On Trenton Section of the Trent Canal

A despatch from Trenton says:—Good progress is being made in the work on the Trent Canal in the vicinity of this town. Lock No. 2 is completed, and all forces are now at work on dams Nos. 2 and 3, and lock 3. This fall will see the completion of the two locks and the excavation of the canal below the G.T.R. tracks. Next year work will be continued on dam one and lock one. It is stated that the steam shovel here has the record for America, having taken out 38,000 to 40,000 yards of rock a month.

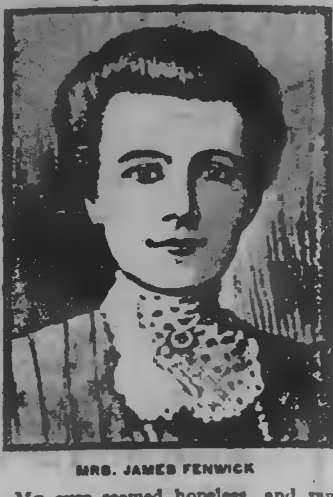
Lock No. 2 was completed a fortnight ago, and is regarded as a fine piece of work. The dimensions are 82 x 175 feet, with a depth of nine feet over the sills. The cement work on this lock started May 26th, since which time 7,000 yards of cement have been put in. This is probably one of the most rapidly constructed locks on the canal, and is a record in cement construction.

At Glen Miller there is quite a transformation. A new section has been added to the bridge, and two rest piers, two pivot piers and half a mile of retaining wall built. Last week the cement work on lock 3 was started. It is expected that it will be completed in December. Two-thirds of dam 3 is finished. There will be nine piers and nine sluices in No. 3 dam.

HER DEATH WAS HOURLY EXPECTED

Enterprise, Ont., Oct. 1st, 1908.

"For seven years I suffered with what physicians called a "Water Tumor." I could neither sit, stand, nor lie down. Hypodermics of morphia had to be given me to ease the pain.



MRS. JAMES FENWICK

My cure seemed hopeless, and my friends hourly expected my death. I was so bad that I wanted to die, and it was during one of these very bad spells that a family friend brought a box of "Fruit-a-tives" to the house. After much persuasion I commenced to take them, but I was so bad that it was only when I had taken nearly two boxes that I commenced to experience relief. I kept up the treatment, however, and after taking five boxes I was cured, and when I appeared on the street my friends said. 'The dead has come to life,' and this seemed literally true, because I certainly was at death's door."

(Signed) MRS. JAMES FENWICK.

"Fruit-a-tives" are sold by all dealers at 50c a box—6 for $2.50, or trial box, 25c, or sent post-paid on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

FOR THE LADY WHO CALLS

The lady who has a large circle of acquaintances always finds it a difficult matter to keep track of the reception days of her friends and often mistakes are made, that might have been avoided if care were taken to make a record of such days. And then there are the teas, at homes, and parties to be remembered too and when a hostess is planning an affair, she is always worried lest she overlook some one who has extended hospitality to her some time previous. To avoid these mistakes, a social register has been issued by the Review, that will be a boon to the busy lady. There are pages for each day of the month on which the record of the calls received and paid with the address of the visitor appear, then there are pages for social engagements, visits paid, addresses and memoranda, all of which prove very valuable data to have. These books are on sale at all the book stores and at the Review Office for 50 cents and there has already been a good demand for them.

WEDDING BELLS

LOGAN—PAGE.

Thursday evening at seven o'clock at the residence of Mr. Joseph Giles at "Fairview" North Monaghan, a very pretty wedding was celebrated, when Miss Verna Page, eldest daughter of Mr. Edgar Page, of Peterborough, was united in marriage to Mr. John Logan, son of John S. Logan, Park street. The bride was prettily attired in a cream princess gown and carried a bouquet of white roses, and was supported by her father.

The wedding ceremony was performed by the Rev. J. G. Potter, B. A., of St. Andrew's church. The young couple were unattended.

After the ceremony the company sat down to a wedding breakfast. Only the intimate relatives were invited.

The young couple will reside in Peterborough. The wedding presents were numerous and costly and testified to the esteem in which the young couple are held.

A BURGLAR'S ADVICE

Where to Keep a Revolver at Night and How to Use It.

I take my pen in hand to write you an answer to the mug that signs his name "Victim" what says that a bolt on your bedroom door nights will make you safe from burglars coming into the room and shooting your head off and to tell him the only way to be safe from harm by burglars is to lay still when they tells you to and after they has gone to collect from the burglary insurance company.

Your man "Victim" is a dull guy if he thinks a bolt will stop any one that knows his trade, because we always puts a gimlet hole through the panel right back of the bolt and slides it back quiet and easy just the same way as we puts holes through the panel back of dead latches on outside doors, because there ain't nothing will stop a man that knows the trade only a steel door with an iron crossbar back of it and electric contacts all round.

What's more is that any man that sleeps with a pistol under his pillow is a chump, because that's where we always feels for it the first thing and gets it before proceeding to the business of the evening, the right place to keep a pistol being in the front hall hanging on a nail where you ain't liable to do no damage to the bedroom walls and furniture with it, besides its being bad for nervous people to wake up in the night and feel for a pistol that ain't there no more.

If a guy wants to take a pistol to bed with him and thinks he's got nerve enough to use it the proper place for it is not under the pillow, because that's where we always look for it, but it's at the foot of the bed, about where you can stretch out with your toes so that when you wake up and feel the burglar's hand searching under your pillow you can lay still till he moves over to the bureau, when you will have plenty of time to get hold of your gun with your toes and pull it up gentle and slow like you was still fast asleep till you get your grip on it and then if you are quick enough to make the burglar shoot in the smoke all right, but if you ain't got the nerve for the job you'd better not have no guns around, because he will shoot next.

Having been in the bolt slipping and pistol collecting business for nine years, I guess I know the game, and if I knowed where your mug "Victim" lives I would just come up some evening and pinch his gun for him to show him his bolt is no good.—Sloppy Mike in New York Sun.

Vain to Rise Early.

There is a story told of how one morning Mr. Gladstone's granddaughter, Miss Dorothy Drew, refused to get up. When all other means had failed to coax her out of bed Mr. Gladstone was called. "Why don't you get up, my child?" he asked. "Why, grandfather, didn't you tell me to do what the Bible says?" "Yes, certainly." "Well, it disapproves of early rising; says it's waste of time."

The good old man knew his Bible better than most men, but he was not equal to Dorothy. For once in his life he was nonplused. "You listen, then," went on Dorothy, in reply to his exclamation, and, turning up her Bible, she read the second verse of the One Hundred and Twenty-seventh Psalm, laying great emphasis on the first words, "It is vain for you to rise up early."

In the future, should a fire break out at this place, the fact of the stand being at this place will mean that five streams of hose will be available from the engine, besides the present fire protection of the buildings.

SPLENDID SOCIAL AT THE Y.W.C.A.

Large Number of Young People Attended — A Pleasing Programme

The beautiful drawing rooms of the Y.W.C.A. were filled to overflowing last night when a very pleasing and successful concert and reception was given by the Board members and the friends of the association.

Great jardiniers filled with asters and selvia brightened every room. A very pleasing and excellent programme was rendered through the kindness of Mrs. Bissell, Mrs. Dickson Hall, Misses Edna Pringle, Choate, Burnett and Hill. Every number was greatly appreciated and enjoyed. Mr. Mowat ably presided.

The willingness with which everyone gave their services and the large attendance and interest manifested amply repaid the social and musical committee for the pains taken in arranging for the evening.

After the national anthem had been sung everyone enjoyed a delicious cup of coffee served with home-made cake.

To-morrow afternoon at 4.15 a short service will be held in the association. This is the Bible study department rally and an earnest invitation is given to all to attend.

The new labor temple will be opened in New Westminster.

THAT WATCH OF YOURS

Is in many respects similar to a railway engine. Let an engine be run without oil or cleaning and before long it will stop dead. Upon examination it will be found that the friction and wear and tear has ruined the machinery, and it is fit only for the scrap iron heap. Likewise your watch. You put it in your pocket, and while there is a kick in it, you, in your mistaken economy, do not consult the watchmaker, and consequently rob your watch of years of good service and also much of its former accuracy. The time-keeping qualities of a good watch are maintained and often improved by timely and skilful attention. If you have been one of the neglectful ones call around and see us.

BOYS PLAYED A DANGEROUS TRICK

Placed a Rope Across the Side-Walk at Night Near Steps of the Protestant Home

A youth named Victor Thorndyke was charged at the police court this morning with having obstructed the sidewalk on Stewart street, by placing a rope across it at night, but after being given a warning not to repeat the offence, was allowed to go.

He stated that, acting on the suggestion of a number of other boys, he tied the rope across the sidewalk, a short distance from the wooden steps near the Protestant Home. The magistrate explained to him the seriousness of the offence, which might have resulted in some person being severely injured by falling over the rope.

PAID VISIT TO ST. JOHN'S CHOIR

Mr. Jas. Edmund Jones Attended Practice Thursday Evening

Mr. James Edmund Jones, who has taken such a prominent part in the new "Book of Common Praise," paid a surprise visit to St. John's choir at their practice Thursday night. Sitting at the organ he gave illustrations of how many of the new hymns should be sung, to the great pleasure of the choristers assembled. Mr. R. J. Devey, after thanking Mr. Jones for his visit, expressed the whole-hearted appreciation of St. John's choir for the new hymnal, the whole of the chants and hymns used in St. John's on Sunday last having been taken from it. It may here be noted that Mr. Jones has issued an "Annotated Edition" of the new work, which is the most interesting publication to students of hymnology, Handel's M.S.S. of the three hymns in facsimile, Bishop Heber's "Holy, Holy, Holy," and Marie Correlli's words to the twenty-third Psalm, beautifully set to music by the editor, appears with a multitude of historical notes.

GOT OFF THE CAR TOO SOON

Jury's Finding in Connection With Death of Miss Peck at Toronto

Toronto Oct. 1.—"We find that the deceased died on September 28th as the result of concussion of the brain caused by falling while getting off a moving street car at Beaty avenue and King street.

"We find that no blame can be attached to the Street Railway Company or their employees."

This was the verdict of Coroner Dr. J. M. Cotton's jury at the inquest on Miss M. E. Peck who was fatally injured on Monday night and died Tuesday morning.

Several witnesses were heard, but they all told the same story of the accident.

DIDN'T PULL BELL.

W. H. Burns, conductor of the car, said they were going west on King street.

"We had stopped at Dowling avenue to let a gentlemen off," said the witness. "Just as we got west of Beaty avenue the deceased stepped off the car."

"Did she reach for the bell?"

"No."

"What did you think she was going to do?"

"Change her position in the car. I didn't have time to do anything, as she walked right off the car."

WERE TRAVELLING SLOW.

Witness said he didn't see her touch the steps. He called to her to stop, but she had gone before he could stop her.

"Were you going fast?"

"No, we were going slow, as another car was coming round the curve."

Motorman J. E. Hayden swore the first he knew of the accident was when he got three bells to stop. When he got off the car he found deceased on the ground unconscious.

"I helped to carry her on to the verandah at 1,500 King west, just about where the accident happened," said witness.

Ernest Swallow, 99 Bedford road, was on King street, east of Beaty avenue, the night of the accident.

SAW WOMAN FALLING.

"I didn't notice anything till I saw the woman falling from the car," said he. "She appeared to be a little below the top step when I saw her. I heard her fall on her head."

"Where was the body in regard to the car?"

"It was just at the back end of the car on the road."

THINKING AND KICKING

A recent issue of the 'Creamery Journal' states that the farmers of Iowa are taking a special interest in cow testing. To quote a vigorous editorial. 'An intellectual bomb has exploded, farmers are thinking. Hundreds are kicking themselves for having so long fooled away their time and effort and money, chasing the dual-purpose nonsense phantom. Breeders of dairy cattle are simply swamped with business. Dealers in dairy utensils report whirlwind sales of scales and Babcock testers."

Farmers of Canada, are you going to let farmers of adjoining states beat you in advanced dairy thought given to cow testing, and in resultant business-like action? One main object of testing individual cows is to ascertain what difference there is between the product or profit of a good cow and a poor one. If our poorest cows were known they would quickly be discarded, because there can be no object in retaining them. The trouble is that they are not known. Often the poor ones are believed to be good. They will be detected only when records are kept. A more careful study of feeding, and some associated plan of breeding from good, pure bred sires, will work wonders in improving cows on Canadian farms. Cow testing associations should exist by the hundred, every county needs several; they were never more needed that at present. Who owns the best cow in your county?

Cylde Fitch Buried.

New York, Oct. 2.—Clyde Fitch, the playwright, who died in France, was buried yesterday in Woodlawn Cemetery. The funeral services at the Church of the Ascension, were attended by one of the largest gatherings of actors and literary and theatrical people that ever met in this city. The church was filled with flowers. Rev. Percy Stickney Grant conducted the service.

The W.M.S. of the Methodist church collected $194,613.11 last year.

NO IMPEDIMENT

An Objection to a Wedding Ceremony That Was Overruled.

A popular politician tells a story about one of his electioneering campaigns. He had arrived about noon at a certain small station. He started out after dinner for a walk about the village, on the outskirts of which he came upon a building thronged with people.

The building was a church, and a wedding was about to take place. He edged his way through the crowd until he reached a spot where he had a good view of the bride and bridegroom and the clergyman who was about to perform the ceremony.

The church was packed, with the exception of a low, dark gallery near the roof. This was apparently deserted.

The minister proceeded with the ceremony until he came to the point where custom required him to pause and inquire if there was any one present who knew any reason why the couple should not be made husband and wife. A hush fell upon the assemblage, and every one waited in breathless suspense. Something of a sensation was caused when a voice came from the upper gallery, saying:

"Yes, I do."

All eyes were turned to the gallery, where, seated all alone in the gloom, barely discernible, was a meek looking little man, with a haggard face and disheveled hair. After the clergyman had recovered from his surprise he said sternly, "State your reason, sir!"

The suspense was turned to merriment by the little man's reply:

"I want the girl myself," he said.—London Tit-Bits.

To Rest Your Eyes.

The moment you are instinctively inclined to rub the eyes that moment cease to use them. Also it is time to give your eyes a rest when you become sensible of an effort to distinguish. Cold water is about the safest application for inflamed eyes. Never sleep so that on awakening the eyes shall open on the light of a window. Never read or sew directly in front of the light of a window, the better light being that that comes from above or obliquely or over the left shoulder. Too much light is an evil, just as is scant light. It creates a glare that pains and confuses the sight.

The Old Style.

No, this is not Esperanto:

Koom oontaw thes yelanoo sands
And then taak hands;
Koertsid hwen ooo haav and kist
The wayld waavs hwist.

Noe is it the song of a boy scout who is imitating the bellow of the hedgehog and at the same time whistling between his teeth. No; it is Shakespeare's lyric, "Come unto these yellow sands," etc., as rewritten after the Elizabethan style.—London Globe.

MAIN AND CROSS PETITIONS DROPPED

YESTERDAY AFTERNOON.

Hugh Darke said he knew a man by the name of Harry Butler. I was asked if I knew him by Mr. Glover. Percy Cassels told me his name. I said to myself that this is the man Mr. Glover is looking for. I took him up to the Examiner office. Mr. Davidson was there. Mr. Glover was not in. Mr. Davidson took a paper containing a number of charges from his pocket against Mr. Butler. He said there was no truth in them. I was in the committee rooms on election day in the afternoon. I went to see Mr. R. R. Hall. Mr. Hall and Mr. Stratton were in the corner room. I didn't see Mr. Leary to my knowledge all day.

To Mr. DuVernet.—I got declarations for 9 out of the 11 charges against me. I got the declarations without any instructions from anyone. I told Mr. Glover I was going to get them.

"Didn't you want to get a declaration from Butler?"

"He didn't sign one. He said there was nothing in it."

"You were only once in the committee rooms?"

"I won't swear to it. I have only a recollection of being there once."

"Were there any other men besides Butler that weren't on your list you went after?"

"I won't state the number."

"You never got anything extra for it?"

"Never got anything."

"You enjoyed it?"

"I enjoyed it."

Mr. Watson.—"Was there any inducement for you to do this?"

"None whatever."

MR. GLOVER TESTIFIES.

Mr. R. M. Glover said he saw Chas. Williams on Charlotte street some time after the election. Mr. Walter Davidson was with him. We called at his house. He wasn't there. We found him up the street a bit. We met him on the railway track. I was driving. Mr. Davidson said, "You are charged, Mr. Williams, with receiving money from Mr. Leary and myself." He said there was nothing in it. He wasn't asked to sign any declaration. He wasn't asked to make any declaration. He wasn't asked to go into the buggy. He wasn't asked to go anywhere. I was not at the central committee rooms on election day.

To Mr. DuVernet—I am business manager of the Examiner. There were 96 charges against me. I may possibly have tried to get some declarations. I didn't consult my lawyers about getting the declarations. I talked about it to Mr. Davidson. We were in pretty nearly the same boat. I didn't ask Butler for one.

"But he was positive I didn't want a declaration from him."

"Because he was positive you didn't want a declaration." When they were positive you needn't want one. Does this apply to them all?"

"No."

"How many did you get declarations from?"

"I can't say?"

"A hundred?"

"I can't swear to the number."

Mr. Glover said Ashley wanted money, he understood. He didn't hear anything about it himself. Mr. Davidson told him Ashley wanted money.

SAW LEARY THERE.

Called to give evidence in rebuttal of the charges against Mr. Leary Mr. T. M. Hunter, of North Monaghan, said he was deputy returning officer at May's school house on October 26th election day. Mr. Leary came there in the evening. I didn't pay much attention to how long he stayed. He came between four and five o'clock.

To Mr. DuVernet—I didn't remember anybody else, but Mr. Leary outside the voters coming into the polling place. In a general conversation with Mr. Hunter Mr. Leary had mentioned he had been at May's between 4 and 5 in the afternoon on the day of the election.

Mr. Watson said he would call half a dozen other witnesses who were at the rooms on the afternoon of the election, but he said he hesitated to do so.

Justice McMahon—Where is Alfred Kingscote?

It was three o'clock then and Kingscote was out delivering the mail and would not be in till 4 o'clock, it was stated.

Mr. A. H. Stratton—I was in the several committee rooms on election day. I was there in the afternoon. Mr. Leary went to North Monaghan on election day at a quarter to four. I didn't see him till after five o'clock. I didn't see him leave the committee rooms. I spoke to Morgan to take a man to the south ward and he said he couldn't be had to take Leary to Monaghan at a quarter to four o'clock. I was in both rooms on the afternoon of election day. "There was nothing of that nature whatever," said Mr. Stratton, when asked of the alleged row that was lined up before the door of the little room for the purpose of getting money. Mr. Stratton stated that it was not true. He knew of no money being paid whatever. Mr. Stratton said he saw his brother, J. R. Stratton, at the committee rooms.

Mr. DuVernet drew attention to what Mr. J. R. Stratton had said to the effect that he (J. R. Stratton) hadn't seen him in the committee rooms on the day of the election. The witness couldn't explain this. He said he saw Mr. J. R. Stratton several times.

DIDN'T SEE LEARY THERE.

Geo. H. May called on behalf of Mr. Burnham, said;—My home is near May's school house and I was there from two o'clock in the afternoon till the close of the polls. I didn't see Mr. Leary at the school house all the afternoon. No one had been to see him except the person that delivered the subpoena.

MR. DuVERNET'S SUMMING UP.

Mr. DuVernet contended that the Leary charges had been abundantly proven. In connection with proving charges of these kind it was necessary to give particulars. If the names of the witnesses were not given, then the evidence of the witness could not be given. Admittedly every declaration was obtained that could be gotten from the witnesses by the Liberal party.

"It was a series of intimidations," said Mr. DuVernet; "they went to them and said. You are in the same boat as ourselves. This is a two-year offence, and the best thing you can do is to clear yourself by making a declaration. The truth will come out at times, and as one of the witnesses, Mr. Roland Glover, admitted, whenever they came across a doubtful man they got a declaration from him."

"My learned friend has thrown out some insinuations because some of the witnesses were English. They were not to be believed, but I have yet to learn that perjury is a natural weakness of the English. Some men have gone into the box and given a straightforward, convincing story bristling with detail, and which, I venture to say, carried conviction with it to every man who heard it."

Mr. DuVernet admitted that there were discrepancies in some of the evidence, but said the witnesses weren't beneath the notice of Mr. Stratton.

The counsel for the petitioner referred to the trap that had been laid for the witnesses. Ashley told a perfectly straightforward and consistent story. They tried their best to get a declaration out of him. One of the Englishmen says he was quite decided for whom he should vote. Mr. Leary gave him money.

"My learned friend brought out circumstantial evidence that clinched the truth."

This was in the cross-examination of the witnesses just before Mr. Watson closed his case Justice McMahon had asked for Alf. Kingscote. "Is there any doubt Kingscote could be brought to court to discredit Ashley, and he wasn't called?"

"Your Lordships saw Ashley. You saw the way he gave his evidence, and I ask you to find that he told a perfectly true and consistent story. I think it must be quite plain after hearing Mr. Jordan's evidence that it is quite strong in corroboration of Alsop's."

Mr. DuVernet said the witnesses on behalf of the respondent, stated they were desirous of getting as many affidavits as they could, but didn't get some, when they were absolutely certain there was nothing in the charges.

Mr. Bartlett's evidence should be taken as the truth. He was a young man whose word was good. There was nothing against him whatever, and his veracity was undoubted.

Mr. Bartlett was one of the witnesses who swore the crowd was at the door of the little room like a theatre line, each man apparently waiting his chance to step in and get money. The whole evidence on that branch must have satisfied the court that there was money being paid in that room.

Mr. DuVernet strongly scored the conspirators for their conspiracies against the witnesses. It was not expected that Gates should be believed, but other witnesses should.

"What difference does it make when Mr. Leary left the town. He was there during the afternoon. Morgan's statement was quite different from Leary's in regard to leaving the committee rooms for May's.

"I venture to say," said Mr. DuVernet, in conclusion, "that clearer, more convincing evidence was never given in an election trial of this character."

MR. WATSON'S ADDRESS.

Mr. Watson used strong language in referring to the charges against Mr. Stratton by the petitioner. The methods employed were contemptible, he said, and on this ground Mr. Watson tried to show that the Liberals were justified in securing declarations. It was a man's right and duty, he said, to protect his name in the city where he resided. Mr. Watson made a vitriolic attack on Gates, whom he characterized as one of the lowest specimens of degenerate humanity, and it was almost a disgrace to the court to refer to his name or, to his evidence.

Mr. Watson drew attention to the alibi, which he considered had been proved in connection with Leary.

"I'm not so sure an alibi has been established," said His Lordship Justice Magee, "and you need not refer at length to that point."

AFTER SIX YEARS OF INDIGESTION

Dr. William's Pink Pills Made a Permanent Cure

There are many medicines that will relieve indigestion for a time—there are few that will make a permanent cure. But there is one medicine that is a sure cure—that medicine is Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They have cured thousands of cases—many of them of years standing. Cases like that of Mr. John E. Seale, of Montreal, Que., after many other medicines have been tried and found worthless. Mr. Seale says;—"For nearly six years I suffered with indigestion. During all that time I was constantly taking medicine for the trouble, but never got more than temporary relief. Finally I decided to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and after using them for some time the trouble disappeared and I am now able to eat heartily without the least trace of the suffering I formerly endured. I can, from my own experience, strongly recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills as a permanent cure for indigestion."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People are good for every disease that good blood is good for, simply because they make good blood—that is why they cure rheumatism heart palpitation, indigestion, neuralgia, St. Vitus' dance, and the ailments of girlhood and womanhood. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People are sold by all medicine dealers or direct by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50, from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

THE YOUNGER SET

Author of
"The Fighting Chance."

She had known Alixe always, and she had seen her develop from a talented, restless, erratic, emotional girl, easily moved to generosity, into an impulsive woman, reckless to the point of ruthlessness when ennui and unhappiness stampeded her, a woman not deliberately selfish, not wittingly immoral, for she lacked the passion which her emotion was sometimes mistaken for, and she was kind by instinct.

Sufficiently intelligent to suffer from the lack of it in others, cultured to the point of recognizing culture, her dangerous unsoundness lay in her utter lack of mental stamina when conditions became unpleasant beyond her will, not her ability to endure them.

The consequences of her own errors she refused to be burdened with. To escape somehow was her paramount impulse, and she always tried to—had always attempted it even in school days—and further back when Nina first remembered her as a thin, eager, restless little girl scampering from one scrape into another at full speed. Even in those days there were moments when Nina believed her to be actually irrational, but there was every reason not to say so to the heedless scatterbrain whose father in the prime of life sat all day in his room, his faded eyes fixed wistfully on the childish toys which his attendant brought to him from his daughter's nursery.

All this Nina was remembering, and again she wondered bitterly at Alixe's treatment of her brother and what explanation there could ever be for it—except one.

Lately, too, Alixe had scarcely been at pains to conceal her contempt for her husband, if what Rosamund related was true. It was only one more headlong scrape, this second marriage, and Nina knew Alixe well enough to expect the usual stampede toward that gay phantom which was always beckoning onward to promised happiness, that goal of heart's desire already lying so far behind her, and farther still, for every step her little flying feet were taking in the oldest, the vainest, the most hopeless, chase in the world—the headlong hunt for happiness.

And if that blind hunt should lead once more toward Selwyn? Suppose, freed from Ruthven, she turned in her tracks and threw herself and her youthful unhappiness straight at the man who had not yet destroyed the picture that Nina found when she visited her brother's rooms with the desire to be good to him with rocking chairs.

Not that she really believed or feared that Philip would consider such an impossible reconciliation; pride and a sense of the absurd must always check any such weird caprice of her brother's conscience, and yet—and yet other amazing and mismated couples had done it—had been reunited.

And Nina was mightily troubled, for Alixe's capacity for mischief was boundless, and that she in some manner had already succeeded in stirring up Philip was a rumor that persisted and would not be annihilated.

To inform a man frankly that a young girl is a little in love with him is one of the oldest, simplest and easiest methods of interesting that man unless he happen to be in love with somebody else. And Nina had taken her chances that the picture of Alixe was already too unimportant for the ceremony of incineration. Besides, what she had ventured to say to him was her belief. The child appeared to be utterly absorbed in her increasing intimacy with Selwyn.

Love was not there. Nina understood that. But its germ was—still dormant, but bedded deliciously in congenial soil—the living germ in all its latent promise, ready to swell with the first sudden heart beat, quicken with the first quickening of the pulse, unfold into perfect symmetry if ever the warm, even current in the veins grew swift and hot under the first searching whisper of truth.

Chapter 14

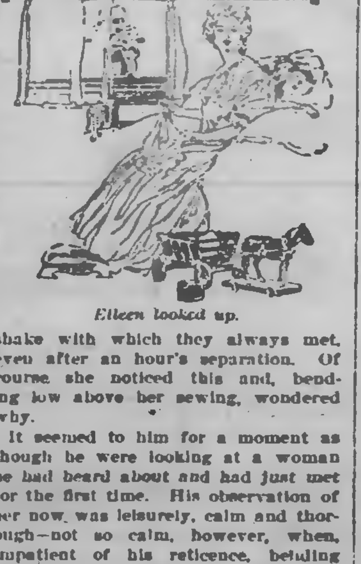
EILEEN, sewing by the nursery window, looked up. Her little Alsatian maid, cross legged on the floor at her feet, sewing away diligently, also looked up, then scrambled to her feet as Selwyn halted on the threshold of the room.

"Why, how odd you look!" said Eileen, laughing. "Come in, please. Susanne and I are only mending some of our summer things. Were you in search of the children? Don't say so if you were, because I'm quite happy in believing that you knew I was here. Did you?"

"Where are the children?" he asked.

"In the park, my very rude friend. You will find them on the mall if you start at once."

He hesitated, but finally seated himself, omitting the little formal handshake with which they always met, even after an hour's separation. Of course she noticed this and, bending low above her sewing, wondered why.



Eileen looked up.

It seemed to him for a moment as though he were looking at a woman he had heard about and had just met for the first time. His observation of her now was leisurely, calm and thorough—not so calm, however, when, impatient of his reticence, bending there over her work, she raised her dark blue eyes to his, her head remaining lowered. The sweet, silent inspection lasted but a moment. Then she resumed her stitches, aware that something in him had changed since she last had seen him. But she merely smiled quietly to herself, confident of his unaltered devotion in spite of the strangely hard and unresponsive gaze that had uneasily evaded hers.

As her white fingers flew with the glimmering needle she reflected on conditions as she had left them a week ago. A week ago between him and her the most perfect of understandings existed, and the consciousness of it she had carried with her every moment in the country—amid the icy tumble of the surf, on long, vigorous walks over the greening hills where wild moorland winds whipped like a million fairy switches till the young blood fairly sang, pouring through her veins.

Since that—some time within the week—something evidently had happened to him here in the city while she had been away. What?

As she bent above the fine linen garment on her knee, needle flying, a sudden memory stirred coldly—the recollection of her ride with Rosamund—and instinctively her clear eyes flew open, and she raised her head, turning directly toward him a disturbed gaze he did not this time evade.

In silence their regard lingered; then, satisfied, she smiled again, saying, "Have I been away so long that we must begin all over, Captain Selwyn?"

"Begin what, Eileen?"

"To remember that the silence of selfish preoccupation is a privilege I have not accorded you?"

"I didn't mean to be preoccupied."

"Oh, worse and worse!" She shook her head and began to thread the needle. "I see that my week's absence has not been very good for you. I knew it the moment you came in with all that guilty, absentminded effrontery which I have forbidden."

He colored up as he took her hand in his. Then they both laughed at the very vigorous shake.

"What a horribly unfriendly creature you can be," said Eileen. "Never a greeting, never even a formal expression of pleasure at my return."

"You have not returned," he said, smiling. "You have been with me every moment, Eileen."

"What a pretty tribute!" she exclaimed. "I am beginning to recognise traces of my training after all."

When the children came in they left the nursery together and descended the stairs to the library. Austin had just come in, and he looked up from his solitary cup of tea as they entered.

"Hello, youngsters! What conspiracy are you up to now? I suppose you sniffed the tea and have come to deprive me. By the way, Phil, I hear that you've sprung the trap on those Slowitha people."

"Neergard has, I believe."

"Well, isn't it all one?"

"No, it is not," retorted Selwyn so bluntly that Eileen turned from the window at a sound in his voice which she had never before heard.

"Oh!" Austin stared over his suspended teacup, then drained it. "Trouble with our friend Julius?" he inquired.

"No trouble. I merely severed my connection with him."

"Ah! When?"

"This morning."

"In that case," said Austin, laughing, "I've a job for you."

"No, old fellow, and thank you with all my heart. I've half made up my mind to live on my income for awhile and take up that chaosite matter again."

"And blow yourself to smithereens! Why spatter nature thus?"

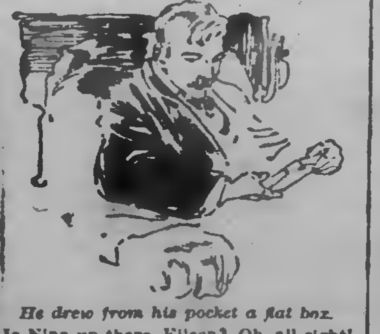
"No fear," said Selwyn, laughing. "And if it promises anything I may come to you for advice on how to start it commercially."

"If it doesn't start you heavenward you shall have my advice from a safe distance. I'll telegraph it," said Austin. "But, if it's not personal, why on earth have you shaken Neergard?"

And Selwyn answered simply: "I don't like him. That is the reason, Austin."

The children from the head of the stairs were now shouting demands for their father, and Austin rose, pretending to grumble.

"Those confounded kids! A man is never permitted a moment to himself. Is Nina up there, Eileen? Oh, all right! Excuses, etc. I'll be back pretty soon. You'll stay to dine, Phil?"



He drew from his pocket a flat box.

"I don't think so."

"Yes, he will stay," said Eileen calmly.

And when Austin had gone she walked swiftly over to where Selwyn was standing and looked him directly in the eyes.

"Is all well with Gerald?"

"Y-yes, I suppose so."

"Is he still with Neergard & Co.?"

"Yes, Eileen."

"And you don't like Mr. Neergard?"

"N-no."

"Then Gerald must not remain."

He said very quietly: "Eileen, Gerald no longer takes me into his confidence. I am afraid—I know, in fact—that I have little influence with him now. I am sorry. It hurts, but your brother is his own master, and he is at liberty to choose his own friends and his own business policy. I cannot influence him. I have learned that thoroughly. Better that I retain what real friendship he has left for me than destroy it by any attempt, however gentle, to interfere in his affairs."

She stood before him, straight, slender, her face grave and troubled.

"I cannot understand," she said, "how he could refuse to listen to a man like you."

"A man like me, Eileen? Well, if I were worth listening to no doubt he'd listen. But the fact remains that I have not been able to hold his interest."

"Don't give him up," she said, still looking straight into his eyes. "If you care for me, don't give him up."

"Care for you, Eileen! You know I do."

"Yes, I know it. So you will not give up Gerald, will you? He is—is only a boy. You know that. You know he has been—perhaps—indiscreet. But Gerald is only a boy. Stand by him, Captain Selwyn, because Austin does not know how to manage him—really he doesn't. There has been another unpleasant scene between them. Gerald told me."

"Did he tell you why, Eileen?"

"Yes. He told me that he had played cards for money and he was in debt. I know that sounds almost disgraceful, but is not his need of help all the greater?"

Selwyn's eyes suddenly narrowed. "Did you help him out this time?"

"I—I—how do you mean, Captain Selwyn?" But the splendid color in her face confirmed his [illegible] she had used her own [illegible] to help her brother pay the gambling debt, and he turned away his eyes angry and silent.

"Yes," she said under her breath, "I did aid him. What of it? Could I refuse?"

"I know. Don't aid him again—that way."

She stared. "You mean"—

"Send him to me, child. I understand such matters. I—that is"— And in sudden exasperation inexplicable, for the moment, to them both: "Don't touch such matters again! They soil, I tell you. I will not have Gerald go to you about such things!"

"My own brother! What do you mean?"

"I mean that, brother or not, he shall not bring such matters near you!"

"Am I to count for nothing, then, when Gerald is in trouble?" she demanded, flushing up.

"Count! Count!" he repeated impatiently. "Of course you count! Good heavens! It's women like you who count, and no others—not one single other sort is of the slightest consequence in the world or to it."

She had turned a little pale under his vehemence, watching him out of wide and beautiful eyes.

What she understood, how much of his incoherence she was able to translate, is a question, but in his eyes and voice there was something simpler to divine, and she stood very still while his roused emotions swept her till her heart leaped up and every vein in her ran fiery pride.

"I am—overwhelmed. I did not consider that I counted—so vitally—in the scheme of things. But I must try to if you believe all this of me, only you must teach me how to count for something in the world. Will you?"

"Teach you, Eileen. What winning mockery! I teach you? Well, then, I teach you this—that a man's blunder is best healed by a man's sympathy. I will stand by Gerald as long as he will let me do so, not alone for your sake nor only for his, but for my own. I promise you that. Are you contented?"

"Yes."

She slowly raised one hand, laying it fearlessly in both of his.

"He is all I have left," she said. "You know that."

"I know, child."

"Then, thank you, Captain Selwyn."

"No; I thank you for giving me this charge. It means that a man must raise his own standard of living before he can accept such responsibility. You endow me with all that a man ought to be, and my task is doubled, for it is not only Gerald, but I myself, who require surveillance."

He looked up, smilingly serious. "Such women as you alone can fit your brother and me for an endless guard duty over the white standard you have planted on the outer walls of the world."

"You say things to me sometimes"—she faltered, "that almost hurt with the pleasure they give."

"Did that give you pleasure?"

"Y-yes; the surprise of it was almost too—too keen. I wish you would not—but I am glad you did. You see"—dropping into a great velvet chair—"having been of no serious consequence to anybody for so many years—to be told suddenly that I—that I count so vitally with men—a man like you!"

She sank back, drew one small hand across her eyes and rested a moment; then, leaning forward, she set her elbow on one knee and bracketed her chin between forefinger and thumb.

"I've not had you to talk to for a whole week," she said, "and you'll let me, won't you? I can't help it anyway, because as soon as I see you—crack! a million thoughts wake up in me and clipper-clapper goes my tongue. You are very good for me. You are so thoroughly satisfactory except when your eyes narrow in that dreadful, faraway gaze which I've forbidden, you understand. What have you done to your mustache?"

"Clipped it."

"Oh, I don't like it too short! Can you get hold of it to pull it? It's the [illegible] in perplexity [illegible] You'll be utterly [illegible] without your mus[illegible] we take up our Etruscan [illegible] when you come down to [illegible] us at Silverside?"

"Indeed we shall," he said, smiling. "Which also reminds me"—

He drew from his breast pocket a thin, flat box, turned it round and round and glanced at her, balancing it teasingly in the palm of his hand.

"Is it for me? Really? Oh, please don't be provoking! Is it really for me? Then give it to me this instant!"

He dropped the box into the pink hollow of her supplicating palms. For a moment she was very busy with the tissue paper, then said:

"Oh, it is perfectly sweet of you!" turning the small book bound in heavy Etruscan gold. "Whatever can it be?" And, rising, she opened it, stepping to the window so that she could see.

Within, the pages were closely covered with the minute, careful handwriting of her father. It was the first notebook he ever kept, and Selwyn had had it bound for her in gold.

For an instant she gazed, breathless, lips parted. Then slowly she placed the yellowed pages against her lips and, turning, looked straight at Selwyn, the splendor of her young eyes starred with tears.

Chapter 15

ALIXE RUTHVEN had not yet dared tell Selwyn that her visit to his rooms was known to her husband. She was now afraid of her husband's malice, afraid of Selwyn's opinion, afraid of herself most of all, for she understood herself well enough to realize that if conditions became intolerable the first and easiest course out of it would be the course she'd take—wherever it led, whatever it cost or whoever was involved.

In addition to her dread and excitement, she was deeply chagrined and unhappy, and, although Jack Ruthven did not again refer to the matter—indeed, appeared to have forgotten it—her alarm and humiliation remained complete, for Gerald now came and played and went as he chose, and in her disconcerted cowardice she dared not do more than plead with Gerald in secret until she began to find the emotion consequent upon such intimacy unsafe for them both.

Neergard, too, was becoming a familiar figure in her drawing room, and, though at first she detested him, his patience and unfailing good spirits and his unconcealed admiration for her softened her manner toward him to the point of toleration.

And Neergard, from his equivocal footing in the house of Ruthven, obtained another no less precarious in the house of Fane—all in the beginning on a purely gaming basis. However, Gerald had already proposed him for the Stuyvesant and Proscenium clubs, and, furthermore, a stormy discussion was now in progress among the members of the famous Slowitha over an amazing proposition from their treasurer, Jack Ruthven.

This proposal was nothing less than to admit Neergard to membership in that wealthy and exclusive country club as a choice of the lesser evil, for it appeared, according to Ruthven, that Neergard, if admitted, was willing to restore to the club free of rent the thousands of acres vitally necessary to the club's existence as a game preserve, merely retaining the title to these lands for himself.

Draymore was incensed at the proposal, Harmon, Orchil and Fane were disgustedly noncommittal, but Phoenix Mottly was perhaps the angriest man on Long Island.

HOME FROM MINING CLAIMS IN NORTHERN ONTARIO

Mr. L. O'Connor Back to City After an Absence Since Last May—Sailor From "Stork" Almost Disfigured by Ravages of the Black Flies.

After an absence since last May, Mr. L. O'Connor has returned to the city from the northern province. During the first part of the summer Mr. O'Connor was up in the Abitibbi district and surrounding country, but since August has been at Gillies Limit, Temagami Reserve. In company with Messrs. Bolton Kane, of Toronto, and George LeGros, of Northern Ontario, he has been prospecting for gold and silver on five claims that the three have staked out there, and Mr. O'Connor states that their efforts have been attended with most encouraging success. The claims are opposite the rich Doria and are on the same vein of rock. Mr. O'Connor also has claims in the rich Nipissing District four miles north of the "height of land."

While he was away Mr. O'Connor covered a great deal of ground in the northern part of the province, and became pretty familiar with that part of the country. He had many interesting experiences.

While he was in the Abitibbi district Mr. O'Connor saw one of the sailors of the crew of the shipwrecked "Stork," the boat which went on the rocks in the Hudson Straits, three days after the sailor had been picked up after roaming in the woods with nothing to eat except the grass and leaves he got hold of while wandering. It was not immediately after the wreck that Mr. O'Connor saw him, however, but the following June, and he had been lost in making a portage, along with the others of the crew and some Indians. This was after the crew had been kept all winter at Moose Factory till the river was navigable.

Mr. O'Connor says the sailor was the worst victim to the ravages of black flies that he ever saw in his life. His legs were swollen from the ankles to the knees, and his face, neck and hands were blotted till the man was a pitiable sight.

COMMITTED FOR TRIAL ON CHARGE OF BLACKMAIL

George Parcells Received Preliminary Hearing Yesterday at County Police Court—Trial Will Take Place on Tuesday, October 12—$1,500 Bail Granted.

George Parcells, of Havelock, was committed for trial yesterday on a charge of having extorted money and notes by threats and intimidations from Samuel Leason, also of Havelock. He elected to be tried before Judge Huycke, and the trial will take place at the county court on Tuesday, October 12.

Magistrate Edmison presided at the preliminary hearing yesterday. County Crown Attorney R. E. Wood, with Mr. Ghent, of Havelock, counsel for the complainant, conducted the prosecution. Mr. F. D. Kerr acted for the defendant, Parcells, and Mr. Wm. Mathieson, justice of the peace in Havelock, was on the bench with Magistrate Edmison. Mr. Kerr, on behalf of Parcells, did not make any election and pleaded not guilty.

Samuel Leason was first called. He stated that Parcells called at his home near Havelock, the latter part of September, and asked that he (Leason) make a settlement, adding that he had seduced his (Parcell's) daughter, a married woman, but refused to make any further explanation. Parcells then threatened arrest, but he asked that they both go to the house where the daughter lived. Parcells claimed he would get shot if seen there, and said he would give him two minutes to settle the amount of two hundred dollars. On being told that the money could not be gotten at once, Parcells threatened arrest that night, saying he had power of attorney from his daughter's husband to do so. He (Leason) said he would settle, and Parcells went away, but before doing so pulled out three blank notes and told him to take them to a Mr. Andrews. This he did.

A number of other witnesses for the prosecution were called, but none for the defence. The hearing occupied the attention of the court until evening, and the magistrate decided that the evidence furnished was sufficient to send the defendant up for trial. Bail for $1,500 was granted.

MILLBROOK FAIR WAS LARGELY ATTENDED AND EXHIBITS WERE GOOD

The weather man was unkind to the Millbrook Fair this year. The first day was extremely wet and disagreeable, but in spite of that fact, the entry was a large one, and hopes of a bright second day kept up the spirits of the management. Friday morning turned out fine and bright, and it looked very promising for a record turnout. The trains carried big loads to the village, four extra coaches being required to take the contingent along.

The afternoon, however, became cloudy and cold, and this doubtless cut down the attendance to a quite appreciable degree. The gate receipts for the day fell about $200 below those of last year, showing that there were several hundred less on the grounds than usual. The threatened rain did not arrive in any great quantity, and the big crowd enjoyed a great afternoon. The exhibits were of real merit all along the line, the first visit, of course, being paid to the inside display in the main building. An exceptionally good section was the fruit, especially the display of apples, amongst which there were some very fine samples, and all were above the average quality. Millbrook's amateur florists are always ready to make a big showing of flowers, and again had a fine display of pot and field-grown plants, as well as some extra choice cut blooms. The entries for the collection of cut Dahlias would have done credit to any exhibition. Ladies' fancy work was a good exhibit, but the art section was a notable one, containing a lot of extra good amateur and professional work. The grain and dairy entry was large, and was carefully studied by interested fair visitors.

Outside the next visit was to the poultry building, where a large entry of choice fowls were the admired of all who saw them. The hogs were not a large class, three breeds being represented, the Tamworths, Berkshires and Yorkshires. Probably the best quality of the three was in the big herd of Yorkshires that were shown.

The sheep were not up to former years in numbers or quality, but their corner had the share of attention from the sheep men, and quite a lot of sales were made. The mainstay of the cattle exhibit was the Aberdeen-Angus breed, of which there were two large herds in competition. A good number of grades and Durhams were also brought out and made a good entry in this section.

As is always the case at Millbrook Fair, the horses were the main show. Horses heavy and light were there from far and near, and the competition was so keen that the prizes went on extremely close decisions. Perhaps the hardest class to place the awards on was that for agricultural teams, in which ten fine pairs lined up to test the ability of the judge. Every team was a good one, and no man need be ashamed to own those which could receive no place at all. The judge finally gave his decisions as follows:—1st, C. J. Lewis, of Charlecot; 2nd, W. Roberts, Beaver Meadow Farm, Peterborough; 3rd, H. Seaton, of Cavan. The winners were a magnificent pair of well matched bays, perhaps a little too heavy for their class. The second pair were handsome grays, not so evenly matched in gait, but twins in color, size and shape. The third were also bays, and a beautiful pair, really more of an agricultural horse than either of the other winning teams.

In heavy draft teams, only three pair were shown. These were Canadian bred, and the prizes went to W. Langard, of Port Hope; T. H. C. Preston, Bethany, and J. Kennedy, of Cavanville, in the order given.

In light carriage teams, under 15 hands, George Brown, of Cavan, carried off the red ribbon, and J. Staples, of Ida, was a close second. The winners were a silky pair of blacks, and Mr. Staples' were an elegant team of chestnuts.

Single carriage horses (under 15 hands, resulted in a victory for R. Lenne, Peterborough, with his black mare; N. Brown, of Rosemount, captured second, and third went to McNeil Bros., Cavanville.

Mr. I. Eastwood had no opposition in the team class, 15 1-2 hands or over, so was an easy winner.

Single roadsters was a big field, the winners being George McGill, with a fine, free stepping chestnut hackney. Mr. Cowan, of Blackstock, getting second with a dark bay of good action, and third place going to R. C. Simmonds, of Westmount.

For the best gentleman's turnout, R. Lenne again drew first place, Jas. Boshnell capturing second, and Noble Brown taking third.

The lady drivers then took up the ribbons and guided several of the prize horses through the wonderful mazes that it seems necessary to require the ladies to solve, so many of them making a try for the three prizes that the judge has at least five or six enemies more now than he had before. Those who are now satisfied he knows a good driver when he sees one, are Miss Mitchell, Mrs. Lenne and Miss Lillian Mitchell, who received the awards in the order named.

THE RACES.

Two good events were pulled off in a most satisfactory manner, the judges being W. Simpson, of Lindsay; Senator McCoo, of Lindsay, and C. Nixon, of Peterborough.

The first called was the 2.28 class, in which there were three entries, E. Jones' 'Lou Chimes,' W. Whitton's 'Queen Bourbon,' and Dr. Pufkinghorn's 'May Sphynx.' Three heats decided the race, Lou Chimes taking all three, with Queen Bourbon second and May Sphynx third. Time—2.50.

The 2.15 class brought out four good horses and four good drivers. Ed. Jones' 'Patterson' won, George Caldwell's 'Honest Billy' second, P. McCarty's 'Wallace W.' third, and A. J. Ashmore's 'Lou Keswick' fourth.

Every heat was a good race, each horse fighting for position, the whole bunch staying together from start to finish, and decisions were given by a neck. The result by heats was as follows—

Patterson	3	1	1	1
Honest Billy	1	3	4	4
Wallace W.	2	2	3	2
Lou Keswick	4	4	2	3

Time—2.30.

GRAFTON & CO.

The Grafton Co. tent was the centre of an interested crowd of sightseers all through the afternoon. The chill in the air was a forcible reminder of coming, or perhaps present, need of different clothing, and the fine exhibit of this Peterborough establishment was not only opportune, but was an advance showing of the newest ideas in men's fall and winter wear. Distinctiveness was very apparent in the new suits and overcoats displayed, the Grafton quality being emphasized in every line. Visitors to the exhibit were handed neat memorandum books and handsome buttons as souvenirs by those in charge. The big signs of the firm were everywhere where the crowd went, and kept up the good impression made by the visit to the central exhibit in the tent.

W. LECH & SON.

Something new in the main building was a very fine exhibit of furs made by the well-known old firm of Wm. Lech & Sons, furriers and hatters, at 413 George street, Peterborough. The display was a rich and elegant one and showed the beautiful quality of the fur garments carried by this firm as well as the stylish make-up of the different pieces comprising the exhibit. A few of the finest articles were mink muffs, ladies' Persian lamb coats, collars, ruffs, neck wear of all kinds, rugs, robes, etc. The display attracted a large share of attention and all visitors carried away a neat business card, reminding them of the address of the store that has for so many years dealt in all that is finest in furs. A part of the exhibit was a man in buck-skin costume, who mingled with the crowd carrying their signs and distributing cards. The unusual dress made him a conspicuous object.

LANG & MAHER.

Long before arriving at the grounds the large colored signs of Messrs. Lang & Maher, the clothiers, met the eye, giving one the impression at a distance that there was a small midway outside the main entrance. These gradually resolved themselves into reminders of the great wear to be got out of Lang & Maher's working suits, the superior style and make of their new fall and winter suits and overcoats, the beauties of the new men's furnishings, the comfort to be got out of wearing their guaranteed underwear, the great values to be found at the 'Daylight Store,' etc., and when inside the gate you came face to face with their big exhibit, a glowing testimony of the truth of what the big signs said.

Messrs. Lang and G. Wesley were in charge, and were always pleased to show the goods and point out their advantages and also to hand all interested a card that would be a reminder when they reached home of what they had seen.

A Suggestion

In view of some recent utterances, it would seem to be both seemly and timely if the several clergymen of the city would read, for the morning scripture lesson to-morrow, the first eleven verses of the 5th chapter of Acts. Therein is set out in concise and telling narrative certain happenings and the recital may be a word in season.

DEATH OF AN OLD RESIDENT

Those who bear in mind the residents of the city in its pioneer days, will be interested to learn of the death of Mrs. John Clarke, one of the early settlers. The Mail and Empire of to-day says;—"The many friends of Mrs. John Clarke, of 428 Huron street, will regret to learn of her somewhat unexpected death last evening. While on a visit to her son in Rosedale about two weeks ago, she had a severe fall, and, while she was not seriously injured, the shock proved too much at her advanced age. Mrs. Clarke was born in St. Andrews, Scotland, in 1826, and at the age of 18 years came to Canada with her father. Shortly afterwards she married Mr. John Clarke, of Peterborough, and after his death she removed to Toronto with her family. For the last few years she resided with her youngest daughter on Huron street, and was a member of Trinity Methodist church. Two of her children predeceased her—Dr. John Clarke, of Peterborough, and Miss Emeline Clarke, while six have survived her, three sons and three daughters, the sons being Alfred R., Frederick, and Charles."

Sister Died in Toronto

Mr. George Cork, school teacher at Chemong village, has received the sad message that his sister passed away in Toronto yesterday. Mr. Cork left this morning to attend the obsequies.

OUR MILLIONAIRES.

American Money Kings From a German Point of View.

In a satirical article entitled "The Natural History of American Millionaires" a writer in the Berliner Tageblatt says: "They all came to New York, Chicago or Philadelphia with one shirt and with one cent in the pocket of the only other garment. All served as bootblacks, errand boys or even in more humble positions and in the second week had saved enough to buy a waistcoat. After one month they appeared before their respective employers clad in new clothes and told them with imposing self confidence that the organization of their business was defective and required reorganization. A year later the boy has become a partner, in two years he has outstripped the former boss in wealth, and a year later he has grown smart enough to kill off the benefactor of other days. All American millionaires arise at 3 in the morning, eat and drink almost nothing, cease their work at midnight and allow only those to live whom they think are good enough to invite. Every dollar king founds a university, an opera, a museum or a picture gallery. Life becomes a burden to them when there are no more competitors in their branch worthy of destruction. Then they lie down and die of ennui."

Almost Heavenly.

"That is Saturn you see now," explains the astronomer, while the visitor to the observatory peers through the telescope at the mysterious orb with its rings and with its moons showing as little points of light.

"It's away off, isn't it?" asks the visitor.

"Oh, yes. Saturn is so far off that it requires thirty of our years to make the circuit around the sun."

"Thirty years!"

"Yes."

"My! Saturn must be pretty close to heaven."

"I couldn't say as to that."

"I should call it almost heavenly not to have to buy spring dresses and hats for my wife and daughters not more than once in thirty years."

For fear the visitor would have something to say about the summer engagements on Saturn being responsible for the rings, the astronomer quickly pointed the telescope toward Jupiter.—Chicago Post.

Doing a Man's Work.

The Widow Skinner has been twice bereaved, and she was telling me about her two husbands over a cup of tea.

"Boggs was the first," she said dreamily, "a ornery hound wot useter to git drunk and come home and lam baste me all over the place. After Boggs died I married Skinner. He was a good for nothin', ornery critter wot 'ud turn up full, and I'd lam him till he couldn't see."

She chuckled with quiet amusement.

"Well," said a listener, "the last was better than the first, at least."

But the widow shook her head.

"No, 'tw'an't," she said. "I'd kinder got used to Boggs' little ways, and in Skinner's case I never cottoned to the idea of doin' a man's work about the house."—Exchange.

Drifted Into It.

"Yes, I've managed to get into debt pretty deeply," said Kayriiss.

"Indeed," remarked Wise. "I gave you credit for more sense than you seem to have."

"H'm! The trouble was that my tailor gave me credit for more dollars than I seem to have," said Kayriiss.—Catholic Standard and Times.

Nothing to Offer.

"Have you," asked the judge of a recently convicted man, "anything to offer the court before sentence is passed?"

"No, your honor," replied the prisoner. "My lawyer took my last farthing."—London Mail.

"No," replied the near famous bard. "We've got more sense than to queer the game in that manner."—Milwaukee Journal.

SOME SCENES IN A BUSY PETERBOROUGH FACTORY

MODERN PLANT OF CANADIAN CORDAGE COMPANY

In the Canadian Cordage Company Peterborough has an industry that is already doing a big business and one that has the brightest prospects for future growth. The factory has had a very busy season, the sales of binder twine surpassing in extent those of former years.

On this page will be found a number of cuts showing some of the machinery of the company and also some interesting scenes of the securing of the raw material used in the manufacture of rope and binder twine.

African Fibre Plant

PREPAR TION ROOM

MANILA.

The world is dependent on the Philippine Islands for its supply of Manila hemp, the most valuable of all fibres for cordage. The plant producing this hemp is found in the hilly and mountainous country of most of the Islands of this group. By the natives it is known as Abaca. In its native origin the plant is rudely cultivated solely as a source of fibre. It requires little attention. The natives seldom own the lands, but cultivate the plants and prepare the hemp on shares. They usually work in pairs, caring for about two acres, the usual size of the fields.

Extracting Fibre From Leaf

When from three to five years old, the plant attains a height of from 10 to 15 or 20 feet. Its leaves run from the roots, wrapping the flower stem until near the top, where they branch out into large waving fans. The plant must be cut before the seed is produced, or the quality of the fibre is injured. When flowers appear on the central stem, it is in the most favorable condition for yielding fibre. The stock is then cut down and the sheathing leaves torn asunder and reduced to small strips. These strips in their fresh succulent condition are drawn between a sharp knife-edged instrument and a hard wooden block to which it is fixed, and by repeated scraping in this way the soft cellular matter which surrounds the fibre, is removed, and the fibre so cleaned, has only to be hung up in the open air to dry, when without further treatment it is ready for use. Each stock yields, on an average a little under one pound of fibre; and two natives cutting down plants and separating fibre will prepare not more than twenty-five pounds per day. The fibre yielded by the outer layer of leaf stocks is hard, fully developed and strong, but the produce of the inner stocks is increasingly thin, fine and weak. The finer fibre is used by the natives for making exceedingly fine, tight, yet comparatively strong textures, which they use as articles of dress and ornament.

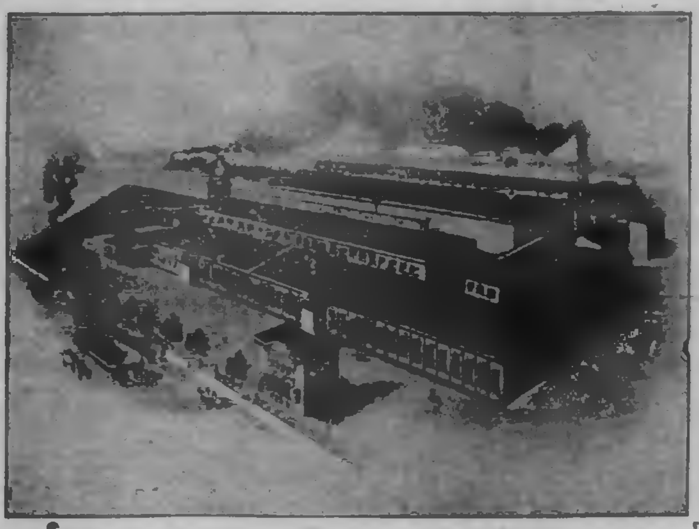
From each tree about one pound of fibre will be produced, thus taking from two hundred and seventy-five to three hundred trees to furnish one bale of hemp. Two men can make a bale of hemp in about two weeks.

The traders sort it into different grades and when they have a boat load, it is sent to one of the exporting cities, usually Manila, Cebu or Iloile, where it is inspected, graded and baled.

The illustrations on this and preceding page will show the simple made machine with which the native separates and cleans the fibre from the pulpy substance in which it is enveloped. Under a knife, fastened to a hinged block, with an attachment which allows him to regulate the pressure with his feet, the strips are passed, and by dextrous handling the pulp is scraped off, leaving the fibre clean and free from extraneous matter. The greater the pressure upon the knife the better the quality of the hemp, but the harder the work, and the slower the process. If the native is lazy the hemp is dark and coarse. For this reason the fine white hemp is scarce and high priced.

SISAL.

The successful cultivation of the sisal plant has thus far been confined to the State of Yucatan in Mexico, where it has been found imbedded in the ornamental stucco figures of the buildings lately uncovered in the prehistoric ruins of Yucatan, showing its use from the earliest times. But a small part of the state is suitable to its cultivation, so that the output of the fibre is limited. The plants are propagated by suckers planted in rows about from 10 to 12 feet apart, which begin to produce fibre in from 5 to 6 years.



CANADIAN CORDAGE COMPANY.

They continue to produce fibre for 10 to 15 years when the plant sends up a flower stock, which indicates that its usefulness is ended, and it is then cut down. When the leaves are ready to cut they extend at right angles from the trunk. A healthy plant will yield from eighteen to twenty leaves, and each leaf about one ounce of clean, dry fibre. The leaves are cut by the natives, as shown in the illustration, they usually begin work very early in the morning in order to avoid the intense heat of mid-day. An expert workman will cut and strip, from 1,500 to 2,000 leaves a day, for which he is paid 50 cents Mexican or 25 cents in United States currency.

The Sisal Plant—Cutting and Trimming the Leaves

The heat is so intense, only the native Indians can endure the field work. All attempts to import foreign labor have failed, none have been able to endure the burning sun. When the leaves have been cut and stripped of their thorns, they are tied in bundles and conveyed to the cleaner, over portable railways, which are removed from place to place in the field as necessary. Formerly the fibre was separated by the most crude and primitive methods, but as the demand outgrew the supply, machinery was called into service. The machine now commonly used consists of a large toothed wheel which scrapes the pulp from the leaves, leaving the fibre free from all other substances. Its simplicity fits it for use by the native laborers. It is known as the "raspador." More powerful machines are generally used on the large plantations.

When the fibre has been separated from the pulp it is washed and then hung out to dry over galvanized wire lines. With a clear sky and the intense heat prevailing it requires but a few hours to dry and bleach. When thoroughly dry the fibre is taken to press, where it is put up in compact bales. The operations in the preparation of the hemp follow each other so quickly and the processes are facilitated so much by the climatic conditions it is possible within twenty-four hours to produce from the growing plants hemp ready for shipment. The chief cities of the hemp district in Yucatan are Merida and the Port of Progreso. The large plantations of Yucatan are equipped with a complete system of tramways extending throughout the Henequen fields used to transport the leaves to the decorticating mills. The bundles of "pencas" or leaves are packed on burros to the nearest tramway point.

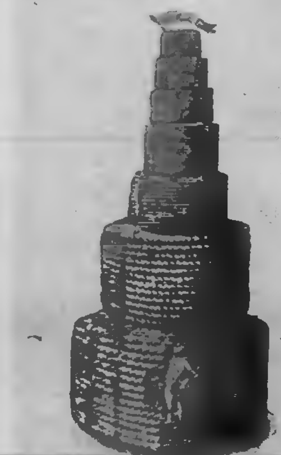
SPINNING ROOM

NEW ZEALAND HEMP.

New Zealand hemp is a fibre obtained from the leaves of Phormium Tenax. The plant is a native of New Zealand, the Chatham Islands and Norfolk Island. The leaves grow from three to six and even nine feet in height, and from two to three inches in breadth, springing from the extremity of a rhizome. After the tuft of leaves has continued growing for about three years a flowering stalk springs up to the height of about 16 feet, and when it comes to maturity the whole plant dies down; it is propagated by suckers as well as by seed. Among the Maoris the fibre has always been an article of considerable importance. The leaves for fibre-yielding purposes come to maturity in about six months, and are generally cut by the natives twice a year.



Phormium is a cream-colored fibre with a fine silky gloss. It is used principally as a cordage fibre, and in tensile strength is second only to Manila hemp.

Formerly, much of this hemp was unfit for twine-making purposes, but in recent years the New Zealand government has introduced legislation governing the inspection of this hemp, with the result that what comes to market now is fully up to the standard quality.

The fibre is prepared for market in a manner similar to Sisal. Only the best and most carefully selected is fit to use if good twine is to be produced.

In many respects the fibre closely resembles Manila.

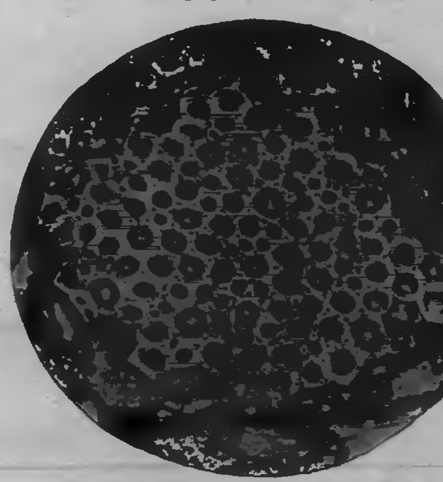
New Zealand Hemp Growing (Phormium Tenax)

AFRICAN FIBRE

It is only within the last few years that this fibre has been brought into use by cordage manufacturers. The plant producing this fibre is to be found in the German possessions of Africa. The stock, which contains fibre, shoots up from a rhizome to a height of from 12 to 20 feet; the stalks are about 3 inches at the bottom, tapering gradually to the top. In many respects they resemble the bamboo, but there are no knots on stem. The stalks are cut into six and eight feet lengths and put through a break. The fibre is of fine white silky appearance, in many respects resembling sisal.

Sisal Hemp Plantation (Henequen)

The plantations are operated by a company, in which it is understood that Kaiser William takes a deep interest. They control the whole of the output and only a limited number of tons can be obtained. In a few years this fibre will no doubt be largely used in the manufacture of cordage.



Manilla Fibre Magnified

Progress is said to have been made near Port Shepstone, Natal, in the cultivation of sisal hemp and banana fibre, a company having been formed under the style of South African Industries, Limited, for the development of the industry. Other ventures are spoken of as being started at Delagoa Bay, as well as in Rhodesia and the Transvaal for growing hemp, ramie and other fibres.

ROPE.

Rope is composed of a certain number of "strands," the strand being itself made up of many "yarns." Three strands laid or twisted together form a "Hawser Laid" rope, and three such hawsers similarly laid make a "cable laid" rope or "cable." A "shroud laid" rope consists of four strands laid around a central strand or core. Fibre is twisted or spun to the right hand to form yarn; the required number of yarns receive a left hand twist to make a strand; three strands twisted to the right make a hawser, and three hawsers twisted to the left yield a cable. Thus the twist in each successive operation is in a different direction from the preceding, and this alternation of direction serves to some extent to parallelism of the fibre.

The earliest practical attempt to introduce machine rope-spinning was made by Cartwright, the famous inventor of the power loom, who, in 1792 obtained a patent for a machine called by him a "Cordelier." Cartwright's "Cordelier," as improved in 1805 by Captain Huddard, became the basis of modern laying and forming machines. Numerous modifications and improved combinations have since been introduced, but the principles on which they are worked are essentially the same.

Although the name of the first rope maker, and that of the land in which he practised his art, have both been lost to history, Egyptian sculptures prove that the art was practised at

BY A. T. ASHMORE.

ONE feature of the Paris fashions of the present season is the long semi-fitted coat of chiffon, lace, silk or any of the striped or figured gauze materials. These coats, or transparent wraps, are used with every style of dress, from the more costly lace gowns, such as are worn in afternoon or occasionally for formal wear in the morning, to the most elaborate satin d[illegible] dress. With the reintroduction of the Directoire coats formed of transparent texture there has been a tremendous vogue for the tea gown. The long, loose lines such as the Directoire wrap naturally lends to a dress tend to give it much the effect of a tea gown, and it is now somewhat difficult to draw a sharp line of distinction between the low cut tea gown such as is permissible for wear at an informal dinner in one's own house and the simpler dinner gowns designed for the same purpose.

A tea gown of to-day must be made up on as carefully fitted a lining as any princess dress, and while the lines give an effect of peculiar grace and ease the natural curves and outline of the figure must not for one moment be disguised. The tea gown now decreed by Dame Fashion is different in every essential from the style of garment which that term originally designated, and there is no longer even the most remote resemblance between it and the more or less loose negligée, now relegated strictly to the boudoir.

To-day there are two classes of tea gown suitable for wear at afternoon tea time, a supposedly loose and comfortable garment to slip on when a tailor made reception costume is doffed, being the original tea gown. This dress is still worn, and differs from the dinner tea gown in the cut of the décolleté and perhaps the length of the sleeve. When life was lived on a less formal basis and tea meant in reality a light supper at six or half-past in the afternoon, a tea gown was more in place than to-day, with late dinner at half-past seven, eight or later an established custom. Such a dress as the tea gown was, however, too comfortable to be lightly laid aside, and with an ever increasing formality in living this garment is made to keep the pace by growing more and more elaborate, and hence necessarily more and more costly, until to-day a smart tea gown far outranks in intrinsic value of materials the most superb ball dress.

AS already stated, the principal difference between an afternoon tea gown and one in keeping for evening wear at home is in the cut of the décolleté. For afternoon the yoke is a little lower than the square cut Dutch neck so popular at the moment, but V or U shaped yokes are, however, smarter than the square cut, so commonly worn with other styles of dress. In a majority of these afternoon gowns the yoke is transparent, being formed of lace, shirred chiffon or tucked net. The sleeves are three-quarter length and loose in effect, being either full puffs, capes of lace or simply folds of plaited net or chiffon falling in kimono shape, narrow at the shoulder, extremely full below the elbows. From the shoulders falls a loose cape of lace.

A gown that is worn during the day is shorter than an evening tea gown, the Directoire models showing little, if any, train, although the material touches and often lies some inches on the floor, both in front and on the sides. It is small wonder that the tea gown fashionable for home wear in the evening is so important a factor in every season's trousseau. In detail as well as in fact, in texture no less than in good cut and fit, this costume is perhaps more irresistibly attractive and generally becoming than any other garment in the outfit. The perfectly fit[illegible] tion over which are hung draperies and folds of chiffon, which in their soft, full, only half clinging lines give an indescribable relief in contrast to the too close fitting or eccentrically loose street dress now in vogue. Among the tea gowns, too, there are still to be seen the delicate, pale tints of pink, blue, green and yellow that in other styles of dress have been rather abandoned in favor of more striking and unusual shades. Then again chiffon, gauze and even lace robes do not lend themselves readily to the style of dress at present in vogue, whereas for a tea gown these are the textures most sought for, and if only because of being slightly different in effect they make the tea gown of to-day exceptionally desirable.

The dress of chiffon or mousseline de soie, which covers the silk lining and forms a foundation for the lace coat, must not fit too closely nor must it be so loose as in any way to detract from the naturally good lines of the figure, for it must be remembered that the outer wrap will give what long, loose lines are wanted. Not until the underlining has been boned and is perfect as regards fit and length can the chiffon dress be added, and not until this can be acknowledged perfect in its soft, clinging folds need the hanging of the wrap be contemplated. It is with the chiffon foundation that most care is required, even more perhaps than in the fitting and cut of the silk lining itself, for if the folds and gatherings are not in just the right place or give, just the correct amount of material neither too little nor too much the lines of the figure will be destroyed immediately.

When becoming, the belt of the dress is placed high up on the slip, the chiffon being gathered into a band of satin ribbon or a belt formed of tightly draped folds of chiffon. Shirring and cording drawn in to form a belt are often seen instead of an added belt of ribbon or the material itself. This robe is finished off about the feet with narrow ruckings of lace or with a few folds of chiffon. In one model ribbon streamers, falling from a flat rosette in the centre of the belt in the back, are brought around to the front of the skirt and ended off in a large bow knot or rosette just below the knees. This ribbon band must only be tied loosely, however, as otherwise it will impede walking in the dress and give a most ungraceful and awkward line.

THERE are numberless designs for lace or chiffon coats that form the finish and give the character to a modern tea gown. For this coat only the finest lace can be used, but the wraps of chiffon and the various striped and figured gauzes are all extremely pretty, and with a small amount of lace or embroidery trimming can be made most effective.

A lace cape is either a complete garment in itself, literally a long coat with sleeves, made to order from an especial design, or else it is formed of two long bands of eight to twelve inch lace laid over the shoulder and fastened together front and back with strips of ribbon silk. In some models the cape thus formed has sleeves added to it of lace caught together down the centre by the same bands of ribbon, while in others the sleeves of the garment are entirely of chiffon trimmed in some way with lace and fine tucking.

While many tea gowns are in effect almost severely simple, others again show a wealth of embroidery and most intricate trimming, and there seems no limit to the amount of hand work and costly lace which may be used upon the wrap which forms the important part of a tea gown of to-day. Ribbon work embroidery worked upon the lace itself or upon a satin band bordering the strips of lace down front and back is seen in great profusion and raised work is also used more than has been the case of late.

On a black tea gown bright jet is most effective and is seen more even than embroidery, while for mourning a black chiffon cape may be bordered about the neck with dull jet and have a high belt of the same trimming. Spangled and paillette trimming is somewhat out of vogue, but jet was never so greatly in favor. A white lace underdress covered with a Directoire coat of black chiffon bordered all around with jet, having belt and sleeves also of jet, is most effective.

Two toned effects of the one color are exceptionally pretty in the tea gowns of chiffon and gauze, while unusual shades soft in tone and contrasting queerly with one another are also seen to a great extent. The effect is achieved, of course, by the underdress being of one shade while the wrap is quite different. Mauve is exquisitely pretty in combinations with either pink, blue, green or yellow, while orange is a color now being seen in contrast with all the delicate tones. The combination can, of course, be worked either way, with coat, for example, in palest lavender and dress itself of green or vice versa. In a two toned combination of the one color the coat is oftener of the lighter shade, but this effect also is frequently reversed.

A long coat of Irish point lace of Valenciennes or Brussels net is an excellent investment in these days. Not only can the garment be worn during the day to make the dress more suitable for some formal occasion, but it will be of infinite service also as the outer part of any number of tea gowns of different colors.

Fashion Details Every Woman Should Know

EXQUISITELY pretty for a rounded slender figure is the evening gown shown in illustration No. 1. The belt, round and rather stiff, is most attractive for such a figure, but would be found far from becoming for a rather stout figure. The model shown was developed in raspberry pink satin, with embroideries in different tones of pink and a little gold. The sleeves and tiny chemisette are of chiffon in a fainter tone of the same color, and the material is used in a soft fulness that is most becoming and graceful. Besides the belt of gold set with round jewelled ornaments there are also jewelled ornaments on the shoulders. The bottom of the sleeves is a straight band of embroidery in gold and raspberry.

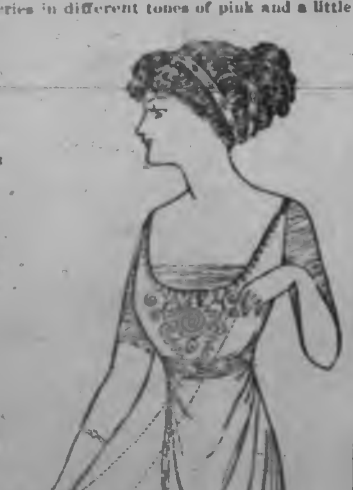

FIG. 1—SATIN EVENING GOWN WITH JEWELLED BELT.

REMARKABLE among the autumn models for street costumes is the design shown in figure 2. The costume in the original model was of gray cloth with trimmings of black satin, for which velvet might later be substituted. Any of the new shades would be charming in this model, but when material is to be considered it would seem more suitable for development in a smooth finished material than in a serge or cheviot, unless the former were used in the finest of weaves and a dressy finish. The full belt, placed at the fashionable distance from the waist, makes the costume one which must be most carefully handled in order to produce a satisfactory result. Only a perfectly cut and fitted costume can stand the addition of such a difficult ornamentation and retain its smartness and distinction of line.

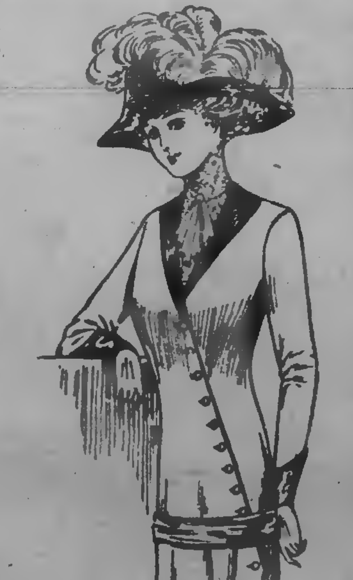

FIG. 2—STREET COSTUME OF GRAY CLOTH.

IN illustration No. 3, as shown, an attractive model for an afternoon gown of cashmere or fine light weight cloth. The model is especially suited for young girls. Either lace or embroidery may be used for the bands, which trim the gown according to the color of the material. For a light shade bands of ivory or white lace over white silk are attractive, but for a gown of more vivid or darker shade the lace would be too bizarre a contrast.

In the original model the material used was pale gray cashmere, the trimming being of ivory lace over white silk. The sash and ends were of gray satin with edges of black velvet, and a bit of black velvet is used around the top of the Dutch neck and for the little bow in front.

Yellow or ivory lace is also most attractive with a golden brown cashmere for this model. For a blue gown of a rather vivid and most unusual tone embroidery bands were used, the colors being blue, pink and black.

THRILLING LIVES

THE LUMBERJACK

BY WILLIAM ALLEN JOHNSTON.

(Copyright, 1909, by the New York Herald Co. All Rights Reserved.)

SOMEWHERE along the tortuous line of the Connecticut River—perhaps away up at its desolate headwaters, where Canada joins the three States of Vermont, New Hampshire and Maine, or among the white waters of the mountain rapids, or down along the sandbars and pitches where the log cabins of the timber wildernesses give way to the humming sawmills and pulp mills of civilization—somewhere in the thick of it there's a big, masterful "drive boss" by the name of Gilmour.

"He's in the thick of it," a lumberman told me with a light of admiration in his eye. "'cause he ain't happy when he's out of trouble—and there sure is trouble in the thick of a log drive, even in these days of second cuts and pulp sticks.

"I ain't seen him now in some years—since I drifted up Canada way to the Ottawa—but I'm bettin' he's on the job and cussin' as free as he used to. He ain't no man to blacksnake (shirk) and he never did get to like trolley cars and high sassiety.

"How do I know he's livin'?" The lumberjack smiled confidently. "I don't know it. I'm only bettin' He ain't old enough to die natural and as far as gettin' killed is concerned, I'll stake him against log, man or the devil."

It seems as if every lumberjack who ever worked the Connecticut knows Gilmour. I heard of him first in Canada, in a shanty on the Grand Portage de la Nation, and again on the Big Rouge, and again in the city of New York, that great, strange, foreign city, where men of the wilds rub elbows with city born slums, and where the flotsam and jetsam carries every type of human log this wide world supplies.

Lumberjacks have their heroes, just as other fighting men have; also their "blacksnakes" and "river hogs" (shirkers and cowards), and like to talk at length about them. I feel now that I know Gilmour as well as if I had met him and can describe him.

He is a big man—he stands six feet in his snaggin' boots—with burly shoulders and muscles that bulge even in his heavy mackinaws. He is sandy haired and his face has the innumerable fine wrinkles common to men of the woods. His eyes, too, have that steady, solemn, impenetrable look that seems to go with the forest.

The Silent Boss.

Like all good bosses, he is silent when the work goes right—tranquil, patient, when the drive floats on through the monotonous days of placid water and clear banks. When he talks at all he shouts, and his orders are curses. He develops a sort of sense of humor then, a wild, weird, Scotch humor, almost murderous in conception. That is when the water runs white and roars, when the logs are rearing, tossing, bucking, kicking, almost flying in a tremendous, air-shaking game of jackstraws; when the men, wild eyed, panting, with lips snarling and hair flying, are leaping about like cats, their arms swinging peevies and their boots with their clawlike spikes clutching the treacherous logs, missing them now and then with a splash and a groan, and——

"Close the door!" yells Gilmour as a form shoots down between two revolving logs and a tangled head of hair disappears in the swirling waters. "Close the door, you river hog! There's lots more Canucks where you come from!"

That is Gilmour's humor. And yet his men boast of him. Like him, too. Yes, some of them, the good ones. He's square, they say. He picks the dangerous spots for himself—and then he's the best boss the Connecticut has ever known. He gets $10 a day.

Gilmour has but one eye now. From the empty socket a red scar runs across the side of his face and the bridge of his nose is flattened and makes him scowl hideously, for the cheek was drawn up when the wound healed.

It was a bad hurt. The marvel of it is that Gilmour was not killed. Any other man would have been, the lumberjacks vow.

It happened back in the eighties, and near the end of the biggest drive in the history of the Connecticut. Sixty-five million feet were brought down and, all in all, full nine hundred men made up the army that harvested and sluiced the mighty crop.

There have been greater drives. In '92 a drive on the St. Croix River formed a jam six miles long, and before that, in '86, the giant "first cuts" in the spring drive of the Chippewa locked arms in a rigid mass that covered the bosom of the river for over ten miles. But there have been few drives more dangerous and difficult, more replete with fatalities and stirring incidents than this Connecticut drive. It took a whole year to bring it to the mills and the ocean, and part of another year to bring down the "rear" (logs left behind in the shallows or high and dry on the banks), and many a man obeyed literally Gilmour's mocking, shrieking command and "closed the door" upon his life in the icy, log covered waters.

The Tedium of It.

It was tedious work. They passed the bridges, the stone abutments of which might form in a twinkling a tremendous jam, by booming the logs into separate divisions, each with "wings" at the head, which swung them in safety past the stone obstructions. One by one they swept by the danger points—all except that one at the foot of Fifteen Mile Falls, and which I shall tell of presently—till the vanguard of the surging host of logs struck the big sandbar at Mulligan's Pitch—struck there and stuck there.

It happened in a second, as all jams do both great and small. A "wing" broke and the nose of the boom swung in and straight onto the bar. There were warning cries, sharp orders and quick work with the peevies, but turning that boom against the current was like turning the river itself. It swept on with a mad rise and plunge; some grand logs reared up and dived like things possessed, revolving and burrowing deep into the sand as if with malicious intent. There was a sullen crash that tore whole logs into white matchwood, and then a grinding, disheartening tremor as the boom slowed down and adjusted itself into a rigid, interlocked mass.

"Stuck!" yelled one brass lunged lumberjack as he fell exhausted back against the shore. "Stuck and held on Mulligan's Pitch!"

"Shut up and get up!" yelled a louder voice in his ear, and he jumped to his feet with alacrity—so did others, and clambered back over the logs with pike poles upraised and waiting for orders

The orders came sharp and fast, for Gilmour the silent was talking now. Men jumped about like squirrels and worked like horses, tugging, heaving, pushing till their eyes swam black and whipcords of muscles stood out in their necks. They ripped and loosened the mass right down to the key log, and there they stopped. Human might could not budge it; it was a giant butt, driven deep like a pile into the sand.

Gilmour looked over at a sturdy tree near the river bank and called for heavy ropes and pulley blocks. A noose was slipped over the stubborn log and two teams of "tote" horses matched their strength against it under a stinging lash. A third team was added and then another; and at last the big log gave. Only for a bare foot, however. It slided over and wedged against another, held immovable, too, by the clinch of the other logs.

There was a chance there for a pike pole and one strong man—only room for one. That was what Gilmour thought, and, as was his custom in tight places and where almost superhuman strength was needed, he took the post himself.

Winning the Battle.

The man up on the Big Rouge grew enthusiastic when he told of the struggle that followed. Under Gilmour's orders the horses plunged in their collars, and with each tug of the rope the boss drove deep his pike pole and edged it over and over by fractions of inches till it was almost centre to centre with the holding log, and his sharp eyes were glinting right and left, looking for a place to jump when the stampede of logs started, and then——

"Snap!" The big rope parted with an explosion like the bang of a cannon and the twirling, flying ends whistled through the air like grapnel shot. The straining horses went to their knees in a tangle of harness and the teamsters fell flat upon their faces as one end of the rope sailed over their heads and whipped branches out of the tree.

The other end shot straight out over the logs, the key log giving with it, and then, with the loop as a pivot, it circled around and around with a fury and force that seemed never spending.

With the break of the rope and as he felt his footing give way Gilmour jumped with outstretched arms and clutched the nearest support to him—the big upright key log. At almost the same instant he felt something like an iron arm grip him about the legs, then another about his waist, almost crushing the breath from his body; then another, and then out of the mad disorder of things came a blow that he thought tore the head from his body as consciousness left him.

What the men saw was a man clinging to an upright log as a circling rope coiled itself about him like a snake. They saw the end of it, too, like a whiplash, swing in and strike him full across his face. They saw the bloody mark it left, and then, in a second, they were skipping about and "riding" the logs as the key log fell in a wide debacle of wood and water

Subconsciously they were intent first upon their own safety—this is natural with lumberjacks and other men—but one common thought possessed them, for as they caught their balance they raced toward the key log—and Gilmour.

The big log was still riding high—it was slow in falling and now the surrounding logs floated under and upheld it—and there upon it, lashed by the coils of the heavy rope, was the helpless figure and fearful red face of Gilmour.

How they rescued him I do not know. The man from the Big Rouge was among the first to get to him, but he does not speak freely of that part of the incident. It must have been quick work and skilful work. But they reached him, freed him from his strange bonds and carried him ashore, across tossing, pitching logs, back to the "alligator" (the boat that follows the drive), where the "cookee" became surgeon and dressed the gaping wound. Gilmour recovered quickly—it was no time for protracted convalescence, even for a boss who came back from seeming death—in fact, he was back on the drive in two weeks, "as lively and cussin' as free as ever," said the man from the Big Rouge. But he was "One Eye" Gilmour after that, and that is his name to-day.

That other story of Gilmour, the incident on Fifteen Mile Falls—a "flip" they called it in the native shanty—comes in here naturally, because, I fancy, it explains why three men risked their lives so quickly that day on Mulligan's Patch to save their fallen boss.

At Fifteen Mile Falls.

Fifteen Mile Falls, as the name signifies, is a reach of rapids that runs for a full fifteen mile length to the Connecticut. At the end and just before a big basin of still water there's a drop as though a dam had been built there, and near the middle of it a great split rock that is almost entirely submerged.

It has proven a catchall on every drive the river has carried, and this time a regiment of men were sent ahead at the fore of the drive to work against it. Gilmour remained in the rear that day, where there was constant trouble in the rapids.

About noon the logs began to slacken speed in the rapids and the boss, fearing the worst, jumped on a horse and galloped on to the split rock.

It was as he surmised. There was the jam, solid now from shore to shore, and at the point of it a triangular tangle of logs, heaped high and with the men swarming over it like rats, and about as impotent.

Gilmour's experienced eye took in the situation and his tongue cursed them roundly. "What are ye doin' now?" he roared. "Would ye catch a snake in a tree?" He clambered over to the edge of the monster pile and pointed down below to a big butt caught fast in the jaws of the split rock. "There's your key log," he yelled, "down there!"

A "Canuck" driver shrugged his shoulders and grinned, and the grin, though it brought him a smack from Gilmour's fist and sent him sprawling over the pile, told the story better than words. To be sure, the key log was "down there," but who would go down to it? Who would go down and free it, knowing full well that directly over his head towered that crushing weight of logs ready to fall and bury him the moment the key log was moved?

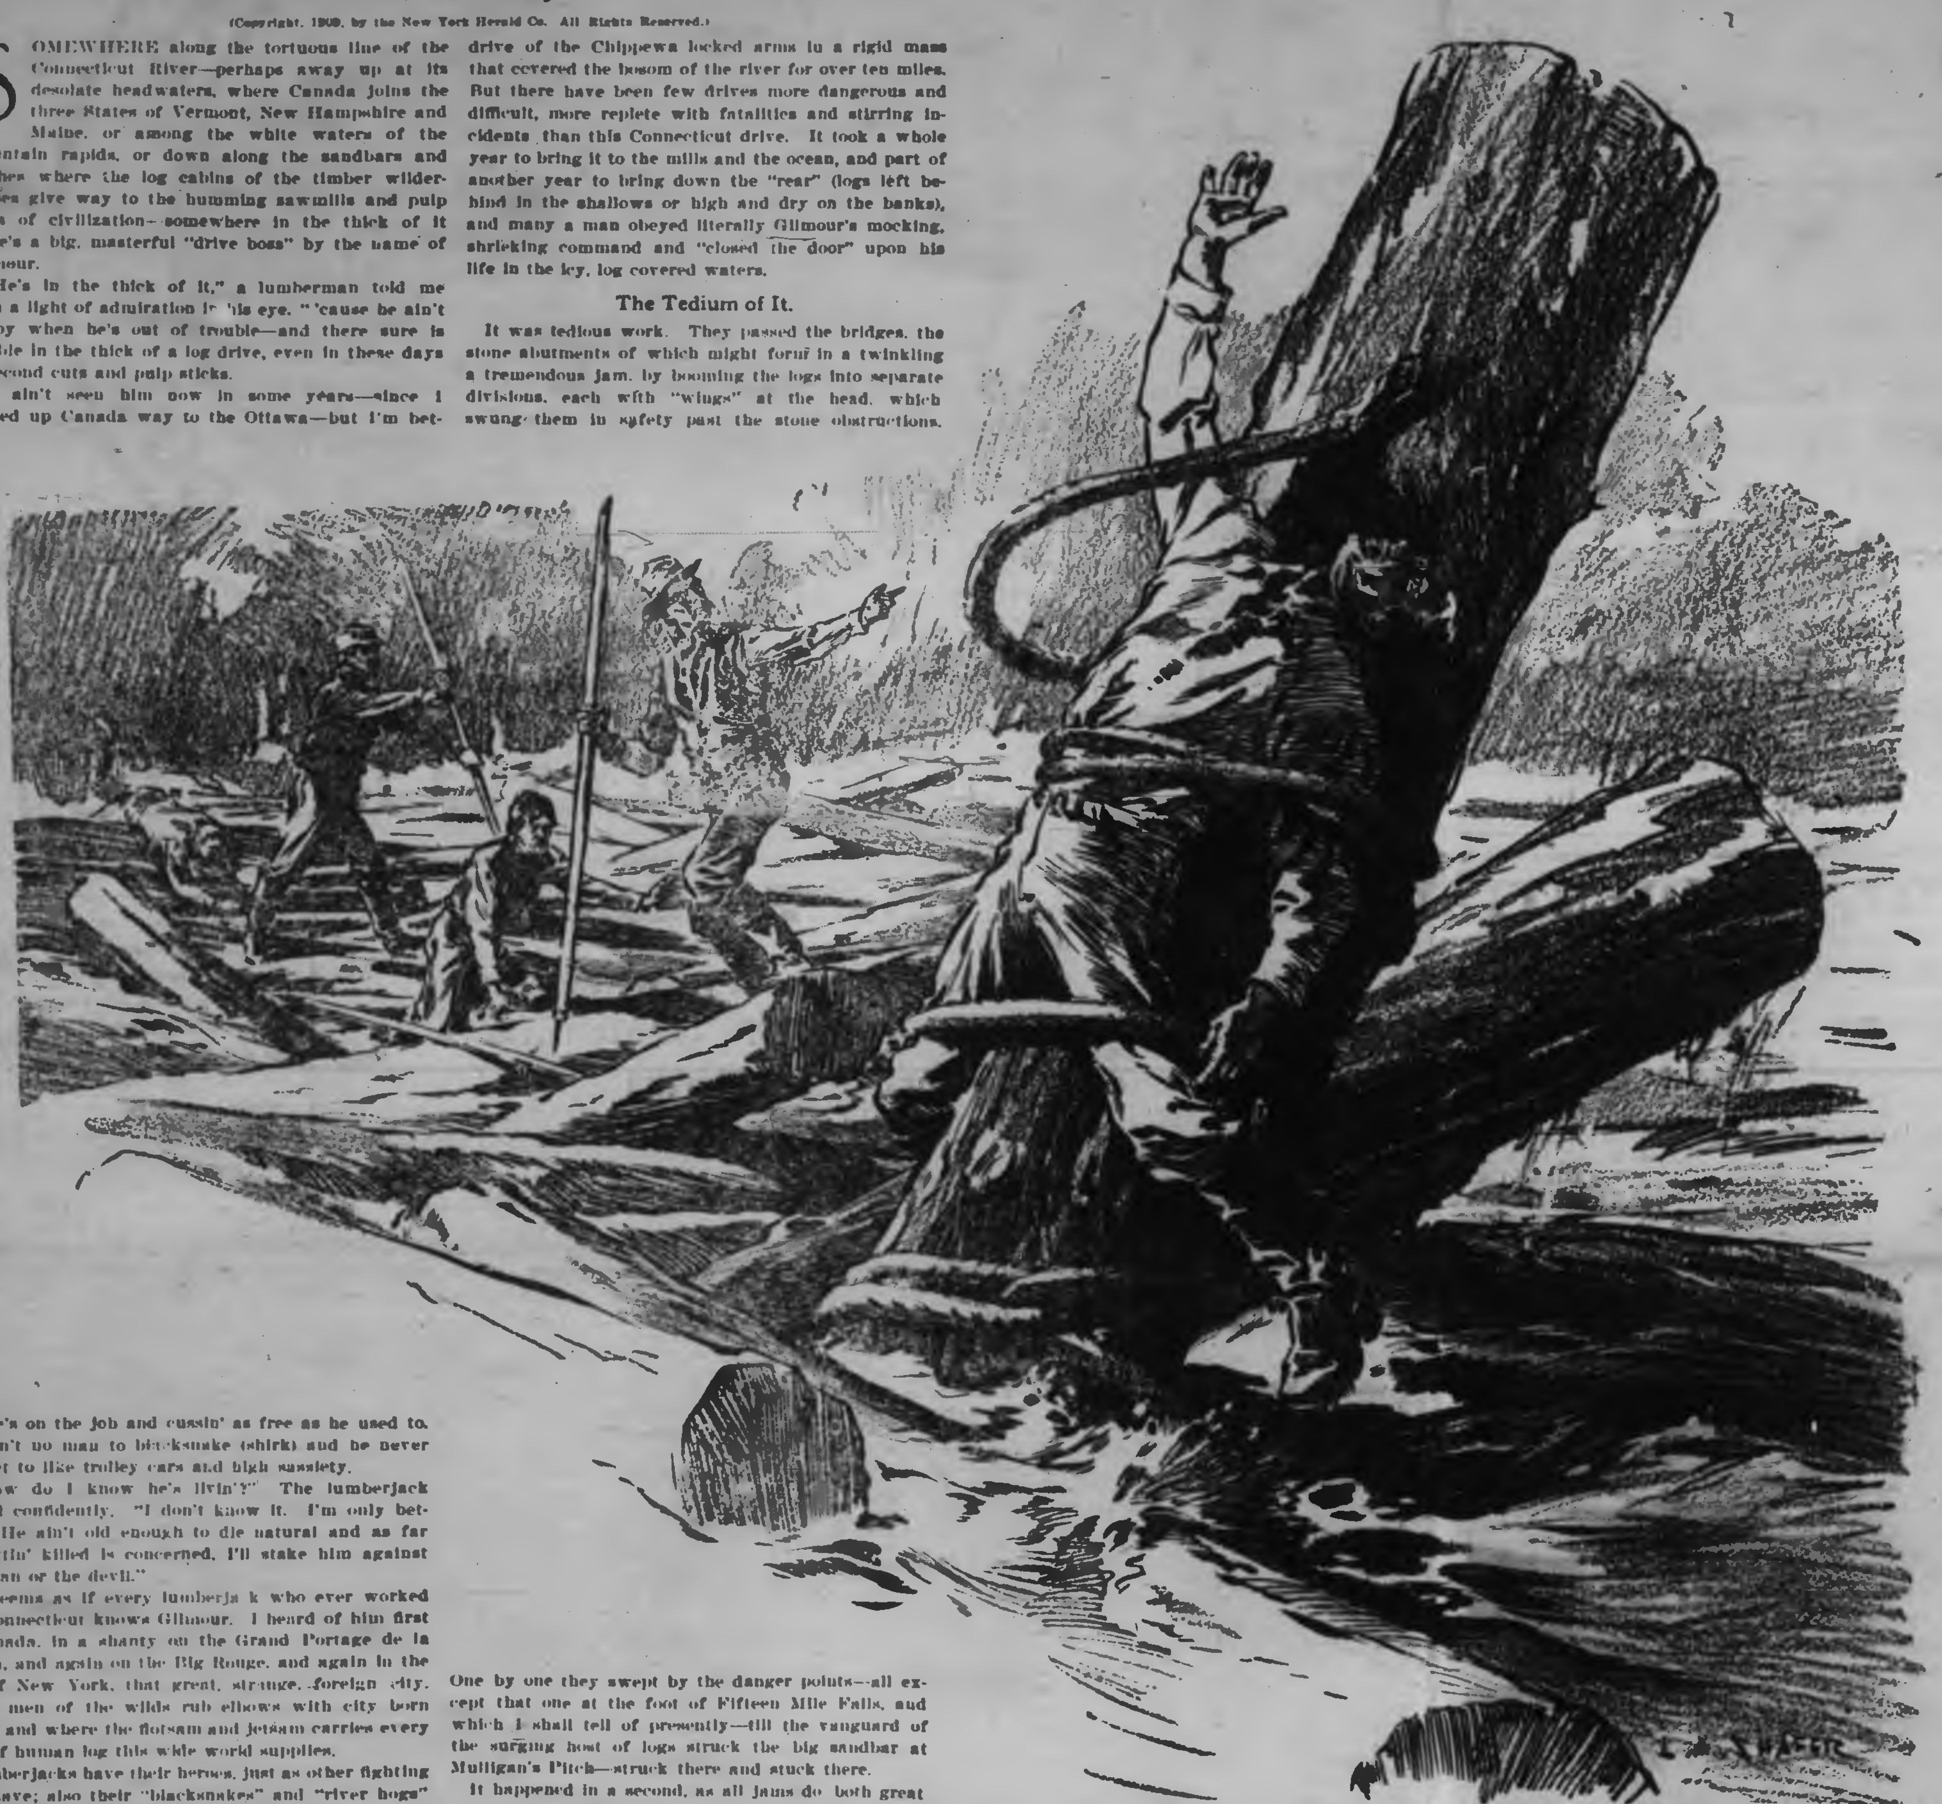
Who, indeed? Gilmour's eyes, narrowing as he looked, asked the question, and they gave the answer—without words. Some stuck their peevies in the logs and held their heads down; others turned their faces away; not one looked at Gilmour or down at the key log.

And who could blame them? It was not a matter of saving lives, but of losing one to save logs. Perhaps Gilmour thought of that, for his expression of fierce contempt left his face and his curses stopped on his lips. He took a stout peevie from a man's willing hand and gave his orders quietly. "Get off the pile," he said quietly, "and stand ready." Then he clambered down to the key log.

No other lumberjack could have done the trick, they all say. How he did it they do not know. It was science, Gilmour's science and Gilmour's eye and muscles—perhaps luck, too. As the pile crumbled they saw him shoot out from under riding the key log. It turned and turned with him, but he rode it like an acrobat, on his knees, ready to spring when it dived. Once and again he went under the water and they never expected him to reappear, but each time that shock of red hair appeared in the turmoil, and when the logs swung lazily around in the still water there was Gilmour riding calmly the key log.

He didn't order them to go down. He went down himself simply because he looked upon it as a necessary part of his work, and it is that sense of duty that made Gilmour and makes other great bosses.

There is another side to it. In riding logs, just as in riding iron on high buildings, a man's life depends constantly upon his fellow workers. Possibly it is the regard in which his men hold him that has extended the life and long service of "One Eye Gilmour."



IT CIRCLED AROUND AND AROUND WITH A FURY AND FORCE THAT SEEMED NEVER SPENDING.

AS THE WOMAN IS.

"I CAN'T marry you, Jack."

This from Kitty to Jack. He gasped at the suddenness of it. For three months they had been affianced, and until now never a cloud had risen to mottle the blue of the heaven so close above them

"W-w-why, Kitty," he stammered, "what do you mean?"

For a moment she was very thoughtful and silent.

"Well," she said, calculating each word carefully. "I don't quite mean what I say, for I suppose I could marry you if necessary. What I mean is that I won't marry you."

"But why not?"

"I have my reasons."

"Have I done anything?"

"No," hesitating.

"Don't you love me any more?"

"Oh, quite as much as I ever did," confidently.

"And you never loved me enough to marry me?"

His voice roughened and there was the color of resentment in it. She had deceived him wilfully.

"I thought I did, Jack," and she held her eyes away from him.

"And—now—and now," he almost sobbed, "it is all over. We shall be as nothing to each other. Oh, Kitty."

"Don't say that, Jack," she protested, encouragingly. "We can be a great deal to each other. We can be friends, and more, Jack."

The note of encouragement fell upon unheeding ears. He shook his head.

"But think a minute, Jack, dear," she urged.

"I don't want to think. I can't think. It's dreadful, wretched, hopeless. Why did you ever say you would marry me?"

"Oh, dear, I don't know. How could I know? I loved you so, Jack, and when you asked me I told you I would before I thought. I have had time to think since then."

He pushed her away from him.

"Don't talk to me," he cried in fierce bitterness. "You have broken my heart, broken it cruelly, and now what can you say for yourself? What can you say?"

She came close to him.

"A little something, I hope, dear," she replied very tenderly, putting her pretty hands on his shoulders as of yore. "Listen, dear. When I told you that I would marry you I did not realize what I was saying. Since then I have learned much. I have learned that you can marry me. Won't that be nicer than"——

But Jack did not wait for further explanation and Kitty did not want him to wait.

WHAT AILED THE GLOVES.

MRS. PINKERTON'S first question was about the gloves.

"Did you exchange them?" she asked.

"No," said Pinkerton, "I didn't."

"There," she complained, "I might have known you would forget it. How careless. I told you, the very last thing before you left the house, to be sure to attend to it. Really, I don't see how men can be so thoughtless."

"I didn't forget," said Pinkerton. "I tried to change them, but they wouldn't take the things back."

"Wouldn't—take—them—back?" she said. "Why not?"

"They said they were soiled."

"Soiled? Well, of all things! If they are they got soiled in their own store. I didn't soil them. I have never had them on my hands. I couldn't get them on. They were half a size too small. They gave me the wrong number. Why didn't you tell them so?"

"I did."

"Whom did you tell?"

"The clerk, and the floorwalker, and everybody who would listen to me."

"And what did they say?"

"They laughed."

"The impudent creatures. I'll never buy a cent's worth in that store again, you see if I do."

"That's just what I said," Pinkerton put in. "I said you never would."

"And what did they say to that?"

"They laughed again."

"Well, that settles it. I never will buy anything there now. Where are the gloves?"

"In my pocket."

"Let me have them, please. Soiled, indeed. I'll see if they are."

Mrs. Pinkerton unwrapped the package. As she took out the gloves she blushed slightly.

"Well," she said.

"Well?" echoed Pinkerton. "What's wrong?"

"N—nothing much," she said, "only this is an old pair of gloves. I cleaned them last week with gasolene. I made a mistake and sent them back instead of the pair I bought yesterday."

Ropes made of various fibres are of very ancient date. Ropes made of palm have been found in Egypt in the tombs of Beni Hassan and on the walls of these tombs is also shown the process of preparing hemp.

At Nimrud, Assyria, a carved slab, showing the siege of a castle, was found, on which a soldier was represented in the act of cutting a rope to which a bucket for drawing water from a well outside the castle was attached.

WAYS OF THE ORIENT.

Queer Ideas About Alleviating Bodily Suffering.

MAGIC CURES OF THE TURKS.

The Treatment to Which Crippled Children Are Subjected—Bunches of Garlic and Strings of Blue Beads as Panaceas Against All Kinds of Ills.

A stone strikes some part of the body of an oriental and inflicts a wound. The train of ideas that this accident would produce in his mind would run something like this: The stone is the cause of pain, the cause of the wound. It is the principal origin of the trouble. But the essence of every origin is hidden, secret and therefore sacred. The stone becomes an awe inspiring fetich. The wound is neglected. The fetich has to be propitiated. This simple illustration is borne out and supported by everyday experience which medical men encounter in the east.

Another instance may be derived from among the lower classes of the Greek population of Constantinople. A child falls and cuts his head. The first thought of the parent is to be sure not to wash and to bind up the wound, still less to call medical assistance, however grave the cut may turn out to be. This is always an afterthought, which very often comes so late that the help of a surgeon can prove of no use.

The first thing the father or mother of the injured child thinks of doing is to pour over the shoulder upon the place of the accident a libation of wine or sugared water and to whisper in performing this some mysterious formula supposed to possess supernatural efficacy against every form of evil.

The Moslems are addicted to the queerest practices for purposes of healing or alleviating bodily pain. A Turk, for instance, in distress or suffering from some disease, however severe, knows of no better remedy than to fix a piece of his dress, torn off with true oriental equanimity, to an iron bar of some saint's tomb or to drink water from a tumbler into which he has previously put a sheet of paper with writings from the Koran. Sometimes he will take a jar, the interior of which has been written all over with strange formulae and signs. He will then fill it with water, wait till these formulae and signs have been thoroughly dissolved and drink the singular solution with an absolute faith in its wonder working efficacy.

Sheltered by the somber cypresses of the great Mohammedan cemetery at Scutari (the ancient Chrysopolis on the Asiatic coast of the Bosporus) there stands in picturesque solitude the tomb of a horse. Every Friday afternoon Turkish mothers carry to that tomb their crippled children to be submitted by a select "khodja" (priests) to an extraordinary course of treatment. These children are dragged, with their diseased limbs dangling over the hillock from one end of the tomb to the other and then back again in the same fashion. The occult influence emanating from this hillock is supposed to be an all efficient panacea.

It is not difficult to trace in this case the crude, imperfect association of ideas. The horse has long been considered an emblem of vigor, typifying as Ruskin says, "the flow and force of life." Hence the belief of the oriental, inherited, no doubt, from the Greeks, in the all conquering virtue and influence of occult and mysterious effluvia which are supposed to emanate constantly from a horse's tomb.

The wearing of a necklace of blue beads or of garlic as a potent means of keeping away disease or of warding off the evil eye is quite a universal matter of sincere belief in the whole of Turkey. This superstition is shared, as is well known, by the lower classes of many a country in civilized eastern Europe. There, however, it is not so universal and flagrant as in the orient.

There is scarcely a house in the Moslem, Greek and Armenian districts of the population of Constantinople which has not hanging above its entrance door a collection of garlic and scarcely a beast of toil which has not attached to some part of it a string of blue beads. Among the uneducated it is impossible to find an individual who does not pin absolute faith to the all healing power of such charms, especially of blue beads, which are supposed to be an unfailing panacea against every possible ill.

Less general is the belief in the east in the baleful influence of the planets Saturn and Mars upon the constitution of the human body, upon its four cardinal humors—blood, phlegm, yellow bile and black bile. These planets are considered by some orientals, especially in the far south, as the unmistakable causes of all sorts of ailments. Woe unto him who begins any work when Saturn or Mars is in the ascendant.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Grain Trade Driven to Canada.

New York, Oct. 1.—Owing to the diversion of western grain to the port of Montreal, New York and Buffalo exporters and steamship interests are urging the Interstate Commerce Commission to investigate American railroad rates. Shippers insist that the exorbitant tariffs levied by the big roads are driving the trade to Canada.

BRITISH EXPEDITION INTO NORTHERN INDIA CERTAIN

Raids on the Part of Waziri Tribesmen on the Northern Posts Are Causing Much Trouble to the Imperial Forces—Expedition May Penetrate to Kabul.

London, Oct. 4.—Another expedition against the warlike Waziri tribesmen, who inhabited the northwest frontier of India, with a strong probability of the extension of the operations into Kabul, is regarded as almost a certainty of the near future by those close in touch with the Indian Government.

The unrest in these regions is pronounced. Small British posts have been subjected to raids for months past, and political and military officers have been killed by the fanatical tribesmen.

Those conversant with the situation are satisfied that the agitation is being engineered from Afghanistan. Arms and ammunition are reaching the tribesmen in alarming quantities from across the Afghan frontier. Mazrullah Khan, brother of the Ameer of Afghanistan, who is notoriously anti-British is becoming increasingly powerful at Kabul and in India he is regarded as a constant menace to peace. Mazrullah is reported to be preaching a holy war among the tribesmen in the British sphere of influence.

The Waziris, whose spirit of independence was in no way dampened by the defeats they suffered at the hands of the last British expedition, are being wrought up by a fanatical mullah named Pojindar, who is now on his way to Kabul to consult with Mazrullah Khan.

The British Government admits fully the seriousness of the situation. For months past it has been trying to stop the importation of arms, and it is quite likely that a blockade of the Persian gulf, through which this traffic is carried on, may be undertaken. Should a war with Afghanistan result, it is considered here that the entente with Russia would make it a much less formidable affair than before, and frontier officers express the belief that a British force could be in Kabul a fortnight after crossing the frontier.

BRITAINS' KING MAY VISIT SPAIN

London, Oct. 4.—It is reported that King Edward is going to satisfy himself by personal observation just what the political conditions in Spain and Portugal really are, and despite the utmost endeavors of his advisers, has determined to visit the Iberian peninsula, probably next spring.

England has large interests in both Spain and Portugal. Spanish Government securities are largely held here. Commercial enterprises in Portugal are backed to a great extent by British capital. The London Government has also a reversionary interest in all the Portuguese colonies. Furthermore an English princess is queen of Spain, and negotiations are pending by which another English princess may become queen of Portugal.

If King Edward's plans are carried out, he will shorten his stay at Biarritz, in Southern France, next spring. He will go from there to Lisbon on the royal yacht, note conditions in the Portuguese capital, and then go to Madrid for a week's stay.

FATAL FALL FROM A TREE

Blenheim, Oct. 4.—Milton, the 20-year-old son of J. D. McPherson, a farmer near here, stopped to climb a hickory-nut tree on his way home from the back farm Saturday afternoon, and fell forty feet to the ground. He was carried home on a wagon and surgeons discovered that his spine had been fractured in two places and dislocated. No hope is entertained for his recovery.

KING EDWARD TO OPEN INSTITUTE

Montreal, Oct. 4.—His Majesty King Edward, in Buckingham Palace, London, will press a button in a couple of weeks which will formerly open the Royal Edward Tuberculosis Institute in Belmont Park, Montreal.

By an ingenious electrical arrangement connections will be made between the palace and the institute, by which the doors will be thrown open and the lights turned on when the King presses the button, and at the same instant the Union Jack will be hoisted on the flagstaff in the institute garden.

Lieut.-Col. Burland, who largely provided the fund for the institute, and the management, say that His Majesty is conferring a great distinction on the institute thus honoring its opening. It will be one of the most up-to-date institutions of its kind in the world.

RIOTUS SCENES IN THE DOUMA

St. Peterhburg, Oct. 4.—Russia's legislative year begins in October. After a conference with Premier Stolypin, a statement has been issued by M. Khomiakoff, speaker of the Douma, announcing the sessional program, which is more important than any since the establishment of the Douma. It says:

"Government bills will be introduced for the Douma's ratification on the creation of local courts, immunity from arrest without a regular warrant, and the responsibility of officials before the ordinary courts."

M. Khomiakoff says he fears violent scenes in the Douma emanating from the extreme right, which is becoming desperate at the prospect of the elected representatives becoming a permanent and important part of the legislative system.

ENDED LIFE WITH CARBOLIC ACID

Hamilton, Oct. 4.—The dead body of Norman Case, with an empty bottle labelled "Carbolic acid" lying beside it, was found yesterday morning in a boathouse near the foot of Wellington street. A note was also found in which the suicide said that he had taken the acid because he was tired of life and requested that A. P. Case, 1 Worth street, Detroit, should be notiefid. Case was about 50 years of age, and had been out of work for some time. He previously worked as a machinist in the Sawyer-Massey Works, and had boarded at the corner of Wellington and Kelly streets. He had no relatives here.

NEW SITE FOR CENTRAL PRISON

London, Ont., Oct. 4.—It is rumored that the location of the new Central prison may be in the vicinity of London.

Mr. Beck stated that the spot chosen was not near the city. From the information obtainable it is thought to be further east.

Another rumor is to the effect that it will be located between Lake Huron and the town of Forest.

C.W. Bennett Dead.

Hamilton, Oct. 4.—Word was received here Saturday of the death of C. W. Bennett, former head of the Bennett theatrical enterprise of Canada, with houses in Hamilton, London, Ottawa, Montreal and Quebec. Mr. Bennett organized this circuit, and recently disposed of his interest to organize a vaudeville circuit in Havana and Cuba. He was stricken with typhoid in New York.

THE NEWS AS TOLD IN DESPATCHES

Cheyenne Indians Restless.

Cheyenne, Wyo., Oct. 4.—Unusual restlessness among 3,000 Cheyenne Indians on the reservation near Sheridan, noticeable for several days, has caused serious apprehension among white settlers in that vicinity. The red men have been engaged for four days in the orgies of the sun and willow dances. The Government recently distributed $40,000 among the Indians.

Mrs. Stetson and the Church.

Boston, Oct. 4.—Mrs. Augusta F. Stetson, of New York, has not been "expelled" or "dismissed" from the Christian Science church, according to a statement from Fred. Barlow, chairman of the mother church committee on publication, but has had her license as a practitioner revoked

Ignored Warnings; Are Killed.

Ashtabula, Ohio, Oct. 4.—F. Hammer, a sailor, and Mrs. Anna Phillips, a widow, disregarded the lowered gates and the warning cry of a flagman and walked upon the track of a Lakeshore grade crossing at Conneaut. Both were instantly killed by a fast train.

Lost Lives In Prairie Fire.

Stettler, Alta., Oct. 4.—The wife of a farmer, Frank Grover, living ten miles southeast of Lee, and two children, lost their lives in a prairie fire.

The mother saw the fire approaching her home and set out to a neighbors with the two children, Katherine and Dorothy, aged four and two, but was overtaken by the flames.

Killed In Brothers' Sight.

Windsor, Oct. 4.—Crushed beneath a heavy mass of timber within sight of two of his brothers, who were working a few feet away, Frank Ratz, 30 years old, a workman employed on the open cut at the Windsor end of the Detroit River tunnel, sustained injuries Saturday morning from which he died an hour later.

Dies After Amputation.

Hamilton, Oct. 4.—Albert Ayers, Bullock's Corners, was fatally injured Saturday afternoon in the quarry of Doolittle & Wilcox, Dundas. He was struck on the leg by a large chunk of rock from a blast. The limb was mangled and had to be amputated, and Ayers succumbed after the operation.

MR JOSEPH CHAMBERLAIN AND HIS SON.

WOMEN WILL TAKE PART IN COMING CAMPAIGN IN ENGLAND

It is Said That 250,000 Will be Active in the Fight—Expected That Campaign Will be Riotous.

London, Oct. 4.—It is expected that when the general election takes place women will play a greater part in the fight than ever before. Some 250,000 will enroll themselves as electioneers. They are members of the Women's Liberal-Unionist and Tariff Reform Associations, the Primrose League, the Women's Liberal Federation, the Women's National Liberal Association, the Women's Social and Political Union, the Women's Freedom League, and the Women's Union of Suffrage Societies.

Their activities will be various. The Primrose League will work against the budget, the Women's Political Union against the Liberal candidates, the Women's Liberal Federation against the Conservatives, and the Suffragette Union against any candidate not favoring the franchise for women.

The opinion exists that it will be the hardest fought and most riotous election ever known in England. Thousands of members of the different women's societies are already enrolled.

The belief that the general election will be held in January grows stronger every day, but it cannot be said that either side shows similar unanimity of opinion as to whether an election will then suit their book. There are undoubtedly grave fears in the Unionist ranks that an election will mean the return of the present Government. The Spectator strongly urges the House of Lords to accept the budget, eight or twelve months' experience of which, it declares, will convert the issues and send the Unionists back with a great triumph. No one, however, seems to doubt that January or February will see an election.

TWO MEN ARE INVOLVED

St. Catharines, Ont., Oct. 4.—Local authorities have succeeded in locating in Toronto Mr. and Mrs. Ketchet, the couple who came here from Toronto with Susie Clark, the girl into whose death a coroner's inquest is being held, and who were married by Rev. Dr. Benson of Welland avenue Methodist Church. They have expressed anxiety about the girl.

The last letter written by deceased to her mother in Napanee has also been found and two written to Mrs. Harry Willford of this city. In one she refers to a man in Port Dalhousie, whom she thinks she will sever relations with, and one called Harry, in Toronto, whom she will thump.

The parents have sent for the body, which was sent to Napanee for interment. Susan Clark was the daughter of Richard Clark, a railroad constructor, now in New Brunswick with McCay and Willford. The family is quite respectable.

A REQUEST FOR UNITED STATES INTERVENTION

St. John's, Nfld., Oct. 4.—The work of the Commercial Cable Co. in putting its underground conduits in the streets of St. John's in order to connect its city offices with the place of landing of its cable was stopped Saturday by the Newfoundland authorities.

This renders it necessary for the cable company to operate its cable in a hut on the seashore, in one of the wildest and most desolate places. The cable operators must now travel night and day to and fro, between the shore and the city, over a most difficult and dangerous country.

The cable company has decided to ask the American Government to intervene.

The order is a result of serious complications between the recently-elected Morris Government and the Cable Co., over the permanency of an agreement entered into between the company and the late Bond ministry.

Wheat Yield Good.

Winnipeg, Oct. 4.—Threshing returns in western Canada are turning out much better than expected, and some heavy yields of wheat are reported from many districts in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta.

Several prominent grain men have expressed the opinion that the total wheat yield will exceed one hundred and thirty million bushels, of the very best quality.

COOK TO ADDRESS CANADIAN CLUB

New York, Oct. 4.—Dr. Cook set at rest yesterday all speculation as to the probable acceptance of an invitation to both himself and Commander Peary to be guests at a dinner to be given by the Canadian Club on Dec. 3. It was thought one or both of the explorers would find occasion to decline the invitation. He did not know or care he said whether Peary was to be present.

Peary did not care to say yesterday whether he would attend the dinner, but intimated he would probably not be able to accept.

Ministerial Association of Peterborough Passes Strong Resolution—Good Name of Peterborough Has Suffered Greatly.

The following resolution was carried unanimously by a standing vote at one of the largest meetings in the history of the association—this morning—

Resolved: "That we, the members of the Peterborough Ministerial Association, assembled on October 4th, do put ourselves on record as being deeply distressed and humiliated by the fact that during the past week perjury has been openly and shamelessly committed in our city, and that consequently the good name of Peterborough has suffered greatly, not only in the province, but throughout the country. Further, we would deeply deplore the conditions which tempt weak men to such dishonorable and conscienceless action."

IMPORTANT RULING ONTARIO BANK CASE

On Saturday, before Referee Kappele, counsel on both sides agreed that they would leave the referee to decide as to whether the agreement between the Bank of Montreal and the Ontario Bank was valid as against the shareholders of the latter bank. This agreement saves long legal arguments and delays and will facilitate the appeal to the higher courts, as no matter what Mr. Kappele's decision may be, there is sure to be an appeal by the side which loses.

He is quoted to crediting his indictment to Theodore Roosevelt's desire to find a suitable "scapegoat" for the panic of 1907 and its effects in which Morse's fortune of $22,000,000 was swept away.

WOODSTOCK CHINAMAN IN TROUBLE

Stratford, Oct. 4.—A Woodstock Chinaman, Charlie Lee Hing, who formerly conducted a laundry business in this city, is being brought back to this city to stand trial for alleged assault on a 13-year-old orphan girl of this city. While here the Chinaman kept her employed in his laundry at large wages. Lately he has kept a restaurant in Woodstock, and by a letter to the child offering big wages and saying there were other girls in his employ, he induced her to go to Woodstock last Monday. The child returned to Stratford Friday, and doctors found she had been drugged.

SMALL BOY PUT OFF TRAIN AT MIDNIGHT

Almonte, Oct. 4.—To be put off the "Soo" train in the middle of the night without friends or money and miles from home seems to have been the experience of Master Arthur Harvey, a nine-year-old boy, who says his home is in Cobalt.

From the story told by the boy, it would appear that he and his brother, who reside with their parents in Cobalt, were attending school at Rigaud, Que., when the older boy returned to Cobalt and for some unknown reason the youth, who is still in Almonte, attempted to follow his brother home, and, on account of lack of funds, did not get any further than this town.

MAY CHARGE CONSPIRACY TO KEEP UP THE PRICES

Strikers in Glace Bay Will Swear Out Information for the Arrest of the Coal Operators of Nova Scotia on a Charge of Boosting the Price of Coal.

Halifax, N.S., Oct. 4.—Sensational developments are expected in the strike situation in Cape Breton to-day.

Two weeks ago, the Dominion Coal Co. ordered the arrest of Dan McDougall, president of the United Mine Workers of America in Nova Scotia, on a charge of libel for inserting advertisements in La Patrie of Montreal, giving an alleged libelous description of conditions at the company's collieries at Glace Bay.

Since then the company have had warrants issued for the arrest of Patterson and Bonsfield, also leading union officials.

The U. M. W. claim they have information that the company intends to make wholesale arrests with a view of breaking the strike. To offset this move, the U.M.W. officials will swear out information for the arrest of the coal operators of this province. They will charge conspiracy among the operators in keeping up the price of coal, claiming the different companies here have an agreement to charge a uniform rate per ton.

The U.M.W. has laid information for the arrest of Alex. Johnson, ex-M.P.P., for Cape Breton, on charge of criminal libel. Johnson is proprietor of The Sydney Record, which has, throughout the strike, sided with the company, and has made some attacks on the U.M.W.

For a time Snowden's life was despaired of.

POPE PIUS CHAFES OVER THE WINTER

During one of his weekly visits to Rome he told the Pope how he regretted that his holiness was forced to remain in Rome throughout the summer.

The Pope answered: "Oh, I do not mind it at all. In fact, I prefer summer to winter, as then the doctor obliges me to keep to my room, and thus helps me to realize that I am a prisoner, while in summer my daily walks in the garden make me almost forget the sad fact. Besides, I am fully reconciled to my fate."

GIRLS MUSTN'T WRITE NEGROES

Berlin, Oct. 4.—The Government has issued a warning to parents and teachers regarding the exchange of of letters between German girls and negroes in the German African colonies.

While in most instances such correspondence has been harmless, the official communication says, the custom still is to be deplored. In a majority of cases the correspondence was begun by German girls as an odd experience, their principal object being to receive African curiosities and photographs, and letters from a "black prince." The girls also have sent their photographs to Africa so that in the houses of many negroes in the colonies, hang the pictures of young German women of good family.

This has been seriously objected to by Germans residing in the colonies.

THE LATE ELECTION TRIAL

There is a universal demand for a clearing of the political atmosphere in West Peterborough. That there is wholesale lying on one side or the other is the general conviction. The imputation resting upon West Peterborough is of the worst kind. Those who should bear the odium should be found out. It is not fair that the whole riding should be held up to the contempt and scorn of Canada. A poll of public opinion shows that a governmental inquiry is the only possible outcome. "We must have it" is the cry of both parties. "Let us run this terrible business to the ground and find out where the blame and the horror of it rightly lies."

As the Montreal Star said, "A national crisis" is centred here and those who are guilty should be punished or where will it all end.

OCTOBER WEATHER

If it were not for the fact that the year is dying, or to speak more accurately, vegetal nature is for the season casting off her raiment in readiness for bringing forth the new, October would be the loveliest month in the year. June is full of the bounty the greenness and juiciness of teeming nature, but it is doubtful if the loveliness of promise is quite equal to the loveliness of fulfilment. The "amber days" of autumn, the anticipation of the winter season, the mystery of apparently dying nature, which rises again upon the resurrection morn of Spring when his majesty, the sun has turned this way again. The month of October is, however, an unpleasant month for those who dread smoke. The irritation of the nasal and throat passages by pungent smoke prepares the way for the ills of winter. Physicians leave no doubt in us on this point. Would it not be well to see that the autumn season should not be turned into a season of smoking leaves and perpetual local gloom?

AMERICAN PREACHERS

American preachers are alleging that American people no longer as a body believe in the power of God to punish those who ignore Him as the rewarder of the faithful and the punisher of the unfaithful. There have been periods of scepticism before but the have been merely patches of desert in a landscape of extended beauty and spiritual fertility. At the present time, however, sands from the waste places are said to have blown far and wide producing general sterility. The result has been that a belief in God does not prevail. The alternative is that men say what suits their convenience or sense of personal honor, an unsafe guide where personal interest is strong. That men have, however, ceased to believe in God, is not in Canada such a generally prevailing fact. That a supreme power had set the universe moving is conceded even if it stopped there. The new religion aims to show that how it was all done is a fact to be ascertained by scientific research just as a movement of the planets which were one supposed to be something quite different, the development of creation which at one time was supposed to have been once and for all and not an extended and varying process. Science, however, does not provide a sanction or a system of punishment likely to make the unscientific, careful, as a substitute for the dread of punishment and it will be, probably, less effective than the present idea.

WHAT IF THERE HAD BEEN NO "SAW-OFFS"

The Montreal Star.

The Ottawa Free Press is moved by the "fine feeding" which the election trials we are having are providing for those who like political scandal, to renew its demand that the "saw-off" be removed from the political workshop and all charges of corruption be allowed to go to trial. It points out that there were twenty-one actions entered after the last elections, of which only six are going through; and wants to be informed whether anyone believes that these pilloried six were "more guilty than their fellows." Speaking with the authority of a party organ it says:—

"The fact is, and it cannot be denied, that, as stated in the Free Press, last winter, the party managers got together and 'sawed-off' one election petition against the other, regardless altogether of the effect upon public morality or of electorial law; and that if it had not been for the persistence, or, perhaps it would be better to say, the obstinacy of two petitioners in two provinces, the public would never have had any inkling of the methods practiced in the last election on both sides of politics.

"There can be no gainsaying the fact that the practical general 'saw-off' in Quebec province was due to the influence of two prominent politicians, one resident in Quebec and the other in Montreal. Nobody who knows the facts will deny that prominent men in each party in Ontario desired to avoid the scrutiny of the election courts. Any nobody who knows Manitoba can fail to see a fine Italian hand, from one party or the other, which prevented the trial of the election petitions there."

The "saw-off" is one of the frankest confessions that our politicians make of mutual depravity. They accuse each other of long lists of political crimes; and then they arrange not to go to trial. There may be people who believe—in spite of the Ottawa Free Press's cynicism—that all the cases "sawed off" have been found to be as pure as baking powder; but it would be a shame to secure and publish the addresses of these credulous ones, lest the "gold brick" artists get hold of them. But if they are not pure—if the sitting members have been corruptly elected—then the people of Canada are subjected to a great wrong which no balancing of the parties can make up. There is an obvious and easy cure for the "saw off" if it were only adopted. It is only necessary to enact that no petition against the return of any member can be made except by a public official charged with that duty, and that he must be put in possession of enough evidence to warrant a trial before he can act. This would mean that both parties would have to collect their evidence and submit it to an official before they could put any seat in peril; and that then the official would be in a position to go on with the trial in each case, no matter how eager the parties might subsequently be to "saw it off." In that case the parties would have to do any "sawing off" before they went to the official at all; and if the law made it quite easy for cases to be given the official and the fact kept secret until the time had elapsed for entering other cases, the parties would never, never, trust each other under an agreement so easily broken.

The "saw off" is a disgrace. It would be unthinkable in the case of public men with a high sense of public honor. But we are very apt to have it just as long as it is possible and the people do not take enough interest in the matter to punish it. If, however, the suppressed election trials had revealed such a condition of mutual dishonour as is alleged in the West Peterborough case, we are at all events spared some considerable disgust. When the final results of the West Peterborough trial are known, and we learn to what extent punishment will follow exposure, then we will be better able to judge whether it would have paid us to wallow through the mire.

There was no saw-off in West Peterborough.

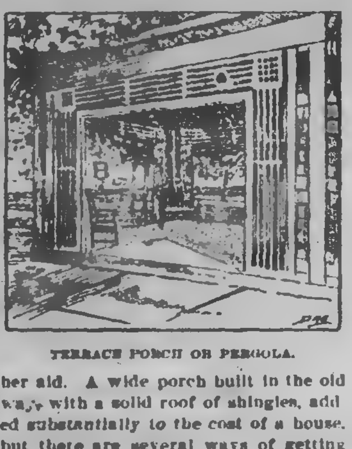
THE HOUSE BEAUTIFUL

Solid Comfort Obtained by Taste and Clever Planning.

A FINE TERRACE PERGOLA.

Open Air Living Rooms Are Attractive Places—The Tea Table Out of Doors Suggestive of Pleasant Summer Afternoons.

When a woman plans her summer home she is very likely to see first a porch, abnormally wide. Her fancy plays lightly with window seats, steamer chairs, hammocks and awnings and pauses contentedly beside a tinkling fountain rimmed with ferns, the center of a cool inclosed court. Alas and alack, she is often brought to an unpleasant halt in these imaginations by the reflection that these things are expensive and consequently beyond her means, says the Delineator. I shall endeavor to prove that they are not necessarily so, provided she brings judgment and good taste to her aid. A wide porch built in the old way with a solid roof of shingles, added substantially to the cost of a house, but there are several ways of getting round this point. Today we realize that we do not always desire a solid porch roof, and our porch may be as wide as we choose to have it when it is covered only with supported beams over which vines are trained, or a terrace porch may be built, which means merely that a floor is laid and surrounded with a low railing. Over this an awning may be stretched from the house to the edge of the porch and secured there by iron uprights or by slender wooden posts. Where these posts are twined with vines they are not an unattractive addition to the house, even when the awning is not in use and is rolled up out of sight.



TERRACE PORCH OR PERGOLA.

The most desirable floor for a terrace porch is one of cement, and in this case a rail is unnecessary. Small trees in tubs and potted shrubs may be set on the outer edge and the effect with a red and white striped awning overhead, with low basket chairs holding cushions of turkey red calico and with a few small rugs of red and white grass matting is gay and brilliant, yet it will readily be seen that here is not half the expense of the old fashioned roofed in porch.

If a small house is planned with two wings at right angles and a pergola is built across in front the fourth side may be filled in with a latticed wall for vines. This, when the shrubbery plays a proper part, gives a most delightful inclosure. It is then an easy matter and not an expensive one to have the water pipes so arranged that one end sends up a spray in the center of the court to fall back in a cement basin. Ferns will flourish happily if they are planted to catch a continuous sprinkling of this spray. Water lilies will also readily grow in the basin and papyrus and various Egyptian grasses will do well. Birds will seek such a fountain and make it their bathing place, and it will be found a center of interest throughout the summer. The impulse for open air living is one of the healthiest and happiest fancies that ever attacked society, and it is well to encourage it by rendering our out of door living rooms as attractive as possible. This may be accomplished by the use of willow and rustic furniture, by bright cushions of East India cotton and the always serviceable denims. The pretty accessories of a tea table in blue and white embroidered linen are delightfully suggestive of pleasant summer afternoons and the cosy good fellowship of tea drinking out of doors.

A Japanese Salad.

New ways of serving familiar dishes are always interesting, and it was an experience to find cucumbers sliced lengthwise instead of crosswise. The cook who did this claimed that it avoided part of the seeds and the hard center, and she was right. Another cook, a Japanese, had an amusing way in making salad of slicing the cucumbers or boiled potatoes very thin and laying them together on the lettuce in the shape of the original cucumber or potato. Salad dressing, with a bit of chopped parsley added, was then put over them. This requires deft fingers, but makes quite so attractive arrangement of a commonplace food. On the other hand, in England, where the long cucumbers are much used, a whole one, unpeeled, is sometimes put on the table, and the diner is expected to cut off such a piece as he desires, peeling, slicing and dressing it himself. This, it is explained, keeps the vegetable much fresher than when it is sliced and allowed to stand until the meal is ready.

Marshmallows toasted on the ends of sharp pointed sticks make a tasty finish to any meal.

Amos Baker, the well-known Pictou canner, is dead, aged 44, of Nova Scotia.

Woman's World

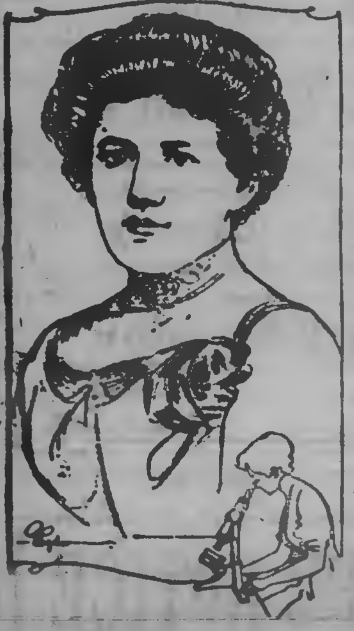
A WOMAN SCIENTIST.

Who is Neither Old Nor Bespectacled, but Fair and Under Thirty.

At the National museum, in Washington, snuggled away in a musty corner in sight of petrified elephants and mummies, is a young girl scientist standing shoulder to shoulder with gray haired men who have spent their lives in research work. She is Evelyn Mitchell, a small, vivacious young woman who, to all appearances, might be almost anything else in the world but a scientist who has won an international reputation. It has not been many months since the scientific world of two continents were talking of Miss Mitchell's book, "Mosquito Life," and it is difficult to imagine that the little wisp of a woman, standing blithely on the very bright sunshiny side of thirty, is an acknowledged authority on mosquitoes and many other things about which the majority of girls know absolutely nothing.

Miss Mitchell started out catching bugs and bats and frogs and such things when she was a toddler up in her parents' home in New Jersey. That she was the terror of the household, which could not understand the close relationship of such things with a happy home life, goes without speaking. But she kept right along at it and has worked her way through the ranks of scientists to a position that is unique among women of the world.

Miss Mitchell took her A. B. at Cornell in 1902, and since that time she has achieved a remarkable place in the world of scientific literature by a series of writings, which would lead the reader to the conclusion that the author must be one who had devoted a very long, instead of an exceptionally short, life to scientific research. They are remarkable for the depth into which they go and demonstrate the unusual character of their young author's mind. Among them are a number of technical entomological articles, treatises on paleontology, ichthyology and a number of nature study stories. Just now Miss Mitchell is further improving her time and adding to the interest of scientific study by research into the life history of the gnats. She is a member of the Biological society of Washington, the American Association For the Advancement of Science, the Entomological Society of Ameria and the National Health league.



MISS EVELYN MITCHELL.

All of this would naturally give one the impression that Miss Mitchell is, after all, a scientist after the popular idea. She is not. She is a college girl who started out to get something, and she has got it right here in the great scientific center of the United States. She does not wear spectacles or queer clothes. Neither does she go out with a long pole with a net on the end of it and chase butterflies over the green pastures in and around Washington. Instead, she maintains a delightful little bachelor apartment in Harvard street, where she is surrounded by each and every one of the attractive little appointments which spelled "home" to her up at Cornell university. Her walls are lined, not with pictures of bugs and beetles and cocoons, but with pictures of college life, snapshots of girls who were her classmates, scenes in and around the big university grounds on the hills of Ithaca, and here and there another unique reminder of the days when she was laying the foundation for her future. Dance programs, little records of college suppers, football games, baseball games, and boat races face one at every turn. But bettle bugs and caterpillars, never!

Miss Mitchell had a good time when she was at college, and had a goodly share in the regular program of pranks that are always pulled off. She is an expert at getting up a college "feed," and her little apartment is open house to her friends. One of them who is a Mitchell enthusiast, and who doesn't know the first thing about what "larvae" and "pupae" might mean, declares it is one of the real joys of her life to spend an afternoon or evening with the girl who is a scientist of the first water, but who never tells anybody about it.

Maud—Would you marry a widower?
Ethel—No, I wouldn't. The man I marry I am going to tame myself.—

Fully Appreciated.

Raymond, aged five, returned from Sunday school in a state of evident excitement. He strutted around the room as if about to burst with importance. The sympathetic eye of his mother was not slow to observe this.

"What's the matter, Raymond?" she asked.

"Oh, mother," exclaimed the small boy, his eyes sparkling, "the superintendent said something awful nice about me in his prayer this morning."

"What did he say?"

"He said, 'O Lord, we thank thee for food and Raymond.'"—Woman's Home Companion.

A Strong Guarantee.

"Are you sure these eggs are fresh?" asked the woman, eying them suspiciously.

"Yes, ma'am," replied the grocer, with emphasis. "I guarantee those eggs. If any of them aren't good I'll make 'em good!"—Lippincott's.

Good Advice.

He—But I tell you what it is, Maud, if your father is at all unreasonable I shall put my back to the wall and—

She—Keep it there. That would be the safest position.—Kansas City Journal.

Worked the Collector.

M. Chauchard, the great French picture collector, was always adding to his pictures, and the higher the price the more anxious he was to secure the painting. A dealer one day offered him the "Vache Blanche," by Tryon. M. Chauchard was told he could have it for £1,600.

"It must be an imitation," he said. "Take it away."

The dealer told some of his colleagues, and they promised to get him £8,000 for the same picture if he would split the difference with them.

"Go ahead," he replied.

A few days later a Russian prince (?) visited M. Chauchard's galleries and remarked on leaving that he was delighted, but it was a pity the collection did not include an example of Tryon's work.

M. Chauchard, whose vanity was wounded by the remark, wrote to the dealer, "Bring me the 'Vache Blanche.'"

The reply was it was too late; it had been sold to a collector.

The millionaire connoisseur said he must have it at any price. He finished by securing it, but it cost him £10,000. —St. James Gazette.

A Woman Who Proved Her Worth When the Test Came.

By RICHARD BAKER SHELTON.

[Copyright, 1909, by Associated Literary Press.]

The rain came down in sheets. The wet pavements glistened as if with a recent and thorough polishing. In the wide front window of the club Blake and Johnson burned good tobacco and listened, with a feeling of supreme content, to the beating of the rain against the panes.

"I'm sorry," said Johnson slowly, as if he had weighed the words with extreme care before uttering them.

"Sorry?" Blake repeated, with a surprised start. "Why, look here, I thought you'd be the first to congratulate me."

"I don't congratulate you," said Johnson flatly.

Blake's face suddenly hardened. "Why not?" he demanded in crisp tones.

Johnson studied thoughtfully for a moment the cigar he was twirling in his fingers. Then he smiled.

"It's all too obvious," said he.

"Don't speak in riddles," said Blake sharply.

"Well, then," the other went on, "if you want me to be plain I will be—brutally plain. I can't congratulate you, Tommy, because it's all so ghastly apparent that you've been played for a good thing. I haven't a doubt her mother is gloating over the match. Tommy, you're deserving of better things. You, with your good nature and your big heart, ought to marry a woman—a woman"—

He paused suddenly, evidently a bit surprised at his own temerity.

"Go on," said Tommy Blake coldly.

"Well, you ought to marry some one who would care for you for your own sterling qualities. Can't you see the length of your nose, boy? What show would you have had with her if you hadn't been the catch of the season? None, sonny; not a ghost of a chance. They've played you for a good thing, Tommy—a good thing. That's why my congratulations on your engagement to Ethel Carrington aren't forthcoming."

"You're mistaken," said Blake.

"Am I?" said Johnson quietly. "I wish to heaven I were."

"You are," said Blake in the same tone. "You are. Why, confound it, man, I ought to give you an everlasting good thrashing for even hinting such a thing. The girl's my fiancee, and—and"—

SHE TORE THE LETTER INTO BITS AND FLUNG IT FROM HER.

"Thrash away, if you like, Tommy," said Johnson calmly. "Only remember you asked me not to talk in riddles."

"You blamed old misanthrope!" said Blake, with some show of temper. "You—you—hard shelled old cynic! I suppose you'd swear any girl I got engaged to had an eye only for my money."

Johnson shook his head slowly. "No, I wouldn't, and you know it," he declared. "But the Carringtons, Tommy—well, I'm afraid I know them a bit better than you do."

Blake sat silently watching the stream of passersby on the gleaming sidewalks for a time, then suddenly threw away his half burned cigar and pushed back his chair.

"Good night," said he curtly and stalked stiffly out of the room.

There wasn't a word of truth in what Johnson had said, he told himself over and over again. Johnson was a woman hater anyway. He would have said the same of any woman. It wasn't Ethel Carrington in particular. Yet, despite all his mental arguments on the matter, Blake was vaguely disturbed in his mind as he called a cab and drove uptown to his apartments, for, more than he would admit to himself, Blake was prone to rely on Johnson's judgment. But Johnson was off in this case—surely, he was way off!

Ethel Carrington was the finest, the truest woman in all the world, and Johnson was a dyspeptic croaker. There the matter must end.

Two weeks later Blake again sat before the window in the club. Again it was a rainy day, and again the pavements gleamed in the wet mist. Blake was quite alone in the room. His face was drawn and haggard. Great rings showed around his eyes.

He turned as he heard a step behind him and saw Johnson coming toward him.

"You were right," said Blake. "O Lord, you were right."

Johnson very quietly drew a chair beside the distraught man and sat down.

"Maybe you'll feel a bit better if you tell me about it, Tommy," he said.

Blake smoked furiously for a moment. "When the crash came," he said at length, "I was almost glad at first. I told myself it would disprove all those things you had said. Of course I was intending to release the girl. I was in honor bound to do it. But I thought—I was fool enough to think she cared as much for me with my fortune wiped off the boards as she did before."

Johnson said nothing.

"It was yesterday morning that the news of the wiping out of all I had in the world was published," Blake went on. "At 10 o'clock I got a letter from Mrs. Carrington—a special delivery letter, mind you. She said that Ethel was too broken up to write personally, but under the circumstances—O Lord, you know well enough what it was without my going into all the horrible details."

"This may prove a blessing in disguise, Tommy," said Johnson, but Blake, with drooping head, was shuffling out of the room.

* * * * * * *

Blake, moping in his apartment an hour later, was summoned to the office by a message that a lady was waiting for him. He went down to find Ethel Carrington, rather wet and very white, in the reception room.

"You!" he cried in dazed surprise. "You!"

"I—I couldn't be hedged in by conventions when I was so worried about you," she said hurriedly, "so I came straight here. What is wrong? Why have you stayed away for two days without sending me a word?"

Blake stared. Then a light of understanding came into his eyes.

"How much has your mother told you?" he asked.

"Nothing," she said, looking at him with widening eyes.

"Ethel," he said slowly, "I have committed the unpardonable sin—unpardonable in the eyes of the world today. I have lost every cent of my money."

"Is that all?" she said in relief.

Blake stared.

"Why didn't you come and tell me, then?" she demanded.

Silently Blake drew her mother's letter from his pocket and handed it to her. She read it through with deepening color and an angry light in her eyes. As she finished she turned to him, and at the look she flashed upon him his heart began to pound madly.

"What is left from the wreck?" she asked steadily.

"Nothing."

She tore the leter into bits and flung it from her. "My cab is waiting," she said, her face crimson, but her eyes bravely meeting his. "We'll drive down and get the license first and then to St. Luke's rectory. You'll need me more than ever now."

Blake would have demurred, but a look in her eyes stopped him.

In the cab he turned to her with a smile of complete triumph.

"After we come from the rectory I want to stop at the club for a moment," he said. "There's a certain old misanthrope there that's got the shock of his life coming."

Wesley Douglas, of Alnwick township, Hastings County, ended his life with a shot gun.

AFTER FOUR YEARS OF MISERY

Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Baltimore, Md.—"For four years my life was a misery to me. I suffered from irregularities, terrible dragging sensations, extreme nervousness, and that all gone feeling in my stomach. I had given up hope of ever being well when I began to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Then I felt as though new life had been given me, and I am recommending it to all my friends."—Mrs. W. S. FORD, 1938 Lansdowne St., Baltimore, Md.

The most successful remedy in this country for the cure of all forms of female complaints is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It has stood the test of years and to-day is more widely and successfully used than any other female remedy. It has cured thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, and nervous prostration, after all other means had failed.

If you are suffering from any of these ailments, don't give up hope until you have given Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial.

If you would like special advice write to Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., for it. She has guided thousands to health, free of charge.

HOUSES IN FEZ.

The Roofs in the Early Evening Are Exclusively For Women.

In Fez, the capital of Morocco, most of the houses consist of several stories, each being provided with a light veranda running round it and connecting the rooms. All the windows and doors open out into the patio, or courtyard, the window openings in the upper stories being covered with close trelliswork. All the houses have flat roofs, with a wall some four to six feet high running around, and from 4 p. m. until sunset the roofs are given over to the ladies exclusively, who can then walk about and take the fresh air without being seen by any of the opposite sex. This reservation is a law which is never broken, and no man would be guilty of being seen on his or on any other roof during the forbidden hours. Owing to the fact that the women of the house are not allowed to be seen by any other man than their lord and master all domestic offices are situated away from the house proper. In many of the larger houses, besides the water fountains, others playing scent or scented water are to be found. Sections of the courtyard also are slightly sunk, and these portions are filled with scented oil, which is used to perfume the rooms. The Moors are exceptionally particular in discarding their foot gear before entering a room or crossing a rug or carpet. They even change slippers before entering the courtyard from the street. Thus the houses are kept beautifully clean and sweet and are not, as many people would suppose, musty or close.

WATER SPLASHERS.

A Swedish View of English Life and Manners.

A sharp tongued correspondent of a Swedish paper, the Svenska Dagbladet, thus comments on some of the peculiarities of English life and manners.

English cleanliness is much spoken of. The Englishman must have a great deal of water to wash with. A quantity must be splashed all over the room, and in particular there must be a great pool near the washstand. When an Englishman washes his face, in seventy-eight cases out of a hundred he simply takes the water in his hands and blows it all over the floor.

Englishmen are mad over fresh air. The expression may seem ironical to those who know how in London one does not so much breathe the air as swallow it. Tramway car windows stand open the whole year round, and there is no country like England for the prosperity of dealers in cough and cold medicines.

Hygiene may appear to be perfect in London, but they still say that much remains to be done. Spitting is not allowed in the parks, at least not near the seat. I have found that one of the cheapest and best places for spitting is the British museum, where it costs only $10. On the Great Eastern railway it does not cost more the first time, but afterward the price is $25 a time, in direct opposition to the usual business principles of discount.

Inhaling Water.

Undoubtedly the majority of bathers who are drowned meet their deaths from cramp. Cramp is liable to seize anybody at any moment, and when it comes in deep water few swimmers have sufficient presence of mind to turn on their backs and wait quietly until the attack has departed. So they go under. But there is another danger quite as imminent as cramp, though it is probably less known. This is water inhaling. A swimmer or even a wader is always liable to inhale spray through his nostrils, which, passing through the pharynx and behind the epiglottis or windpipe guard, gets into the windpipe and causes death. As one would expect, water inhaling is almost wholly confined to the sea and very rarely occurs in fresh water. All the same, it may happen anywhere.—Exchange.

Dolphin and Flying Fish.

A ship was lying at anchor at Boca Grande, says the Punta Gorda Herald, lately when the crew observed a dolphin chasing a flying fish, both coming directly toward the ship. On nearing the vessel the flier arose in the air and passed over the bow just abaft the foremast. As it did so the dolphin went under the ship and, coming up on the other side, sprang from the water and caught the flying fish on "the fly" just as it was curving gracefully down in its descent to the water.

Fooled His Doctor.

The late Rev. H. R. Haweis, who was equally notable as preacher, journalist, lecturer and musician, suffered from a dangerous hip disease when a boy of nine. The celebrated Sir Benjamin Brodie, who was asked if a change of scene would benefit the afflicted youth, answered, "Take him anywhere—it does not matter."

Haweis lived to laugh at his doctor and half a century later, after a life of exceptional industry, he was in vigorous health.

Practical.

Walking leisurely around the Egyptian sphinx, the traveler from America inspected it from all points of view. "It's a shame," he exclaimed, "to leave the thing in that shape. If I had it out in Chicago I could clap a good cement nose on that face so quick it would make its head swim!"—Chicago Tribune.

Grass Baskets.

To restore the fragrance of baskets made from sweet scented grass after they have apparently lost it, plunge them into boiling water, removing them almost instantly.

The Sheep Creek Valley mining country near Nelson, B.C., is attracting considerable attention out west.

FOR THE LADY WHO CALLS

The lady who has a large circle of acquaintances always finds it a difficult matter to keep track of the reception days of her friends and often mistakes are made, that might have been avoided if care were taken to make a record of such days. And then there are the teas, at homes, and parties to be remembered too and when a hostess is planning an affair, she is always worried lest she overlook some one who has extended hospitality to her some time previous. To avoid these mistakes, a social register has been issued by the Review, that will be a boon to the busy lady. There are pages for each day of the month on which the record of the calls received and paid with the address of the visitor appear, then there are pages for social engagements, visits paid, addresses and memoranda, all of which prove very valuable data to have. These books are on sale at all the book stores and at the Review Office for 50 cents and there has already been a good demand for them.

Express Appreciation

The residents of the Grand Central block wish to thank Mr. Geo. N. Graham, proprietor of the Oriental, for his thoughtfulness in offering them the accommodation of his hotel during the fire at Mason's store on Sunday morning.

Here's a New One

Mr. Baptie, of Lakefield, is in the city to-day, and brought with him something new in the line of a fish story. While fishing the other day he came across a dead 'lunge floating in the water, and upon investigation it was found that the fish haw swallowed a mudturtle measuring seven inches in length and five inches in width, which is supposed to have caused the death of the fish which weighed seven pounds. Mr. Baptie succeeded in catching two fine 'lunge this morning, the largest weighing 17 pounds.

FIRE DID $9,000 DAMAGE TO STORE

Disastrous Fire at E. F. Mason's Lower Store—Stock Almost Totally Destroyed—Serious Loss at R. Hall and Son's Store. Damage at Other Stores.

A particularly disastrous fire occurred at the lower grocery store of E. F. Mason and Company on George st., south of Simcoe. Heavy loss was also sustained at the store of R. Hall & Son, which is next door to Mason's on the north side, and losses were also sustained by Milburn, the jeweller; the Singer Sewing Machine Co., W. G. Rundle, tobacconist, and the Kingan's Hardware Company. The losses vary in amounts and are mostly all due to water, which flooded all the cellars.

The alarm was sent into the fire station at 3.15 Sunday morning and it was nine o'clock before the fire brigade suspended their work at the scene of the conflagration. The residential section of the Grand Central block was badly flooded with smoke and it was greatly feared that the fire would gain headway and wipe out the entire block.

Mr. Dickson Hall, of the firm of R. Hall & Son, who with Mr. Mason, suffered the heaviest losses, did not have a statement to make when seen by the Review this morning, but Mr. Mason stated he placed his loss at $9,000 as near as he could arrive at it, with not one-quarter that amount covered by insurance. He said he did not take the precaution to get heavy insurance for the reason that he has no furnace, stove or other place where fuel is burned, the building being heated from a big boiler in the cellar of the C.P.R. telegraph office. He had the place all re-wired as an extra precaution and hasn't the slightest idea what could have caused the blaze.

"I will suffer a loss on both my stock and fixtures," said Mr. Mason, "the damage to fixtures will amount to about $1,000, I should judge, and to the stock about $8,000. Of course it is impossible to give any really accurate amount with things in the confused way they are. The insurance on the stock was very light in comparison to its value.

We will start making repairs to the store at as early a date as possible."

In view of the size of the fire it is lucky that some of the spectators or firemen were not seriously injured. As noted below Deputy Chief Grange was overcome and some of the firemen suffered to some extent from different causes. Chief Howard and two of the firemen received a temporary set back when they directed the hose into the south cellar window of the store. They had taken up the grating and an explosion followed which blew them clean out of the area but they were only shaken up a little.

A couple of travellers who came in on the mid-night train were going from their hotel to a restaurant to have lunch and smelled smoke. They thought it came from Neil's store. They told the nightwatchman and he sent in the alarm. The alarm was sent in from box 23 at George and Hunter streets, so the brigade had to take a somewhat longer route than they would have had they known the location of the fire. The nightwatchman directed the brigade to R. Hall and Son's store. Smoke was pouring out of the basement windows of the store and Mason's, Milburn's and the Singer Sewing Machine office.

HARD TO LOCATE BLAZE.

It was difficult for a moment to locate just where which store the fire was in. The chief gave orders to lay three lines at once, taking it for granted a very dangerous blaze was in progress. The only way it could be ascertained which building the fire was in was by running from store to store and feeling the glass windows, and in that way finding out where the greatest amount of heat was.

FLAMES SHOT OUT OF STORE.

The plate glass in Mason's door was kicked in by the chief, when the flames shot out, driving the pedestrians off the sidewalk as soon as the fire got vent. One stream was entire got vent. One stream was directed in the doorway and one in each of the cellar windows. The chief immediately ordered another line to be laid from the rear, on Simcoe st.

FIREMEN OVERCOME.

The men found it utterly impossible at first to enter the building in the front. At the rear Deputy Chief Grange, Engineer Rankin and Fireman Hutt tried to get in. They were driven back several times in their attempts to get to the seat of the fire. After about two hours they were overcome in the cellar, in the rear of Mason's store, and Grange had to be taken to the hospital. Engineer Rankin and Fireman Hutt had a close call in carrying him out. At length, with the assistance of some recruits, they managed to reach the blaze with the hose. This was at 6 o'clock. By seven o'clock the fire burned a hole in the ground floor 20x40 feet. That floor collapsed, supplying convenient fuel for the blaze. The ceiling of the first floor was kept cool, so the fire would not spread upstairs.

There was a great deal of stock in the cellar, and with what was lost on the first floor, the stock will be almost a total loss.

The tons of water which were poured in soaked through into the other buildings, injuring the stock of dry goods in the store of R. Hall & Son immediately north of Mason's store. Kingan's hardware and the Singer sewing machine will also suffer from water. There is some damage to stock by water at Milburn's store and W. G. Rundle, the tobacconist, just below Milburn's had two billiard tables badly damaged by water. There were three feet of water in the cellars of the stores named. There was also a lot of damage by smoke to Milburn's jewellery store and Hall & Son's store.

GREAT QUANTITY OF WATER.

Some idea of the amount of water used will be showed by the following table:—

Pressure at the hydrant, 85 lbs.

Average length of line, 300 feet.

Pressure at the nozzle, 43 lbs.

Number of gallons of water discharged per minute from each line, 203 gallons.

Number of lines in use, five.

Size of nozzles, 1 1-8 inches.

Number of hours working, five.

Each line discharging 60,000 gallons in five hours.

Total amount of water used, 304,500 gallons.

The amount of water would weigh approximately 2,439,806 lbs.

MASTERS AND OFFICERS EXONERATED FROM BLAME

In Connection With Collision Between "Otonabee" and "Rainbow"—Recommendation That Foliage Be Cleared Away.

The Review has received from the Marine Department at Ottawa, a copy of the judgment in the investigation held here recently in connection with the Otonabee-Rainbow collision. It is as follows;

S. S. "OTONABEE" AND S. S. "RAINBOW" JUDGMENT.

In the matter of the formal investigation held in the Court House at Peterborough, Ont., on the 25th of September, 1909, before Capt. L. A. Demers, F.R.A.S., F.R.C.A., assisted by Capt. Francis Nash and Capt. Richard Jones, into the circumstances attending the collision between the S. S. "Otonabee" and S. S. "Rainbow," at a point near Hale's Bridge, Otonabee River, near Peterborough, on the 31st of August last, the court having carefully weighed the evidences, and enquired into the circumstances attending the above shipping casualty, finds that for the reasons mentioned in the annex, that Capt. Burnett, of the "Rainbow," and Capt. Harris, of the "Otonabee," have under the circumstances and to avoid a collision performed the only evolution permissible when at close range.

Therefore, the court exonerates the masters and officers of both vessels from all blame, and recommends that a suggestion be made to the proper authorities to cause the overhanging foliage which partly intercepts the view at the bend of the Otonabee river, below the bridge, to be cut.

WOMEN'S ART ASSOCIATION HELD ANNUAL MEETING

The annual meeting of the Peterborough branch of the Women's Art Association of Canada was held on Tuesday evening, Sept. 28th, at the Y.W.C.A.

There was a large and enthusiastic meeting and much interest was shown in all the branches of the work. After the usual routine work, reading of reports, etc., the officers for the coming year were elected. The treasurer's report shows a balance in the bank to the credit of the branch of $26.21.

A vote of thanks was passed to the retiring officers, Mrs. Charles, Mrs. J. R. Stratton, Miss Cobie, Mrs. McCullough; to Mr. Montizambert, for the use of the Bank building and to the Board of the Y.W.C.A. for the use of the room for the meeting.

The following officers were elected;—

Hon. President—Mrs. Dingman
Hon. Vice-Pres.—Miss Bertram.
President—Mrs. Arthur Stevenson.
1st Vice-Pres.—Mrs. Harry Rush.
2nd Vice-Pres.—Mrs. R. R. Hall.
Secretary—Miss Madeline Wilson.
Treasurer—Miss Maud Rush.

Conveners of Committees—Social, Mrs. Aylmer; lecture, Mrs. R. S. Davidson; home industries, Mrs. George Rubidge; exhibition, Miss Hatton; reading club, Mrs. Fredericks; archivist, Mrs. Palmer.

SECRETARY'S REPORT.

The Secretary's report was presented as follows;—

As in former years the most important event in the history of the Branch during the year was the Foreign Exhibition. The exhibition was held in the building formerly occupied by the Bank of Montreal in the second week of February.

The exhibition this year was especially interesting to Peterborough people as were fortunate enough to secure a number of works by our most distinguished member, Miss Katherine E. Wallis. Among these was a replica in bronze of the celebrated "Cabbage Baby," which had been exhibited in the Paris Salon in the previous spring. An exquisite portrait of Miss Wallis, in low relief, Mons. Waldmann, the celebrated French portraitist, and some spirited examples of his work as an animalist were very much admired and created a great deal of interest. The pictures, among which were several specimens of the best modern Dutch water colorists, and some excellent Scotch oils were very much admired. The Water Crane room was a great centre of attraction, and genuine, indeed, was the delight with which many recognized the originals of the illustrations which had been the joy of their childhood hours.

Peterborough was very fortunate in having such a varied, excellent exhibition, and, while we feel sometimes as if our efforts were not appreciated, we were pleased this year to find that the attendance was larger than ever before. We had the pleasure of having our first president, Miss Bertram, with us for a few days and her bright and cheery presence and words of encouragement were much appreciated. Tea was served during the exhibition by the King's Daughters.

The prize given by the Branch for the best group of original drawings to be exhibited at the Peterborough Industrial Fair was won by Miss E. Orono.

There were three executive meetings held during the year.

The Reading Club, in connection with the Association, was not as successful as regards the attendance, as it deserved to be. An excellent programme was arranged by the leader, Mrs. Palmer, who very kindly gave the first address on "The History of Art" from the earliest time. During the winter excellent papers were given on the representatives of the Flemish, Spanish, and French schools of art. The travelling library, secured from McGill University, was a great help. It is to be regretted that more of the members do not avail themselves oftener of this most enjoyable branch of the work of the Association in Peterborough.

Local Rector Draws Attention to the Election Trial

At All Saints' church last evening the rector, Rev. Mr. Trumpour, drew attention to some of the shameful disclosures at the election trial here last week. The revelations were disgraceful, Mr. Trumpour said, and it was evident that the devil had been at work. The condition of affairs revealed by the trial was far from being a credit to the city.

A Knight for a Day

A big audience saw "A Knight for a Day" at the Grand Opera House on Saturday night. The production is elaborately staged and has several catchy musical numbers, bright dialogues and a large and handsome chorus that sings and dances well. The comedy is bright all the way through and laughs are sprinkled all along the line. Among the song hits "Life is a See-Saw," "Little Girl in Blue," and "Whistle as You Walk Out," are easily the best. The electrical effects in "Life in a See-Saw" were very pretty and the audience was not slow to show appreciation. Miss Louise Shepperd, the leading lady, has a splendid voice and made a big hit. George Ovey, the comedian, was a huge laugh-maker and became funnier all the time. The other members of the company were good. Hilda Thomas, as Tilly Day, showed marked ability and was encored several times. There was much humor in her song, "I want Another Situation Just Like That."

To-night Guy Bros. Minstrels appear at the Grand and they should draw a capacity house.

Falls In Love With Employer

"The Bachelor," which is the name of Clyde Fitch's latest and most charming comedy, will be seen here for the first time next Friday evening, Oct. 8th, at the Grand Opera House.

"The Bachelor" was first produced at the Maxine Elliott theatre in New York last spring, and, with the exception of Chicago, has not been seen outside of the Metropolis. The original cast, headed by Mr. Charles Cherry is assured.

In "The Bachelor," Mr. Cherry, who is a well-known English actor, recently raised to stardom by the Shuberts, takes the part of a man who has no use for matrimony. His stenographer, working under an assumed name, falls in love with her employer, but he is unaware of the fact until the "mock heroics" of her kid brother upset their well laid plans. For the bachelor, feeling that perhaps he is to blame for the few attentions he has shown her, offers himself a victim upon the altar of matrimony.

The second act brings the bachelor to the home of the typewriter, where he comes prepared to ask the mother for the hand of her daughter. Meantime, however, the stenographer has learned of the hand her brother has had in forcing the proposal, so that when the bachelor calls she indignantly releases him.

One of the characters that evokes much laughter is that of a Swedish housemaid, whose latest gag is: "The Bachelor is like a Manhattan cocktail, because it has a 'cherry' in it." In fact, the comedy itself has all the elements of a cocktail and without its Cherry would not be one-half so palatable.

THAT WATCH OF YOURS

Is in many respects similar to a railway engine. Let an engine be run without oil or cleaning and before long it will stop dead. Upon examination it will be found that the friction and wear and tear has ruined the machinery, and it is fit only for the scrap iron heap. Likewise your watch. You put it in your pocket, and while there is a kick in it, you, in your mistaken economy, do not consult the watchmaker, and consequently rob your watch of years of good service and also much of its former accuracy. The time-keeping qualities of a good watch are maintained and often improved by timely and skilful attention. If you have been one of the neglectful ones call around and see us.

Good Hunting and Fishing

In the vicinity of Wako, on the Lake Superior branch of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway, good duck hunting is to be found. The lakes in the vicinity are also well stocked with maskinonge and mountain and salmon trout. Moose, caribou and red deer are plentiful and good sport is assured anyone visiting that district. Guides may be secured by writing to R. Porter Hogan, Wako, Ont. Wako is 160 miles from Fort William.

Benj Hobson, Again.

Benj. Hobson has ten days in which to locate other than in this city. This morning at Police Court he faced a vagrancy charge, but stated that he would go to the woods if given a chance. As the potatoes are all harvested at Castle Nesbitt, and the winter supply of wood hasn't arrived, his services will not be needed and he was allowed to go.

About 262 tons of whitefish were landed at Aberdeen recently.

CANADA HOLDS ANOTHER RECORD

In Connection With Tranportation Matters -Comment From Outside

The Official Guide of the railways and steam navigation lines in the United States, Porto Rico, Canada, Mexico and Cuba is regarded by transportation men, especially those engaged in handling tickets and giving information to the public, as indispensable—it is the Bible of the railway world:—

Charles E. Morgan, who has represented the Grand Trunk Railway System and its allied lines at Hamilton, Ont., for a life-time, recently received a letter from the manager of the Official Guide, in which the opinion is expressed that Mr. Morgan is entitled to the credit of being "the longest continuous subscriber," his name appearing continually on the subscription list of the 'Guide' since March 1st, 1874.

ROSEDALE SECTION OF TRENT CANAL

Work on Concrete at That Point Finished for the Season

Lindsay, Oct. 3.—Mr. Geo. Rea, inspector of concrete at the new Rosedale locks, returned to town last evening, accompanied by Mrs. Rea.

He reports that the work is finished for the season, being continued early next spring. Already the concrete work is completed and the short canal is ready for navigation except for the lock gates. They are already constructed, and will be floated to their proper place when the ice goes out in April. The Lindsay gates are now nearly ready, but have been delayed on account of castings. Although the water has not yet been freely let into the canal, there is now a depth of nearly six feet, which has been raised by springs and rain. There will likely be at least ten feet when high water is reached.

A few days ago Mr. A. J. Grant, superintending engineer of the Trent canal, inspected the works and was highly pleased with the first-class manner of construction throughout, saying it was one of the best locks of the whole Trent system of canals.

HAD LUNCH FOR THE FIREMEN

But the Latter Were Unable to Partake of it

During the fire at Mason's store on Sunday morning several of the ladies residing in the flats over the stores prepared hot tea and coffee and a lunch for the firemen. Just at that time, however, the fire was in a dangerous condition and the men were unable to avail themselves of this kindness. The ladies even brought the refreshments down to the men but the chief refused to allow the men to stop work at that time as every minute counted. After the fire the chief on the order of Ald. Buller, sent the men over to the restaurant, where they had a meal. The chief and firemen wish to thank the ladies for their kindness.

Miss Moscrips Success

A Milwaukee paper of recent date contains the following item of local interest;—

"Miss Jessie E. Moscrip, of South Milwaukee, a graduate of the South division high school with the class of 1908, has won a first year scholarship in the college of liberal arts in the Northwestern university at Evanston, and will leave Milwaukee the last of September to enter upon her studies there.

Miss Moscrip, who is but 16 years old, will specialize in mathematics, and expects to take the four years' course at the university. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Moscrip, the former being a member of the Moscrip-Buchner Sales Company, 149 West Water street."

After the Last Move

Railway men receive so little in the way of commendation that such a letter as this, written by Mr. Arthur A. Lotto, of the "Gay Musician Company" to Mr. Frank P. Dwyer, general agent of the passenger department at New York, helps a lot—

My Dear Mr. Dwyer.—From here I am taking my last move over your road, this season, back to the United States, and I feel that it is only just for me to write you and thank you for the treatment we have received at the hands of everyone that I have come in contact with over the Grand Trunk System. The trip has been a pleasure for this season, particularly, and I know that it has been just as pleasant for Mr. Slocum and the company, and that it is appreciated by them.

(Signed.) Arthur A. Lotto.

STYLE IN FURS

THE beauty and shape that are in Barrie's Furs are there when you buy them, and stay there while wearing, for months and years.

Is not that something you want when you buy Furs? For Furs are really an investment when wisely bought.

These things can't be said of ordinary ready-made Furs. They are fair up to a certain point. When that point is passed durability drops out of sight.

BARRIE'S FURS have and retain shape and finish because they are manufactured on the premises. Fur making is essentially a hand-made accomplishment. Machinery can do little in the making.

The materials are there. Each one good for the price asked. But all have style, finish and that chic effect that is worked into the goods, because of the know-how in the making.

It's not too early to inspect the Fur styles. It is a desirable thing to do, while the assortment is practically unbroken.

COLLEGIATES MADE GREAT FINISH AND WON FROM T.C.S.

Exciting Rugby Game at Riverside Park Saturday Afternoon—Port Hope Was Ahead by 11-0, but Locals Overcame the Lead and Won by 14-11.

With the wind and an 11—0 score against them, the P.C.I. Junior City Rugby team took an unexpected brace in their game with the first team of the Trinity College School, of Port Hope, at Riverside Park Saturday afternoon and came out victorious by the score of 14—11, the exhibition being the classiest ever pulled off here by two junior teams. A win for the locals after the first half was unlooked for. The visitors had an advantage in weight, the score was in their favor and they were playing with the wind. They had a more effective style of play in the first half, which looked good to continue throughout the game, but a better exhibition of gameness on the part of the Collegiates or any other team, could not be wished for, and this had a lot to do with turning the tide of the battle in their favor. They never let up, and after Richardson had secured the first touch for his team, the Port Hopers went to pieces, and their opponents overcame the lead against them, and when the whistle blew for the finish they were ahead by three points.

The game started off at a lively clip with the T.C.S. forcing matters and breaking through the P.C.I. line, time and time again. Their passing was accurate, but dangerous looking runs were stopped by some fine tackling. Geale at quarter for the Collegiates rarely missed his man in this respect, and his work was a big feature. Despite the advice from their rooters to kick the ball during this half, the locals contented themselves with trying for dwons, but in this very little headway was made. Geale prevented a likely looking touch, but within a few minutes of half time, Port Hope went over the line for their first score. In the second half, both teams went at it hard again, with the visitors aving the advantage. Their second touch was something of a fluke. While the ball was lying dead, one of the visitors' wing men grabbed it and ran over the line, without any attempt being made to prevent him. The Collegiates claimed it was their ball, but as the referee's whistle did not blow, the touch counted and Conyors followed with a convert.

It was immediately after this that the P.I. started to get busy. The first point came on a rouge. Richardson got in some fine kicking, which finally resulted in a touch, but an attempted convert missed by a small margin. The locals were having the better of the argument and counted again on a kick over the deadline and another rouge. With the greater part of the second half gone Burritt pulled off a pretty play, when he stole the ball near the line and went over for a touch, and put his team ahead. Geale converted and time was called a few minutes later

THE ART OF TACKLING

Getting and retaining the ball from its reception until the play is stopped is a detail often overlooked. In end runs or in an open field, the ball should be grasped with the outside arm, the other being used to straight arm tacklers.

The rear end of the ball should be tucked snugly against the body, under the upper arm, the lower end grasped with hand and lower arm. If thrown the runner should protect the ball with his free hand to insure its retention.

In line plunge the ball is held tightly against the pit of the stomach, both arms and hands being used to hold it tightly. No matter what happens, the runner's one thought must be to retain the ball. At times a line plunge is so successful that the runner shakes the tacklers. At such a time the ball must be shifted under the arm, giving a better chance to run.

Practice tackling. Unless the tackle is sure and effective the man tackled will continue to advance. The tackled man must be brought down.

In every tackle, under all circumstances, the tackler must aim at a point midway between the knees and hips. Both arms should go around the legs. Every effort should be directed towards driving the tackled man backward. The tackler's shoulder striking runner's leg is effective.

The long tackle in the open field is spectacular. Planting himself in the runner's path and diving at the proper distance, much after the fashion of a diver in the water, the tackler should get all the speed possible into the dive.

Don't tackle too low, or the runner will wiggle loose or leap away from danger. The most thrilling tackle is the long dive from behind, the tackle that so often downs a man near the goal line after a long chase across the field.

THE FOOTBALL HERO

Into a ward of the whitewashed walls
Where the dead and dying lay,
Wounded by tackles, kicks and falls,
Somebody's half-back was borne one day.
Somebody's half-back so lank and tall,
Wearing yet on his battered brow—
Soon to be hid by the surgeon's clothes—
The lingering marks of a football row.

A CANINE HERO.

The Story of Scotch, an Obedient and Loyal Dog.

A most interesting as well as a most pathetic dog story is related by Enos A. Mills in his book, "Wild Life on the Rockies." Mr. Mills and his dog Scotch were on a four days' tramp on the summit of a desolate and lofty range far above the timber line, and Mr. Mills stopped to take some photographs. The work required that he should remove his sheepskin mittens, which he placed in his coat pocket. The story follows:

From time to time as I climbed the summit of the continental divide I stopped to take photographs, but on the summit the cold pierced my silk gloves, and I felt for my mittens, to find that one of them was lost.

I stopped, put an arm around Scotch, and told him I had lost a mitten and that I wanted him to go down for it to save me trouble.

Instead of starting off willingly, as he had invariably done before in obedience to my commands, he stood still. I thought he had misunderstood me, so I patted him and then, pointing down the slope, said: "Go for the mitten, Scotch. I will wait here for you."

He started for it, but went unwillingly. He had always served me so cheerfully that I could not understand, and it was not until late the next afternoon that I realized that he had loyally and at the risk of his life tried to obey me.

My cabin, 18 miles away, was the nearest house, and the region was utterly wild. I waited a reasonable time for Scotch to return, but he did not come back. As it was late in the afternoon and growing colder, I decided to go on toward my cabin along a route that I felt sure he would follow, and I reasoned that he would overtake me.

When at midnight he had not come I felt something was wrong. I slept two hours and decided to go to meet him. The thermometer showed 14 below zero. I kept on going, and at 2 in the afternoon, 24 hours after I had sent Scotch back, I paused on a crag and looked below. There in the snowy world of white he lay by the mitten in the snow. He had misunderstood me and had gone back to guard the mitten instead of to get it.

After waiting for him to eat a luncheon we started merrily toward home, where we arrived at 1 o'clock in the morning.

Had I not returned, I suppose Scotch would have died beside the mitten. In a region cold, cheerless, oppressive, without food and perhaps to die, he lay down by the mitten because he understood that I told him to. In the annals of dog heroism I know of no greater deed.

Lingering Belief In Magic.

The man in the country knows better than to offend the occult powers by "cutting them dead," an offence which soon bears its own punishment. In Devonshire to this day, when someone is afflicted with what is known as "a white leg," a bandage is put on the leg, and "the following formula is repeated nine times, each time followed by the Lord's Prayer":

As Jesus Christ was walking He saw the Virgin Mary sitting on a cold marble stone. He said unto her: "If it is a white ill thing, or a red ill thing, or a black ill thing, or a sticking, cracking, pricking, stabbing, bone ill thing, or a sore ill thing, or a swelling ill thing, or a rotten ill thing, or a cold creeping ill thing, or a smarting ill thing—let it fall from thee to the earth in My Name, and in the Name of the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost.—Amen."—Occult Review.

A Prohibited Inscription.

In the west cloister of Westminster Abbey, in the oldest part of the building, imbedded in the pavement is a slab of marble marking the grave of John Broughton, who was a verger in the abbey for more than thirty years and before he obtained the situation was the champion prizefighter of Great Britain, holding the belt for more than twelve years. The guides who show people around the abbey say that when he was buried in the cloister some of his admirers wanted to immortalise him with an appropriate epitaph, and they indicate a blank space under his name which was left for the inscription, "For twelve years champion prizefighter of England," but it was prohibited.—Argonaut.

How It Grew.

Mrs. A (to Mrs. B.)—That Mrs. Newcomer is so fond of children. The other day when I called she was blowing soap bubbles with them through a common clay pipe.

Mrs. B. (to Mrs. C.)—That Mrs. Newcomer is so funny. Mrs. A. saw her amusing the children with a common clay pipe.

Mrs. C. (to Mrs. D.)—That Mrs. Newcomer smokes a comomn clay pipe.

Mrs. D. (to Mrs. E.)—That Mrs. Newcomer smokes a horrid pipe. I don't see how any woman in her sober senses could do that.

Mrs. E. (to Mrs. F.)—That Mrs. Newcomer smokes a pipe and drinks awfully.—London Scraps.

A Roumanian Custom.

A strange custom is still observed in Roumania. When a servant has displeased his or her master, the offender takes his boots in his hands and places them before the bedroom door of his master. It is a sign of great submission, and the boots are either kicked away as an intimation that the fault will not be forgiven, or else the servant is told to place them on his feet, which shows that he is forgiven.

Cheese In Soup.

Cheese is almost always a nice addition to a soup. Besides being agreeable to the palate, it adds nutriment to the soup if it is not rich in itself, like the tomato and the vegetable soup. Any good yellow cheese can be utilized in this way, even ordinary Canadian cheese. In foreign households clear consomme and other soups are often accompanied by grated Parmesan cheese.

COST OF HUMAN HAIR

FREAK GARMENTS ORDERED FROM LONDON TAILORS.

Stockbroker Who Wears Coats With Movable Sleeves—Actor Wears Dinner Jackets With Bright Colored Ribbon Bindings—Coat Made of Hair of Man's Wife and Daughters.

Some of my customers have extraordinary notions regarding clothing, and now and again I am called upon to make a suit from material which is never found within a tailor's shop, said a fashionable tailor in the West End to the writer the other day. Only last week an elderly gentleman required me to make a suit out of a blanket which he had had dyed a purple-brown.

A prominent K.C. always wears a brown suit, and during the last three years he has to my knowledge never ordered a suit of any other color. He dons trousers and coat of a brown hue because that is the color of his wife's hair. Whenever he requires a new suit he invariably sends me a small tuft of hair from his wife's head, with a request for a pattern as near to the shade as possible.

A stockbroker wears great and under coats with movable sleeves. The sleeves are fastened to the shoulder by an ingenious arrangement of his own invention, and the fit of the garments is not interfered with in any way. This gentleman's trousers are somewhat unique, owing to the fact that no buttons appear on them. The fronts are fastened with a particular kind of clasp, resembling that found on gloves, while safety pins attach the tops to the inside lining of the waistcoats, making suspenders unnecessary.

One of our best-known actors always wears coats that are braided. His dinner jackets are bound with gay-colored ribbon, and the waistcoats he wears with them are hand-painted with forget-me-nots. The painting is done by a first-rate artist, who charges me seven guineas for each waistcoat I place in his hands to decorate on behalf of my customer. The waistcoats, I might say, are made of a fine white leather.

A judge who always comes to me when he is in need of new wearing apparel designs his own suits. This gentleman is very eccentric with regard to his pocket-flaps, and he is constantly changing their size and shape. Not long ago he commissioned me to make for him a riding suit. The seat and inner leg parts of the knickers were to be of leather, and painted to imitate the cloth—a check—of which the suit was otherwise composed. When I had completed the suit, the leather portions were so well painted that the judge himself at first thought I had disobeyed his order, and had made the knickers entirely of cloth.

A well-known sportsman wears in the hunting field a waistcoat manufactured from the hair of his wife and five daughters. I had to call in the services of a wig-maker in constructing this garment.

This reminds me that an artist living in Paris has a coat woven of human hair. The collar and cuffs of this novel garment are of black hair, while the body and sleeves are of brown.

The late Mr. Samuel Pope, K.C., a man of particularly heavy build, was always measured for his clothes sitting down. He found that when he was measured in the customary way he looked ridiculous in his clothes when seated. On account of his enormous proportions, Mr. Pope was permitted to address the court seated, and, so that he would look all right in his clothes when in that position, he was always measured for them in the way described.

One of my customers wears a suit of clothes which in color resembles the coat of his dog—a tawny poodle. Moreover, his overcoat is of the same color, and on the inside breast pocket of this garment there is woven in silk an admirable portrait of the dog. It apears that this animal saved its master's life by awakening him in the dead of night when his house caught fire some years ago. In memory of the deed my customer carries the dog's portrait about with him, and wears clothes that match the color of the dog's coat.

Classic Noises.

Of all the men whose fate it has been to live in hourly dread of noise, Piatti, the cellist, was chief. "I have lived," said he, "in Spain, where the serenos awaken you at every hour of night to inform you of the state of the weather. I have sojourned in Holland, where men are paid expressly to arouse you by shaking a rattle to tell you the hour and wish you good night. I have even 'slept' in Antwerp notwithstanding the chimes which play every half hour variations of the 'Carnival of Venice' and every half hour the bass drum air of the caid. Thus, you see, I am well organized for peace, yet I thirst for more than one man's blood."—London Chronicle.

Availability.

A nobleman was once showing a friend a rare collection of precious stones which he had gathered at a great expense and enormous amount of labor. "And yet," he said, "they yield me no income."

His friend replied, "Come with me, and I will show you two stones which cost me but $25 each, yet they yield me a considerable income." He took the owner of the gems to his gristmill and pointed to two gray millstones which were always busy grinding out grist.

Wild Apples.

In the Sandwich Islands the apple has become wild, and whole forests of trees, many acres in extent, are found in various parts of the country. They extend from the level of the sea far up into the mountain sides. It is said that miles of these apple forests can occasionally be seen, and very beautiful they are, both when in flower and in fruit.

THE OLD PIRATES.

They Were Cowards, Pilferers and Traitors to One Another.

The average pirate does not deserve his romantic reputation, even for ferocity. Pirates were brutes unquestionably and, like Captain Kidd when on the coast of Malabar, would exercise a "pretty severity" in order to extort confessions from prisoners whom they suspected of hiding goods. But the universal application of the maxim that dead men tell no tales and the dispatch of all prisoners "by the plank" were not practices of theirs. It was only at the end and when the last pirates, the broken men of the Napoleonic wars, were fighting their last fight on the south coast of Cuba that desperation made them utterly merciless. And when we say fight the word must be understood with a difference. The pirates were out "on the plundering account," and they rarely made a serious fight. Indeed, the essential cowardice of mankind is nowhere more visible than among these oppressors of unarmed traders and black villagers. Men who must have known that surrender would infallibly take them straight to the gallows laid down their arms to any decently appointed force without a blow. Every man hoped that he would save his neck, whatever happened to the others. At the worst they put off the evil hour.

Two of Avery's crew who were condemned to death petitioned that if they must be hanged they might at least be sent "to suffer in India." They may have hoped for escape on the way, but even if they were unable to get off it was better to be sent to die some months hence in India than to go to Execution dock to-morrow. They clung to their miserable lives to the last moment. Stevenson's pirates—cowards, pilferers, traitors to one another—in "The Master of Ballantrae" are the real men as they were. The pirates of "Treasure Island" are boys' book pirates. They are excellent of their kind, and Stevenson produced them with pleasure, but nobody knew better than he that they were but fantoches. A parent who found his boy becoming too fond of pirate stories might do worse than put the right volumes of state trials into his hands, and, if he could only obtain a copy, then also the broadside which contains "a full and true Discovery of all the Robberies, Pyracies and other notorious actions of that famous English Pyrate, Captain James Kelly, who was executed on Friday, 12th of July, 1700." The discovery purports to be a confession by the captain and shows abundant signs of being, in fact, taken down from his mouth by a copyist who heard him ill and reports him with grotesque misspellings.—David Hannay, in Blackwood's Magazine.

Paid His Debt.

When Joe Chamberlain entered the House of Commons he was anxious to try his oratorical powers. A certain leading politician who was piloting a bill through the House was approached by one of Mr. Chamberlain's friends, who said:

"Chamberlain would like to speak on the bill. Can you give him a chance?"

"Well, you know, I think it would not do. He's a new member, and nobody knows what the dickens he might say."

Time went on. Chamberlain gained ground—became a power in Parliament. The leading politician, on the contrary, had made a series of blunders which had imperiled his position. An election was imminent. Forgetting his previous record, he thought that if he could get Mr. Chamberlain to speak for him he would strengthen his position. He therefore applied to the right honorable gentleman. The latter calmly surveyed him through his eyeglass and said:

"Well, you know, I think it would not do. I am a new member, and nobody knows what the dickens I might say."

South Sea Swells.

Readers of old narratives of exploration in the south seas will recall the frequent references to the heavy swells of the ocean, which impressed the navigators with the idea of their remoteness from land. Dr. Vaughan Cornish explains the great size of the sea waves in high southern latitudes by the fact that south of the Cape of Good Hope and Cape Horn there is neither windward nor leeward shore and the prevailing wind in all longitudes is westerly. Thus when a west wind springs up it finds a long westerly swell, the effect of a previous wind, still running. The new-born wind increases the steepness of this swell and so forms majestic storm waves, which sometimes attain a length of 1,200 feet from crest to crest. The average height attained by sea waves in feet is about half the velocity of the wind in miles per hour.

His Order.

"Does your husband belong to any clubs, Mrs. Dubbley?"

"None but the Knights of Mystic Stairway."

"The Mystic Stairway? I never heard of that order."

"You're lucky. The members are pledged to assist the brother who needs help to reach home and to carry him upstairs, provided they are able to trust themselves on stairs that go round and round, and after that to try to make his wife believe that he was seized with sudden illness and that they administered an overdose of brandy or something of the kind for the purpose of reviving him."

If She Had Not Married.

The lover of euphonious female names must look back with regret to the eighteenth century with its fragrant memories of Belinda, Arabella and Anabel. Yet in Spain euphony is still preserved. Could you have a more beautiful name than Juana Maria de los Delores de Leon? It is one of the ironies of history that the owner of these charming vocables was fated to be known in after life as Lady Smith and to bestow that much less attractive and euphonious title upon a town in South Africa.—London Chronicle.

Mr. R. Scott, of Brown, advocate, Edinburgh, is proposed as the Unionist for North Aberdeenshire.

BROKE IT GENTLY.

The Reason the Brakeman Quit Railroading For Awhile.

Danny Wilmarth was a brakeman. One day while his train was on a side track at a town in Ohio another train that was doing some switching on the same track suddenly bumped into the caboose on the rear platform of which Danny was standing, and he was severely bruised. He was taken to a local hospital, where it was found that his injuries were so serious as to necessitate his remaining several weeks for treatment. At the end of a month he surprised his mother at her home in Pittsburg by walking into the house on crutches.

"Why, Danny," she exclaimed, "what is the matter? What has happened to you?"

"Why, I wrote and told you, mother," he answered with a grin.

"No, son, you didn't. All you wrote was that you were going to quit railroading for awhile, that you had found something else to do and that it was an indoor job. You didn't say a word about getting hurt or anything of that kind."

"I surely did, mother. I told you what happened to me."

"You surely didn't!"

"How did I say I came to be staying in that town?"

"You said you happened to be caught there between trains."

"Well, I was."—Youth's Companion.

Tribute to a Raiser.

"If that woman goes to heaven I hope there may be some other place for me to spend the hereafter in."

"Do you know I heard her pay you quite a compliment the other day?"

"Indeed! What did she say about me?"

"She paid a tribute to you as a raiser of things."

"A raiser of things? I don't believe I quite understand you."

"Yes. She said that if you were to die and go to heaven you'd soon manage to raise the devil there."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Forcible Hint.

Gunner—Old man Squiggs had seven daughters, and they all have callers on the different nights of the week.

Guyer—Yes. That's the reason the old man bought that freak cuckoo clock and placed it in the parlor. Now at 10 o'clock those young men know when to go home.

Gunner—Does the bird cuckoo ten times at that hour?

Guyer—No. Instead of cuckooing he says "Beat it."—St. Louis Republic.

THE YOUNGER SET

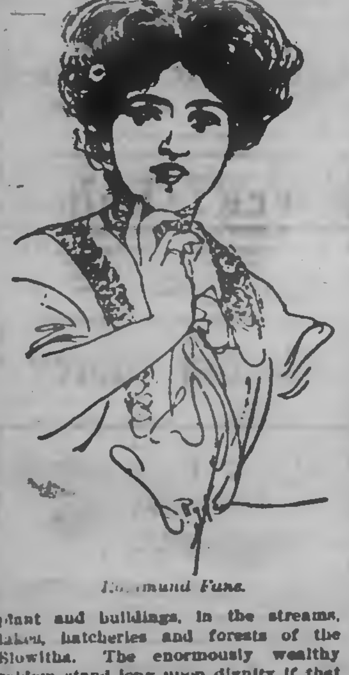
Author of
"The Fighting Chance."

"In the name of decency, Jack," he said, "what are you dreaming of? Is it not enough that this man Neergard holds us up once? Do I understand that he has the impudence to do it again with your connivance? Are you going to let him sandbag us into electing him? Is that the sort of holdup you stand for? Well, then, I tell you I'll never vote for him. I'd rather see these lakes and streams of ours dry up. I'd rather see the last pheasant snared and the last covey leave for the other end of the island than buy off that Dutchman with a certificate of membership in the Slowitha!"

"In that case," retorted Ruthven, "we'd better wind up our affairs and make arrangements for an auctioneer."

"All right. Wind up and be hanged!" said Mottly. "There'll be at least sufficient self respect left in the treasury to go round."

Which was all very fine, and Mottly meant it at the time, but outside of the asset of self respect there was too much money invested in the lands, plant and buildings, in the streams, lakes, hatcheries and forests of the Slowitha. The enormously wealthy seldom stand long upon dignity if that dignity is going to be very expensive. Only the poor can afford disastrous self respect.



Rosamund Fane.

So the chances were that Neergard would become a member, which was why he had acquired the tract, and the price he would have to pay was not only in taxes upon the acreage, but secretly a solid sum in addition to little Mr. Ruthven, whom he was binding to him by every tie he could pay for.

He suffered Gerald and little Ruthven to pilot him. He remained cheerfully oblivious to the snubs and indifference accorded him by Mrs. Ruthven, Mrs. Fane and others of their entourage whom he encountered over the card tables or at card suppers. And all the while he was attending to his business with an energy and activity that ought to have shamed Gerald and did at times, particularly when he arrived at the office utterly unfit for the work before him.

But Neergard continued astonishingly tolerant and kind, lending him money, advancing him what he required, taking up or renewing notes for him until the boy, heavily in his debt, plunged more heavily still in sheer desperation, only to flounder the deeper at every struggle to extricate himself.

Alixe Ruthven suspected something of this, but it was useless as well as perilous in other ways for her to argue with Gerald, for the boy had come to a point where even his devotion to her could not stop him. He must go on.

Meanwhile the Ruthvens were living almost lavishly and keeping four more horses. But Eileen Erroll's bank balance had now dwindled to three figures, and Gerald had not only acted offensively toward Selwyn, but had quarreled so violently with Austin that the latter, thoroughly incensed and disgusted, threatened to forbid him the house.

"The little fool," he said to Selwyn, "came here last night stinking of wine and attempted to lay down the law to me—tried to dragoon me into a compromise with him over the investments I have made for him! By God, Phil, he shall not control one cent until the trust conditions are fulfilled, though it was left to my discretion too. And I told him so flatly. I told him he wasn't fit to be trusted with the coupons of a repudiated South American bond"—

"Hold on, Austin. That isn't the way to tackle a boy like that!"

"Isn't it? Well, why not? Do you expect me to dicker with him?"

"No; but, Austin, you've always been a little brusque with him. Don't you think"—

"No, I don't. It's discipline he needs, and he'll get it good and plenty every time he comes here."

"I—I'm afraid he may cease coming here. That's the worst of it. For his sister's sake I think we ought to try to put up with"—

"Put up! Put up! I've been doing nothing else since he came of age. He's turned out a fool of a puppy, I tell you. He's idle, lazy, dissipated, impudent, conceited, insufferable"—

"But not vicious, Austin, and not untruthful. Where his affections are centered he is always generous; where they should be centered he is merely thoughtless, not deliberately selfish. And, Austin, we've simply got to believe in him, you know—on Eileen's account."

Austin grew angrier and redder.

"Eileen's account? Do you mean her bank account? It's easy enough to believe in him if you inspect his sister's bank-account. Believe in him? Oh, certainly I do. I believe he's pup enough to come sneaking to his sister to pay for all the fooleries he's engaged in. And I've positively forbidden her to draw another check to his order."

"It's that little bangled whelp Ruthven," said Selwyn between his teeth. "I warned Gerald most solemnly of that man, but"— He shrugged his shoulders and glanced about him at the linen covered furniture and bare floors. After a moment he looked up. "The game there is, of course, notorious. I—if matters did not stand as they do"—he flushed painfully—"I'd go straight to Ruthven and find out whether or not this business could be stopped."

If Alixe had done her best to keep Gerald away, she appeared to be quite powerless in the matter; and it was therefore useless to go to her. Besides, he had every inclination to avoid her. He had learned his lesson.

To whom then could he go? Through whom could he reach Gerald? Through Nina? Useless. And Gerald had already defied Austin. Through Neergard, then? But he was on no terms with Neergard. How could he go to him? Through Rosamund Fane? At the thought he made a wry face. Any advances from him she would willfully misinterpret. And Ruthven? How on earth could he bring himself to approach him?

And yet he had promised Eileen to do what he could. What merit lay in performing an easy obligation? What courage was required to keep a promise easily kept? If he cared anything for her, if he really cared for Gerald, he owed them more than effortless fulfillment. So first of all, when at length he had decided, he nerved himself to strike straight at the center, and within the hour he found Gerald at the Stuyvesant club.

The boy descended to the visitors' rooms, Selwyn's card in his hand and distrust written on every feature. And at Selwyn's first frank and friendly words he reddened to the temples and checked him.

"I won't listen," he said. "They—Austin and—and everybody has been putting you up to this until I'm tired of it. Do they think I'm a baby? Do they suppose I don't know enough to take care of myself? Are they trying to make me ridiculous? I tell you they'd better let me alone. My friends are my friends, and I won't listen to any criticism of them, and that settles it."

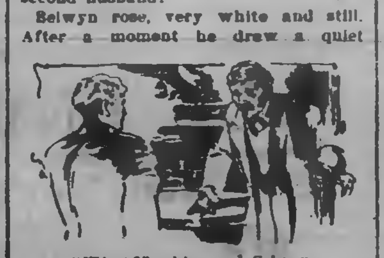
"Gerald"—

"Oh, I know perfectly well that you dislike Neergard. I don't, and that's the difference."

"I'm not speaking of Mr. Neergard, Gerald. I'm only trying to tell you what this man Ruthven really is doing."

"What do I care what he is doing!" cried Gerald angrily. "And, anyway, it isn't likely I'd come to you to find out anything about Mrs. Ruthven's second husband!"

Selwyn rose, very white and still. After a moment he drew a quiet breath, his clinched hands relaxed, and he picked up his hat and gloves.



"What?" whispered Selwyn.

"They are my friends," muttered Gerald, as pale as he. "You drove me into speaking that way."

"Perhaps I did, my boy. I don't judge you. If you ever find you need help come to me. And if you can't come and still need me send for me. I'll do what I can always. I know you better than you know yourself. Goodby."

He turned to the door, and Gerald burst out: "Why can't you let my friends alone? I liked you before you began this sort of thing!"

"I will let them alone if you will," said Selwyn, halting. "I can't stand by and see you exploited and used and perverted. Will you give me one chance to talk it over, Gerald?"

"No; I won't!" returned Gerald hotly. "I'll stand for my friends every time! There's no treachery in me."

"You are not standing by me very fast," said the elder man gently.

"I said I was standing by my friends!" repeated the boy.

"Very well, Gerald, but it's at the expense of your own people, I'm afraid."

"That's my business, and you're not one of 'em," retorted the boy, infuriated, "and you won't be, either, if I can prevent it, no matter whether people say that you're engaged to her"—

"What?" whispered Selwyn, wheeling like a flash. The last vestige of color had fled from his face, and Gerald caught his breath, almost blinded by the blaze of fury in the elder man's eyes.

Neither spoke again, and after a moment Selwyn's eyes fell, and he turned heavily on his heel and walked away, head bent, gray eyes narrowing to slits.

Yet through the brain's chaos and the heart's loud tumult and the clamor of pulses run wild at the insult flung into his very face the grim instinct to go on persisted, and he went on and on for her sake—on, he knew not how, until he came to Neergard's apartment in one of the vast west side constructions bearing the name of a sovereign state, and here after an interval he followed his card to Neergard's splendid suit, where a manservant received him and left him seated by a sunny window overlooking the blossoming foliage of the park.

When Neergard came in and stood on the farther side of a big oak table Selwyn rose, returning the cool, curt nod.

"Mr. Neergard," he said, "it is not easy for me to come here after what I said to you when I severed my connection with your firm. You have every reason to be unfriendly toward me, but I came on the chance that whatever resentment you may feel will not prevent you from hearing me out."

"Personal resentment," said Neergard slowly, "never interferes with my business. I take it, of course, that you have called upon a business matter. Will you sit down?"

"Thank you, I have only a moment, and what I am here for is to ask you as Mr. Erroll's friend to use your influence on Mr. Erroll—every atom of your influence—to prevent him from ruining himself financially through his excesses. I ask you for his family's sake to discountenance any more gambling, to hold him strictly to his duties in your office, to overlook no more shortcomings of his, but to demand from him what any trained business man demands of his associates as well as of his employees. I ask this for the boy's sake."

"I am not aware that Gerald requires any interference from me or from you either," said Neergard coolly. "And, as far as that goes, I and my business require no interference either. And I believe that settles it."

He touched a button. The manservant appeared to usher Selwyn out.

The latter set his teeth in his under lip and looked straight and hard at Neergard, but Neergard thrust both hands in his pockets, turned squarely on his heel and sauntered out of the room, yawning as he went.

It bid fair to become a hard day for Selwyn. He foresaw it, for there was more for him to do, and the day was far from ended, and his self restraint was nearly exhausted.

An hour later he sent his card in to Rosamund Fane, and Rosamund came down presently, mystified, flattered, yet shrewdly alert and prepared for anything since the miracle of his coming justified such preparation.

"Why in the world," she said, with a flushed gayety perfectly genuine, "did you ever come to see me?"

"It's only this," he said—"I am wondering whether you would do anything for me."

"Anything! Merci! Isn't that extremely general, Captain Selwyn? But you never can tell. Ask me."

So he bent forward, his clasped hands between his knees, and told her very earnestly of his fears about Gerald, asking her to use her undoubted influence with the boy to shame him from the card tables, explaining how utterly disastrous to him and his family his present course was.

"Could you help us?" he asked.

"Help us, Captain Selwyn? Who is the 'us,' please?"

"Why, Gerald and me—and his family," he added, meeting her eyes. The eyes began to dance with malice.

"His family," repeated Rosamund—"that is to say, his sister, Miss Erroll. His family, I believe, ends there, does it not?"

"Yes, Mrs. Fane."

"I see. Miss Erroll is naturally worried over him. But I wonder why she did not come to me herself instead of sending you as her errant ambassador."

"Miss Erroll did not send me," he said, flushing up. And, looking steadily into the smiling doll's face confronting him, he knew again that he had failed.

She smiled. "Come to me on your own errand, for Gerald's sake, for anybody's sake, for your own preferably, and I'll listen, but don't come to me on another woman's errand, for I won't listen even to you."

"I have come on my own errand," he repeated coldly. "Miss Erroll knew nothing about it and shall not hear of it from me. Can you not help me, Mrs. Fane?"

But Rosamund's rose china features had hardened into a polished smile, and Selwyn stood up wearily to make his adieu.

But as he entered his hansom before the door he knew the end was not yet, and once more he set his face toward the impossible, and once more the hansom rolled away over the asphalt, and once more it stopped, this time before the house of Ruthven.

Ruthven's greeting was a pallid stare, but as Selwyn made no motion to rise he lounged over to a couch and, half reclining among the cushions, shot an insolent glance at Selwyn, then yawned and examined the bangles on his wrist.

After a moment Selwyn said, "Mr. Ruthven, you are no doubt surprised that I am here."

"I'm not surprised if it's my wife you've come to see," drawled Ruthven. "If I'm the object of your visit, I confess to some surprise—as much as the visit is worth and no more."

The vulgarity of the insult under the man's own roof scarcely moved Selwyn to any deeper contempt and certainly not to anger.

"I did not come here to ask a favor of you," he said coolly, "for that is out of the question, Mr. Ruthven. But I came to tell you that Mr. Erroll's family has forbidden him to continue his gambling in this house and in your company anywhere or at any time."

"Most extraordinary," murmured Ruthven, passing his ringed fingers over his minutely shaven face—that strange face of a boy hardened by the depravity of ages.

"So I must request you," continued Selwyn, "to refuse him the opportunity of gambling here. Will you do it—voluntarily?"

"No."

"Then I shall use my judgment in the matter."

"And what may your judgment in the matter be?"

"I have not yet decided. For one thing I might enter a complaint with the police that a boy is being morally and materially ruined in your private gambling establishment."

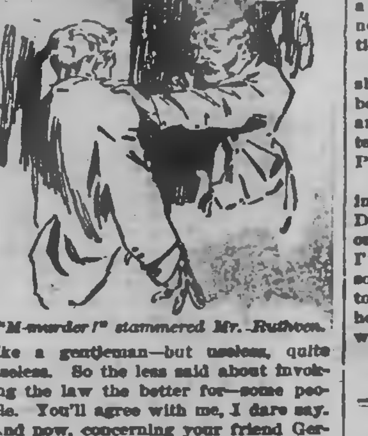
"Is that a threat?"

"No. I will act, not threaten."

"Ah," drawled Ruthven, "I may do the same the next time my wife spends the evening in your apartment."

"You lie!" said Selwyn in a voice made low by surprise.

"Oh, no, I don't. Very chivalrous of you—quite proper for you to deny it like a gentleman—but useless, quite useless. So the less said about invoking the law the better for—some people. You'll agree with me, I dare say. And now, concerning your friend Gerald Erroll—I have not the slightest desire to see him play cards. Whether or not he plays is a matter perfectly indifferent to me, and you had better understand it. But if you come here demanding that I arrange my guest lists to suit you you are losing time."



"M-murder!" stammered Mr. Ruthven.

Selwyn, almost stunned at Ruthven's knowledge of the episode in his rooms, had risen as he gave the man the lie direct.

For an instant, now, as he stared at him, there was murder in his eye. Then the utter hopeless helplessness of his position overwhelmed him as Ruthven, with danger written all over him, stood up, his soft, smooth thumbs hooked in the glittering sash of his kimono.

"Scowl if you like," he said, backing away instinctively, but still nervously impertinent, "and keep your distance! If you've anything further to say to me, write it." Then, growing bolder as Selwyn made no offensive move: "Write to me," he repeated, with a venomous smirk. "It's safer for you to figure as my correspondent than as my wife's corespondent. L-let go of me! W-what the devil are you d-d-doing?"

For Selwyn had him fast, one sinewy hand twisted in his silken collar, holding him squirming at arm's length.

"M-murder!" stammered Mr. Ruthven.

"No," said Selwyn, "not this time. But be very, very careful after this."

And he let him go with an involuntary shudder and wiped his hands on his handkerchief.

Ruthven stood quite still, and after a moment the livid terror died out in his face and a rushing flush spread over it—a strange, dusky effusion, curiously opaque—and he half turned dizzily, hands outstretched for support.

Selwyn coolly watched him as he sank on to the couch and sat huddled together and leaning forward, his soft, ringed fingers covering his empurpled face.

Then Selwyn went away with a shrug of utter loathing, but after he had gone and Ruthven's servants had discovered him and summoned a physician their master lay heavily amid his painted draperies and cushions, his congested features set, his eyes partly open and possessing sight, but the whites of them had disappeared, and the eyes themselves, save for the pupils, were like two dark slits filled with blood.

There was no doubt about it. The doctors, one and all, knew their business when they had so often cautioned Mr Ruthven to avoid sudden and excessive emotions.

That night Selwyn wrote briefly to Mrs. Ruthven:

> I saw your husband this afternoon. He is at liberty to inform you of what passed. But in case he does not there is one detail which you ought to know—your husband believes that you once paid a visit to my apartments. It is unlikely that he will repeat the accusation, and I think there is no occasion for you to worry. However, it is only proper that you should know this, which is my only excuse for writing you a letter that requires no acknowledgment. Very truly yours, PHILIP SELWYN.

To this letter she wrote an excited and somewhat incoherent reply, and, rereading it in troubled surprise, he began to recognize in it something of the strange, illogical, impulsive attitude which had confronted him in the first weeks of his wedded life.

Here was the same minor undertone of unrest sounding ominously through every line; the same illogical, unhappy attitude which implied so much and said so little, leaving him uneasy and disconcerted, conscious of the vague recklessness and veiled reproach, dragging him back from the present through the dead years to confront once more the old pain, the old bewilderment at the hopeless misunderstanding between them.

Chapter 16

NINA had run up to town for a day from Silverside and had telephoned Selwyn to take her somewhere for luncheon. She urged him to return with her, insisting that a week end at Silverside was what he needed to avert physical disintegration.

"What is there to keep you in town?" she demanded. "The children have been clamoring for you day and night, and Eileen has been expecting a letter. You promised to write her, Phil."

"I'm going to write to her," he said impatiently. "Wait a moment, Nina. Don't speak of anything pleasant or—or intimate just now, because—because I've got to bring up another matter—something not very pleasant to me or to you. It is about—Alixe. You knew her in school years ago. You have always known her."

"Yes."

"You—did you ever visit her—stay at the Varians' house?"

"Yes."

"In—in her own home in Westchester?"

"Yes."

There was a silence. His eyes shifted to his plate; remained fixed as he said:

"Then you knew her—father?"

"Yes, Phil," she said quietly, "I knew Mr. Varian."

"Was there anything—anything unusual—about him—in those days?"

"Have you heard that for the first time?" asked his sister.

He looked up. "Yes. What was it, Nina?"

She became busy with her plate for awhile. He sat rigid, patient, one hand resting on his claret glass. And presently she said without meeting his eyes:

"It was even farther back—her grandparents—one of them"— She lifted her head slowly. "That is why it so deeply concerned us, Phil, when we heard of your marriage."

"What concerned you?"

"The chance of inheritance—the risk of the taint—of transmitting it. Her father's erratic brilliancy became more than eccentricity before I knew him. I would have told you that had I dreamed that you ever could have thought of marrying Alixe Varian. But how could I know you would meet her out there in the orient? It was—your cable to us was like a thunderbolt. And when she—she left you so suddenly—Phil, dear—I feared the true reason—the only possible reason that could be responsible for such an insane act."

"What was the truth about her father?" he said doggedly. "He was eccentric. Was he ever worse than that?"

"The truth was that he became mentally irresponsible before his death."

"You know this?"

"Alixe told me when we were schoolgirls. And for days she was haunted with the fear of what might one day be her inheritance. That is all I know, Phil."

He nodded and for awhile made some pretense of eating, but presently leaned back and looked at his sister out of dazed eyes.

"Do you suppose," he said heavily, "that she was not entirely responsible when—when she went away?"

"I have wondered," said Nina simply. "Austin believes it."

"I can't believe it," he said, staring at vacancy. "I refuse to." And, thinking of her last frightened and excited letter imploring an interview with him and giving the startling reason, "What a scoundrel that fellow Ruthven is," he said, with a shudder.

That night he wrote to Alixe.

> If Ruthven threatens you with divorce on such a ground he himself is likely to be adjudged mentally unsound. It was a brutal, stupid threat, nothing more, and his insult to your father's memory was more brutal still. Don't be stampeded by such threats. Disprove them by your calm self control under provocation. Disprove them by your discretion and self confidence. Give nobody a single possible reason for gossip. And, above all, Alixe, don't become worried and morbid over anything you might dread as inheritance, for you are as sound today as you were when I first met you, and you shall not doubt that you could ever be anything else. Be the woman you can be. Show the pluck and courage to make the very best out of life. I have slowly learned to attempt it, and it is not difficult if you convince yourself that it can be done.

To this she answered the next day:

> I will do my best. There is danger, treachery, everywhere, and if it becomes unendurable I shall put an end to it in one way or another. As for his threat—incident on my admitting that I did go to your room and defying him to dare believe evil of me for doing it—I can laugh at it now, though when I wrote you I was terrified, remembering how mentally broken my father was when he died.
>
> But, as you say, I am sound, body and mind. I know it. I don't doubt it for one moment—except, at long intervals, when, apropos of nothing, a faint sensation of dread comes creeping.
>
> But I am sound! I know it so absolutely that I sometimes wonder at my own perfect sanity and understanding, and so clearly, so faultlessly, so precisely does my mind work that—and this I never told you—I am often and often able to detect mental inadequacy in many people around me, the slightest deviation from the normal, the least degree of mental instability. And it would amaze you, too, if I should tell you how many, many people you knew are in some degree more or less insane.
>
> He's only serenely disagreeable to me now, and we see almost nothing of one another except over the card tables. Gerald has been winning rather heavily, I am glad to say—glad as long as I cannot prevent him from playing. And yet I may be able to accomplish that yet in a roundabout way, because the apple visaged and hawk beaked Mr. Neergard has apparently become my slavish creature—quite infatuated. And as soon as I've fastened on his collar and made sure that Rosamund can't unhook it I'll try to make him shut down on Gerald's playing. This for your sake, Phil—because you ask me and because you must always stand for all that is upright and good and manly in my eyes. Ah, Phil, what a fool I was! And all, all my own fault too! ALIXE.

This ended the sudden eruption of correspondence, for he did not reply to this letter, though in it he read enough to make him gravely uneasy, and he fell once more into the habit of brooding, from which both Boots Lansing and Eileen had almost weaned him.

Also he began to take long, solitary walks in the park when not occupied in conferences with the representatives of the Lawn Nitro Powder works, a company which had recently approached him in behalf of his unperfected explosive, chaosite.

DIVER'S SUIT LEAKED WHILE UNDER THE WATER

A diver, who started to work at the new waterworks dam, had an exciting time this morning during his first descent. The diving suit had not been worn for some time, and the water leaked through while the wearer was working under the water. He was not aware of this until the water reached his chin, but prompt action by himself and the men above, who answered his signal, soon released him from his perilous position. Had the leak been of a more extensive nature, the affair would probably have had a more serious ending.

CONCRETE WORK OF NEW POWER HOUSE IS COMPLETED

Temporary Dams are Being Constructed and Concrete Work on Dam Will Start Shortly. Work on Power House to be Finished in Five Weeks.

The work of constructing the new power house and dam is progressing very favorably, and the Review was given to understand this afternoon that the work, as far as the Bishop Construction Company is concerned, will be finished this fall. The concrete work for the power house is completed all but a few details and the erection of the building will be proceeded with at once, under the supervision of Mr. Castleman, who has recently arrived to take charge of the work. This structure will be completed in five weeks' time.

Two temporary dams are being built to hold back the water on both sides, during the construction of the concrete dam. When these two are completed the water between them will be pumped out. The operations of a diver are an interesting feature of the work in connection with the temporary dams. He descends down into the water by means of a ladder and clears the bottom to allow the plank spiles being driven down, and then they are caulked by him. He wears the regulation diver's suit.

All the concrete work is being done under the supervision of Mr. Gus. Rimon. There are 125 men engaged on the job, and more, especially carpenters, are required.

MISSED THE OPPORTUNITY

Away up north where the bleak winds blow,
And the midnight sun lights the Arctic snow,
Beyond the land where the Eskimos dwell,
Lived a polar bear, and he liked it well.

For he had been born 'neath the Northern Star,
Away from the haunts of men so far,
And he liked the ice and the snow and the cold,
Of which we are told by explorers bold.

And this polar beast, when he felt that way,
Oft took a stroll, and the truth I say,
That many a time he had gnawed the pole,
Which Peary says was his life-long goal.

To this polar bear one day there came
A printed sheet, which extolled the fame
Of men who had reached the earth's lone top
Where Santa Claus, we are told, keeps shop.

And the bear, as he read the explorer's tale,
At his lack of foresight, commenced to rail,
For he could have prevented this awful mess,
If he had made use of the wireless.

GOOD BOTTOM FOR NEW BRIDGE

The work of scraping the river-bed under the Smith street bridge, for the purpose of securing a suitable bottom for the piers of the new bridge is being rushed as fast as possible. Scrapers, to which long handles are attached, are held by several men who walk along two floats which have been built for the purpose and which are pulled along underneath by means of a cable, which is drawn by an engine on the bank. The water is between ten and twelve feet deep at this place, and this is a big disadvantage to the contractors. Mr. E. Conroy stated to-day that an exceptionally good rock bottom has been found.

TYROLEAN MARKSMEN.

Peasant Sharpshooters and the Way They Are Trained.

Some idea of the accuracy of a Tyrolean crack shot may be gathered from the fact that unless he can, standing, put five successive bullets into a space that can be covered by a half crown piece at 200 yards he considers himself in very poor form. Even then his score may be only 20 out of a possible 30. A poor shot, though a man who can get on the 12-inch bull every time, may find himself credited with a paltry five or six. It is disheartening work for a novice, even if he has not done so badly at Bisley in former days and proudly sported the marksman's crossed rifles on his volunteer tunic.

That this fancy shooting—there is no better name for it—does not spoil the Tyrolese peasant for military rifle shooting is amply demonstrated when we witness an Imperial rifle regiment on parade. It would seem as if every man wore the green velvet balls dangling on his breast, the Austrian Army badge of marksmanship. But, excellent weapon as is the Austrian Mannlicher rifle, it is of little use at the tiny targets of the national shooting ranges.

The writer has had ample opportunity of studying the Tyrolese peasant marksman at home. Every village or cluster of villages has its own rifle range, run by the village council, and controlled by the state. Membership is not obligatory, but there is a subscription attached to it, and, once a member, the peasant may use any rifle range throughout the country. A further privilege is granted him after the completion of his three years' military service—namely, that one of the annual three weeks' trainings with the colors as reservist is remitted to the Standeschutz, or member of the National Rifle Club. This is also an exclusive Tyrolese privilege.

When a youth reaches the age of 18 he must attend the nearest rifle range, whether he is a member or not, and fire a certain number of shots. And later, if he is passed for military service, he must again fire a certain number of rounds as conscript ere he joins his regiment. The regimental authorities thus know the shooting possibilities of each recruit, and these preliminary tests are carried out with the service rifle, of which every range must possess a few.

Weather permitting, every range is open for practice on Sunday throughout the year from 11 a.m. till sundown. Ammunition is supplied at cost price, but most marksmen prefer to supply their own cartridges, which they fill themselves. The clerk of the range enters every score on an official sheet, and a nominal charge of four hellers (less than a halfpenny) is made for each shot entered therein. This pays for the upkeep of the range, the markers, etc.

An additional zest is given by a weekly Gnadengabe (gift of grace) from the Government, whereby the top scorers of the day receive two or three shillings each as a prize. The older men and crack shots, however, seldom compete for these small prizes and give their younger and poorer comrades a chance to pay their day's shooting expenses.—Reginald Wyon, in Chambers' Journal.

As In a Looking-Glass.

"I know I am looking like a fright to-night," said the woman.

The man studied her dress, her hair and her complexion closely.

"I don't see anything the matter with you," he said. "So far as I can see, you are looking as well as usual."

"But I am not," she insisted. "There is something wrong, and that head waiter saw at a glance what it is. If I had been up to the mark he wouldn't have put us away over here in this out of the way corner. He would have given us a table right under the chandelier in the middle of the room. All the best dressed people are always seated in the most conspicuous places, so as to make the restaurant look attractive. I am glad to say that that is where I usually sit. The plain people are ranged along the sides of the room just as we are to-night."

Old English Libel Suit.

Parliamentary repartee was ably upheld by Lord Brougham, especially during the great reform debates of the last century. On one occasion, when anti-reformers were trying to howl him down by imitating the sounds made by various animals, among which the braying of the ass was most recurrent, he waited for a pause and then remarked imperturbably that by a wonderful disposition of nature every animal had its peculiar mode of expressing itself and he was too much of a philosopher to quarrel with any of those modes. This was no less severe than the famous libel on the Earl of Limerick, calling him "a thing with human pretensions," which appeared in The Times in 1831 and for which the printer was fined $500 and confined for an indefinite period in Newgate.—London Chronicle.

Wise Poets.

"Do poets ever write poems in their letters to their sweethearts?" asked the sweet young thing.

"No," replied the near famous bard "We've got more sense than to queer the game in that manner."—Milwaukee Journal.

RASPBERRY RECIPES.

How to Prepare the Fruit For Everyday and Festive Occasions.

The raspberry bush resembles that of the currant in general size and appearance. The common name was given to it because of the roughness of the fruit. Both the scent and flavor of this fruit are very refreshing, and the berry itself is exceedingly wholesome and invaluable to people of a bilious and nervous temperament.

Raspberry Vinegar Sirup.—This is an excellent summer drink, and it is also sometimes recommended in cases of colds and fevers. Fill a large glass jar with picked raspberries and add sufficient best malt vinegar to cover the fruit. Cover the jar and let it stand for a week in a cool place. At the end of that time strain off the vinegar through muslin or cheesecloth, but do not squeeze the fruit much if the sirup is required to look clear and bright. Weigh the vinegar and allow double the weight of sugar. Place vinegar and sugar in the jar, cover it and stand in a saucepan of water. Bring the water very gradually to the boil and as soon as the sugar is dissolved lift the saucepan from the fire, leaving the jar standing in it until it is quite cold. Bottle the vinegar and use from a teaspoonful to a tablespoonful to the tumbler of cold water, according to taste.

Raspberry Jelly.—Pick and weigh the berries, place them in a large covered jar and stand the jar in a saucepan of boiling water. Cook gently for about an hour, then strain through cheesecloth or fine sieve. Measure the juice and to each pint allow three-quarters of a pound of sugar. Add the sugar to the juice and boil slowly until it becomes firm when tasted on a cold plate.

Raspberry Pudding.—Butter a pudding dish, line the sides and bottom with breadcrumbs, stew one pint of raspberries with two tablespoonfuls of sugar and one tablespoonful cold water. Pour the stewed fruit into the pudding dish and cover with breadcrumbs. Make a custard with a pint of milk and the yolks of three eggs, pour over the breadcrumbs and bake in the oven till browned. Whip the whites of the eggs to a stiff froth, flavor them with sugar and vanilla extract. Pile this on the top of the pudding and place in the oven for a few minutes. This makes a good cold pudding, when it may be baked in a mold and whipped cream used in the place of the whites of eggs.

Raspberry Water Ice. — Pick one pound of raspberries and four ounces of red currants, mash them well in a saucepan and boil them with a pint of water and eight ounces of lump sugar. When the fruit is cooked strain it through muslin. Pour this sirup into the freezing machine and freeze in the usual way. Serve in small glasses.

Raspberry Mold.—Dissolve one and one-half heaping tablespoonfuls powdered gelatin in two gills of milk. Place one cupful of milk, the thinly cut rind of one lemon and three tablespoonfuls of sugar in a saucepan and stir gently over the fire till they boil. Strain this into the gelatin, allow to cool a little, then add half a pint of whipped cream, one gill of raspberry juice and a few drops of red coloring. Pour into a wet mold. When firm turn out on to a cold dish and decorate with raspberries.

IN THE SUMMER CAMP.

An Improvised Stove That Cooks Food Easily and Well.

"The simplest way to cook in the open air is over a fireplace made by digging a hole about one foot deep and two feet square and partly filling it with stones. Around three sides of this build a wall six or eight inches high, and on the top place a large flat stone, leaving a small opening at the back for the smoke to escape," says Harper's Bazar. "For frying fish, meat or mush and for baking biscuit, pancakes, etc., this flat stone is practically as good as the top of a camp stove.

"Beans may easily be baked in this fireplace by first removing the stone from the top, then after a good fire has burned for three hours it is allowed to burn down, the ashes and embers are cleared away and the camp kettle of beans is sunk into the cavity among the hot stones. A stone is then placed over it, and this is covered with the hot ashes and embers. At the end of twelve hours the result will be a kettle of delicious Boston baked beans.

"Large fish are delicious when cooked in the following manner: First split the fish open, clean and carefully wash out the interior and season well with salt and pepper. Build a hot fire, and when it has burned down lay the fish in the hot ashes and embers, allowing it to remain for thirty minutes or longer, according to the size of the fish. When done remove from the ashes, brush clean with a cloth and peel off the burned outside. The flesh underneath will be found thoroughly cooked, with all the delicate flavors and juices of the fish fully retained.

"Small fish are best prepared by first rolling them in Indian meal, seasoned with salt and pepper, and frying them in the frying pan with a small piece of salt pork."

Summer Hanging Baskets.

There is nothing that adds so attractively to the large porch as large hanging baskets suspended between the pillars. In making them one should purchase large, flare wire baskets—the larger the better—in order to provide sufficient earth to the growing plants.

Line the baskets with wood moss or purchase it of a florist. A basket outlined with yellow myrtle, the center being filled with short ferns, is very pretty.

The first sod of the works in connection with the new pier at Tiree was cut by Lord Arch. Campbell.

Nothing Too Good

WE have had over ten years experience in supplying Toric Lenses to our most particular patrons. This form of lens is increasingly popular in all the large cities of America and especially in the United States, where the manufacturers have large capital and the best facilities for turning out accurate work. Americanism.

"Don't," said Lady Lacland to the American heiresses she was about to launch in London—"don't say clerk when you mean shop assistant. A clerk is a writer, not a salesman. Pronounce it 'clark,' by the way.

"Don't say 'mad' when you mean 'angry.' Madness is insanity.

"Don't say 'on' a street, but 'in' a street.

"Don't say 'it is claimed that So-and-so.' Say 'it is declared' or 'it is stated.' Why? Oh, because 'it is claimed' is an Americanism. In good Oxford English the expression is neither written nor spoken.

"Don't say 'patent.' Say 'paytent'."

Armless, But Useful.

Professor Karl Lohmeyer of Konigsberg, who died at Danzig, at the age of 72, was born without arms. A special permit was granted to allow his entry into the university service. His students opened and shut doors for him, but he turned the pages of books with his mouth and could sign his name firmly with a pen held between his teeth.

Owing to the swine fever at the Crofts, Coupar-Angus, several animals have died, and others have had to be killed.

NOT TOO MANY ANCIENTS SAYS THE PREMIER

Montreal, Oct. 5.—Sir Wilfrid Laurier delivered an important speech here yesterday, the occasion being the laying of the corner-stone of the new Quebec Government Technical School. All of the leading Catholic and Protestant Church dignitaries were present.

Abbe Gauthier, the representative of the archbishop, asked that the state, which will control the school, should not wound anyone's opinion, and when Sir Wilfrid came to speak, he said that some people had been apprehensive, but their fears had no cause to exist.

The Premier said he did not want to change the present school system of Quebec, but simply to improve it. He wanted the young men to spend more time studying Shakespeare, Gibbon and Macauley, and less going over Virgil and Socrates.

Rev. Canon Ingles, M.A., rector of St. Mark's, Parkdale, will be archdeacon of Simcoe.

Rev. H. P. Plumptre, M.A., rector of St. James', will be sub-dean and canon of St. Alban's Cathedral.

There are more than a dozen other less important promotions.

ROSS WANTED IN DETROIT TOO

Detroit, Oct. 5.—That Joseph G. Ross, under arrest in Toronto on a charge of robbing hotels, is "J. G. Bowes," who a year ago swindled Miss Clara Brown of Detroit out of $500 in cash, on a real estate deal, is the conclusion reached by the Detroit police yesterday after seeing a photograph of Ross. Miss Brown also identified the man as "Bowes."

She told the police that after learning in some manner that she had a little money saved, Bowes (or Ross) called upon her and by specious promises succeeded in obtaining from her $500 as first payment on a house and lot.

The Detroit police will arrest Ross when Toronto is through with him.

NATIONALISTS ARE OPPOSED TO DUTIES

London, Oct. 5.—The Nationalists have come out strongly against the clauses imposing additional duties on beer, spirits and tobaccos.

By an agreement between the Government and the Unionists, the committee stage of the bill is to be concluded by Oct. 7, but it is likely the Nationalists will cause delay by protracted debates of remaining clauses.

Lord Rosebery in a letter declining to address further meetings on the budget says: "To make any further speeches of amplification and reply would simply involve my return to political activity, which I have long withdrawn and to which I hope never to return."

WILBUR WRIGHT PERFORMS GREAT FEAT AT NEW YORK

Aviator Makes Flight of Twenty Miles Over the Hudson River, Stays in the Air for 33 Minutes at Height of From 100 to 200 Feet Above Warships.

New York, Oct. 5. An aeroplane flashed past the white dome of Grant's tomb yesterday, then, turning gracefully in mid-air, over the waters of the Hudson, shot like a falcon back to Governor's Island, ten miles away.

Wilbur Wright of Dayton, Ohio, thus placed his name in the rank with Hudson and Fulton in one of the most spectacular feats in the history of aeroplanes. Over the masts of warships, from whose decks the hoarse cheers of the sailors were borne up to him in his elevated seat, he flew for twenty miles — ten miles each way—remaining in the air for 33 minutes and 33 seconds and alighting at the Aerodome without mishap.

During the flight business was practically at a standstill in all the part of Manhattan from which a view of his remarkable performance was available.

The flight was made under conditions only moderately favorable. When Wright reached Governor's Island the wind was blowing a ten-mile gale, while an overcast sky added to the uncertainty of the weather. The aviator pulled his cap over his eyes and reached for the starting lever. In a moment the machine was off. With the planes slightly to one side, the man slowly ascended into the air, rising to a height of barely twenty feet, while it swooped in a semi-circle towards the water's edge.

Crafts tooting their whistles caused him to ascend further before making for the mouth of the river. Almost indistinguishable against the gray banks, the machine soared past Old Castle William and soon entered the canon made by the giant scrapers of Manhattan Island and the Jersey Hills.

At this point the aeroplane was flitting at a height of nearly 200 feet, but Wright slowly brought the machine down, sloping gradually until he was but a bare hundred feet above the tooting ferryboats and the busy river traffic. His motor was churning as regularly as a clock, and, setting himself in his seat, he sped onward up the river.

Over the warships of foreign powers he passed, his progress marked by the cheers of sailors of his own country and those of England, Germany, France and Italy.

When the aviator reached the British cruiser Argyle, anchored an eighth of a mile above Grant's Tomb, Wright brought his direction rudders into play and, describing an easy and graceful curve, started on his return journey down the river.

While the ten-mile up stream occupied nearly twenty minutes, the return flight was made in little more than 13 minutes, or at 42 miles an hour.

ALD. HARRY MORGAN MAY RUN FOR MAYOR AT THE NEXT MUNICIPAL ELECTION

It seems probable that Ald. Harry Morgan wil lbe a candidate for Mayor at the next municipal elections in January. Mr. Morgan has been requested to stand for election on the Temperance Ticket, and if he does run, it will be on this ticket he will appeal to the ratepayers for support.

A Review reporter approached Ald. Morgan this morning and asked him if the statement made to the effect that he would run for Mayor at the coming municipal elections was true. He would not deny it, and said it was too early to get any expression of confirmation from him. He admitted to the Review, however, that he had been asked to run, and said he would be able to state definitely in the near future whether or not he would seek the office of Chief Magistrate for the city.

A CANADIAN WITH AN EXPEDITION TO SOUTH POLE

Montreal, Sept. 26.—A Canadian who accompanied Lieutenant Shackleton on his famous expedition in search of the South Pole, passed through Montreal on Saturday. He is Dr. Mitchell, of Perth, Ont., formerly surgeon and medical superintendent on the ship Nimrod, which brought the explorers to the base of Mount Erebus, whence the zig-zag overland dash, which resulted in the planting of the British flag scarcely one hundred miles from the Antarctic Pole was made. He does not consider Antarctic exploration, however, nearly so thrilling or romantic as many seem to think; many long, monotonous waits are sure to be experienced. He stayed with the Nimrod at Mount Erebus for a long while, and considers that there are pleasanter ways of passing the time than that. Luckily the cold is not nearly so severe or hard to bear as thermometer records indicate.

Mount Erebus marks the nearest point to the pole, which can be reached by sea. From there on stretches that vast, unsurveyed, ice-bound continent, at least twice as vast in extent as Europe, but bounded by the great ice barrier, the piled-up mountains of ice, which year after year only grow larger and more impassable, hiding behind them that which man has up to now, been unable to attain.

The shifting ice-floes of the seas about the North Pole, present no such tremendous obstacle as the rugged mountains of ice and snow which force the intrepid explorer to make detour after detour, to test pass after pass, opening after opening, to zig-zag forward miles, only to be checked by towering, impassable ridges, as he struggles onward to the bottom of the world, whence he can look only northward, northward, northward, over miles of heaped-up snow and jagged ice.

FIVE DROWNED IN NOVA SCOTIA

Halifax, N.S., Oct. 5.—A boating accident on the Minas Basin resulted in the drowning of five persons. Robt. Martin of Melanson had fitted up a sailboat with an auxiliary motor, and with his wife and two children, Hattie, aged 16, and Percy, aged 14, Mr. and Mrs. Robie Stirers and their little daughter, Gertrude, aged 3, went out sailing. While Martin was hoisting the sail, a squall caused the boat to upset.

Mr. and Mrs. Stirers managed to grasp the upturned boat and were rescued.

BRAKEMAN IS KILLED

Orangeville, Oct. 5.—Joseph Paul, a brakeman on the Owen Sound division of the C.P.R., living at 95 Mulock avenue, West Toronto, was instantly killed at McKinley's Cut, three miles northwest of here yesterday afternoon.

He was braking on the north bound freight which was trying to make the grade, but three engines were utilized in the attempt but proved unsuccessful, and it was found necessary to divide the train. The wheels slipped and the heavy train became stalled. Paul proceeded to turn off the stock cock of the brakes, the train being divided, when the slack of the forward section drove back, crushing the stomach into pulp and breaking his right arm, death being instantaneous. The body was brought here and examined by a jury under Coroner James Henry.

INCENDIARIES ARE AT WORK

Big Summer Residence in Thousand Islands is Destroyed

Gananoque, Oct. 5.—The palatial summer residence among the Thousand Islands near here, belonging to Oliver Adams of Rosedale, has been completely destroyed by fire. Some friends of Mr. Adams (who has closed his house for the season) observed flames coming from the verandah and found the woodwork literally soaked with coal oil, which had apparently been poured on in pailfuls by incendiaries. Mr. Adams has been most active in his efforts to enforce the laws in regard to fishing, and particularly that section which prohibits the use of nets. He is known to have incurred the resentment of some men engaged in fishing in that part of the St. Lawrence.

Mr. Adams has offered a reward of $200 for information regarding the incendiaries.

TORONTO BROKERS SUSPENDED BUSINESS WITH BIG SHORTAGE

Wyatt & Co. Behind $150,000—Firm of Man Who Died Suddenly in Toronto on Thursday Last Had Been in Difficulties for Some Time.

Toronto, Oct. 5. The suspension of Wyatt & Co., brokers, 46 King street west, which was announced yesterday morning, did not come as a surprise to those interested in financial circles. With the death of Major Wyatt on Thursday last, rumors in regard to the firm were prolific and his fellow brokers knew that the firm was in difficulties.

The assignment was made to E. R. C. Clarkson and the assignees immediately put their men to work on the books to straighten out the tangle which had ensued through the speculation of one of the members.

The shortage will probably run up to $150,000 when the outstanding accounts have been closed up and everything balanced. Mr. Maule, partner of the late Mr. Wyatt, has refused to make any statement in regard to the firm's affairs, preferring to wait until the assignees have gone fully into the books.

The first intimation of the assignment was received on the Toronto Stock Exchange yesterday morning by the secretary and prior to the opening of business for the day. Secretary Ogden read the notice of the assignment to the assembled brokers. Under the rules of the exchange, liabilities due to stock exchange members by another member, must be straightened out in the day of notice. This can only be done by creditors of the defaulting firm either buying or selling securities which the members had with the defaulting firm. The immediate demand for Dominion Steel yesterday morning on the announcement with each purchase that this security was bought under the above rule, indicated that the firm of Wyatt & Co., were heavily short of Steel and the purchases were made to balance up the accounts.

Messrs. Wyatt & Co. have also been heavily interested in New York and to a small extent in Cobalts, and at the office at which the firm dealt with the agents of the New York brokers, it was learned that Assignee Clarkson had instructed them either to buy or sell certain securities in which the firm were interested. Most of these transactions were buying in orders showing that the firm was short of most of the stocks on the books of the company.

It has been known for some time that Mr. Wyatt was what is termed a "bear" on the market. He preferred to sell rather than buy, and the consensus of opinion is that his personal transactions were responsible for the failure of his firm.

It is understood that none of Mr. Wyatt's fellow brokers will be at all embarrassed through their dealings with his firm, as they have a first claim on the seat on the exchange, which is worth between $18,000 and $20,000, and any shortage on liabilities to his fellow brokers will be distributed from this before any balance is handed to the assignee.

TWO MILLION DOLLARS WORTH OF PROPERTY IS DESTROYED IN ALBERTA

One Man is Dead, a Girl May Die, and Immense Damage Has Been Done by Fire Which Has Been Raging Since a Week Ago Saturday in Hutton.

Calgary, Alta., Oct. 5.—One life is lost and another is seriously endangered, and there is a report that two million dollars' worth of property was destroyed by a fire which started northeast of Hutton, Alta., and has been raging since Saturday week. The flames were checked at Hutton without any loss to the town, but not without hard fighting.

Mr. Yagerson was plowing his fire-guard when the first signs of the fire became apparent. Leaving his niece, Mary Segelstad, to check the flames by continuing the plowing of the fire-guard, Yagerson set off to assist the assembled homesteaders in fighting the flames for the possession of their homes. The smoke was so suffocating that by the time he reached the scene he fell senseless before the rapidly-advancing flames had reached him. Sergt. Fletcher and Constable Bruce of the R.N.W.M.P., who were among the most energetic of the firefighters, took charge of the unfortunate settler's body.

His niece, who is at present in Columbia Hospital, suffering from very serious burns, and who was left to plow the fireguard, is the victim of her stern devotion to duty. It was but at the last moment that she left the team to take her one remaining chance of escape. She was caught by the flames, and is now lying in Columbia Hospital. The heroic young woman was brought into Bassano by Charles Parks, a rancher in the devastated district, and from there placed on a train for Calgary.

"It is estimated that the loss will easily run into millions," says Mr. Mercer, of township 27, section 7, range 10, who was a witness to some of the most pathetic scenes. "The sufferers are nearly all new settlers and have not yet got a foothold in the country."

Another loser in the big fire is Dr. Cameron Gordon of Los Angeles, who owns a half section of land in the burned district. The fire is still raging fiercely, and the people of the entire district are engaged in fighting the flames, but the full extent of the disaster will not be known for a few days.

Lorne McGibbon, president; Geo. Rumpel, 1st vice-president; and A. J. Kimmel, 2nd vice-president. Oscar Rumpel will manage the Berlin Felt Boot Co.'s factory and A. J. Kimmel the other two factories.

TRANSPORTATION IS THE KEYNOTE

Montreal, Oct. 5.—The chief complaints heard yesterday by the royal commission investigating trade relations between Canada and the West Indies centered round the question of transportation. PERJURY BY WHOLESALE

That there was perjury in the West Peterborough election case is certain beyond dispute. When men swear that they have been bribed, giving all the circumstantial details, and then take affaidavits at the instigation of the parties they have accused, setting forth that their first story is a falsehood, they perjure themselves either in the making of the charge or in its retraction. A court of law can place no confidence in the evidence of such witnesses and the allegations they make must fall to the ground.

The trial judges therefore, did right in rejecting the evidence of the perjurers, regardless altogether of the weight of the other testimony, or of the direction towards which it pointed. It would not be fair to hang a dog on the word of men such as those who lied in the election trial, however solemn might be the oath supporting their story. While this much is said, it must also be observed that the action of the defence in interviewing the witnesses of the prosecution was far from satisfactory. If, in an ordinary civil case, it should be found that the defendant has had the witnesses of the complainant in his office, or in the office of his lawyers, and has either personally, or through agents, induced them to take affidavits declaring that the evidence to which they have already sworn is untrue, such action would be censurable. Nor could the censure be too severe. The private interview leads itself to all sorts of suggestions. Pressure might be applied; money might pass; a promise might be made of considerations in the future. All these things are possible, and because they are possible surreptitious interference with the witness is improper. If a witness is going into court with a story that is false, the lawful way to meet him—the way that commends itself to the innocent man—is by the production of evidence that confounds him. When a case ends, as it must, where a witness, gratuitously or otherwise, pronounces himself a liar, the result is not such as, in the public interest, it should be. The judges, of course, cannot accept the evidence and the public is at a loss to know whether the admitted perjury was committed when the witness made the charge or when he retracted it, for obviously either story from such a person may be false.

There is said to be a great deal of perjury in our courts. Not long ago, in the course of a trial, the judge ordered the arrest of a witness on the ground that he was swearing falsely. This crime cannot be repressed if treated leniently. The offenders in the Stratton case ought, therefore, to be pursued to the full limit of the law. When men swear that they have been bribed, thus rendering an expensive trial necessary, and forthwith proceed to the other side and take oath that they have lied, the penitentiary is the home for them. The public will expect Mr. Stratton, who, if the latest story of these people is true, has been an innocent victim of falsehood, to help, as a public man, and a member of Parliament, to place the offenders where they belong.—The Mail and Empire.

ELECTION-TRIAL ECHOES

That the late trial ended in a draw has not satisfied the people. They feel that they have been cheated of their dues. The rotten reputation of West Peterborough was to have been cleared up and it has not been. Rumors, counter-rumors, threats and counter-threats and reports of every sort are in the air. Only an inquiry will straighten matters up. It should be taken out of the hands of both parties and placed in the hands of the Government representing the people as a whole. There will be no rest and nothing but slime until an end is put to it all, to the satisfaction of the public. At present it is considered a disgrace to be a resident of the riding and it will remain so until the worst is known. The press of Canada is crying out for something to be done in and for West Peterborough. Who is lying? Where does the blame lie? Is it all a nightmare? Is it all alas! but too true?

THE ELECTION TRIAL

Toronto News.

There is not much comfort for either party in the election trial at Peterborough. Altogether it is a thoroughly discreditable and sordid business, neither does the chief censure lie upon the few immigrants who seem to have been purchased at so much a head, and who were only too willing to make a sale of their franchise. The chief offenders were a group of leading citizens of Peterborough, who seem to believe that the franchise is a commercial commodity, and perjury a venial offence in an election trial. These reputable citizens should go to jail, and by some process the methods employed by the parties in the constituency should be investigated to the bottom. We could have no more striking evidence of the futility of the courts to expose corruption than this trial affords. With the existing machinery no political party can hope to protect itself by judicial proceedings. We do not attack the courts. All we mean is that the machinery provided is impotent. Until a public prosecuting officer is appointed, with powers such as belong to the Auditor-General, no political party henceforth will be wise to devote its means or its energies to attempts to protect the franchise and punish corruption through the agency of the courts.

WEST PETERBORO'

The petition against the return of Mr. J. R. Stratton for West Peterborough has been dismissed, the judges discrediting the evidence of corruption which was so specifically given. As this is tantamount to a decision that a number of witnesses were not to be believed, we will expect some action in these cases by the Crown authorities. In fact, one man has been arrested on a charge of perjury already—the famous Robert H. Sheppard, who swore that he secured a position in the Liberal organization for the purpose of betraying it to the Conservatives.

Such a spectacle as this trial has presented to the nation, should not be allowed to pass without some definite and public effort by the representatives of the law to sift the truth from the maze of contradictory swearing and apply punishment where it belongs. If men can cut the figure in the witness box which several of those sworn at Peterborough did with apparent sang froid, and—to use an expressive street phrase—"get away with it," we must not be surprised if our high standards of justice in this country decline. The sanctity of an oath will hardly keep its prestige if it can be played with in this fashion and nothing unpleasant follow. It is surely the business and duty of those charged with the preservation of the prestige of our courts to put terror into the hearts of any tempted to approach the "bed of justice" with a lie on their lips; and this becomes particularly imperative when the trial which has seen so much cross-swearing has enjoyed the bad eminence of a political "cause celebre."

EDITORIAL NOTES

The Examiner is fairly revelling in triumphant bluff these days.

All Canada demands an official governmental inquiry into the electoral condition of West Peterborough.

It is very satisfactory to find that the Isolation Hospital is now within sight of being an established fact. The contract is let.

It is understood that the evidence in the late election-trial is being laid before the proper authorities with a demand for an inquiry.

Would the Examiner welcome a governmental non-partizan inquiry? If so, let it join the Review in demanding it.

At the north pole is an immense sea. At the south pole is an immense stretch of land. The quest of the latter is therefore the easier.

In view of the insinuations made by the Examiner respecting the cross-petition, it is imperative that the Examiner join with the Review in demanding a governmental inquiry.

The Peterborough election trial has already resulted in at least one arrest for perjury. If they get after all of them down there the jail will not be able to hold them.—Hamilton Spectator.

The Otonabee Power Co. seems anxious to furnish power to the city and their scheme seems a strong one. The interests of the city are safeguarded by the reference in cases of difficulty to the Railway Act. The government board decides in such cases.

The Peterborough Hardware Company want a siding. They propose to make use of property that can never be made use of in any other way than by siding privileges. It is not proposed we understand to make George st. a nuisance and a danger by frequent crossings. That can be provided against.

The "preamble" or clause explaining why a by-law is submitted is likely in the case of the local option by-law, to cause an uneasy feeling.

The local option by-law should go to the people in usual way. Such preambles are unusual and it is not conducive to a feeling of satisfaction that a by-law that has been properly presented to the Council should be earmarked for future reference and possibly litigation. The Council cannot avoid assuming the responsibility which the law plainly calls for upon certain conditions being observed. The local optionists would feel that they are being discriminated against and it would lead to trouble.

At the moment even over-praise is better than none.

Mr. Burnham, who ran on the anti-graft policy in West Peterborough, put up a good fight, both at the election and at the trial which ensued. In the contest he was overwhelmed as a result of methods to which he himself would not resort, and at the trial we see too well what has happened. The people of the constituency owe a debt of gratitude to Mr. Burnham for the gallant struggle in which he has engaged. A courageous public man influenced by high principles, and as able as he is honorable, he will yet take his place in the great council of the nation.—The Mail and Empire.

"It was fortunate for the petitioner and his friends that the abandonment of the petition carried with it the withdrawal of the counter petition, for it is known that its prosecution would have revealed methods of corruption and corrupt acts that would pale into insignificance the sinister methods employed to procure evidence, as revealed in the beginning of the discredited and abandoned petition. The proven methods, employed by some members of the "party of purity" in engineering the protest, may naturally be regarded as a fitting sequel to the methods employed in the election contest. We should hereafter hear less hypocritical assumption of political purity and righteousness from the mouth of the man and a section of his party who have at once given the most pitiable exhibition of incompetency and glumness, and cynical demonstration of their belief in the satanic policy that the end justifies the means."—The Examiner.

This is one more reason for the sitting of a commission of governmental inquiry.

Doctors Said Only Zam-Buk Would Cure Her Eczema

In view of the numerous cures which Zam-Buk has worked when all else has failed, there is little wonder that at the end the doctor attending Mrs. J. P. St. Denis, of 305 Thompson street, Winnipeg, should tell her there was nothing but Zam-Buk could cure her. The result showed the far-seeing wisdom of this practitioner, and having been completely cured by Zam-Buk, Mrs. St. Denis gives her experience for the benefit of other sufferers.

She says: "Eczema started on one side of my face and nose. At first my nose felt sore, similar to what one feels when having a bad cold. I paid no attention to this, thinking it would pass away in a day or so, but to my surprise it got worse. The nose then became swollen and hard, and turned a purplish red, as well as part of the cheek on that side of my face.

"As the disease developed pimples and ulcers broke out, then the skin cracked in places and peeled off in flakes, leaving my face and nose raw and sore. This condition reacted on my general health, and I became very ill. I could not sleep at night because of the irritation and the pain, and my face was in such a shocking condition that for two months I did not go out of the house. I applied remedies which were supposed to be good for skin diseases, but in vain.

"My doctor also treated me, but without effect, until one day he said that the only thing which would now be likely to cure me was Zam-Buk.

"Acting on his advice, I procured a supply and found that even the first few applications had a soothing effect on the sores. I left off everything else in favor of this balm, and applied it liberally every day to effected parts. In a remarkably short time, considering the obstinate nature of my disease, we saw traces of improvement, which encouraged us to persevere with the Zam-Buk treatment. Zam-Buk reduced the discoloration, then the hard swelling began to show traces of leaving, the sores seemed less angry, and in about three weeks' time most of the sores were healing nicely. To cut a long story short, I continued with the Zam-Buk treatment until my face was cleared completely of all traces of the troublesome and painful eczema."

Such was the experience of Mrs. St. Denis, and scores of other sufferers could tell of similar experience. Zam-Buk is Nature's own healer, being composed of pure herbal healing essences, and free from all trace of harmful animal fat or mineral poison. It is a sure cure for cuts, lacerations, burns, eczema, ringworm, poisoned wound, festering sores, bad leg, and all skin injuries and diseases. Zam-Buk is also a cure for piles. Druggists and stores everywhere sell at 50 cents a box, or post free from the Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, on receipt of price. You are warned against cheap and harmful imitations, sometimes represented as "just as good."

It is now pretty well known among hunters that the best deer hunting country in Ontario is on the line of the Canadian Northern Ontario and that hunters receive special attention. Mr. C. Price Green, Passenger Agent of the line is a hunter himself who goes right with the parties and looks after them, in fact he located most of them. This year the line will be opened north of Sellwood into the midst of the Moose Country, they are reported very thick, the Engineers say that they have never seen anything like it, the Moose season up there opens October 15th, fifteen days before the Deer. We have something special on a new place that will take three parties of deer hunters.

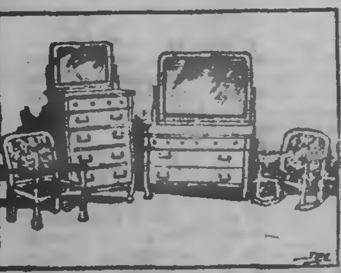
SUMMER BEDROOM SET.

White Furniture Upholstered In Chintz Attractive For Cottages.

The most attractive furniture of white enamel and flowered chintz is found in the stores these days, being designed specially for use in summer cottages, though never out of place in any home. Bedroom furniture of all white is surely more restful than any made of more costly or magnificent woods. It is easily kept clean, as it requires no polishing and needs only to be wiped off with a slightly dampened cloth.



IN WHITE ENAMEL.

Ice on the Table.

A neatly cut block of ice on the dining table in a glass or china bowl will keep flies at a distance and on a hot day will make the diners feel cooler. The rough edges can be rounded by hot water or standing in the air. A charming addition is to hollow out a trough in the ice and fill this with water and put ferns or pond lilies or flowers of some sort in it. The trough can be made by very carefully chiseling the ice with chisel and mallet or by taking an old flatiron, heating and setting it on the ice and melting out a hole. This is longer and not as exact, but easier for most women.

An Uncomplimentary Estimate.

"No," said Mrs. Tackpoint, "I don't want woman's suffrage. It's liable to cause embarrassment."

"In what way?"

THE YELLOW DRESS.

Two Love Scenes In Which It Played a Part.

By S. S. HACKLEY.

[Copyright, 1909, by Associated Literary Press.]

"May I see the gown?"

It was the sweetest of voices that spoke, and the brown eyes that looked inquiringly at the saleswoman of a clothing bureau in a large eastern city matched the voice.

The saleswoman led the way to a room filled with clothing and held upon her fingers a truly beautiful gown. It was of yellow satin, of the heavy kind that stands alone and glistens like cloth of gold.

The girl reverently touched the shining garment.

"It is magnificent," she cried; "just the thing for my tour!"

"It was donated by a wealthy woman whose daughter had worn it once and for some reason took a dislike to it," explained the saleswoman.

"How could she?" The girl held one rich fold to her face, studying its effect on her clear brunette complexion. "How could she?"

"I wonder myself," remarked the saleswoman as she took from her customer the $6 required for the exquisite creation.

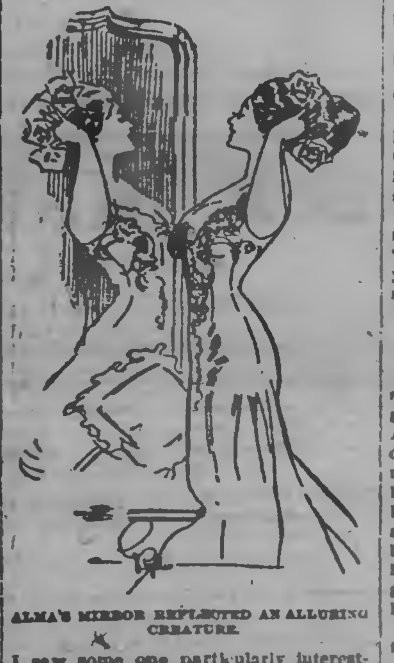
"I thank you a thousand times," said the girl gratefully, "for saving it for me. You have made me perfectly happy!"

* * * * * * *

Leslie Reading was young in years for the professorship he held in the college for men in Alma Laurens' home city, very handsome, very grave in demeanor and—afraid of women.

Alma Laurens, only child of the wealthiest man in the city—Alma, with her red brown hair and her brilliant brown eyes, had a cluster of scalps at her belt, the scalps of those who had fallen victims to her charms and offered her their hearts and their names. Moreover, the object of her life was to add to this cluster.

"I was out in the Blue Bubble this afternoon," she said one evening to her cousin, "and just by the college yard I saw some one particularly interesting. You must find out who he is, Mort."



ALMA'S MIRROR REFLECTED AN ALLURING CREATURE.

Morton Ellis was one whose scalp lock hung on Alma's jeweled belt, but the fact had long since ceased to pain him.

"Still at your old tricks, Alma! How was the fellow dressed?"

"Oh, Morton, don't ask me about his clothes! His hair was curly, just like the color of Fanchette's hide. And his eyes—deep blue and abstracted looking. He wouldn't have seen me if"— "You hadn't dropped your handkerchief!" surmised Morton.

"The wind—there really was a wind—twisted my scarf around his feet, and he restored it to me. You must find out for me, Mort."

"Any distinctive feature?" questioned her cousin.

Alma wrinkled her forehead. "No—but, Mort, he had a satchel with a tiny wood handled something."

"Geologist's hammer," hazarded Ellis. "A college man, lassie!"

Next afternoon Mort announced that Alma's scarf rescuer was Leslie Reading, professor of geology, enthusiastic to a degree over his work, and a frequenter of the Wanden road.

"Oh, Mort," Alma greeted him that evening, "I came upon Professor Reading on the Wanden road! He explained so many things I've always wanted to know about rocks, and, Mort, he's coming to my reception next week!"

Reading had always held an old fashioned idea that love was something to be spoken of only after lengthy acquaintance, nor did his idea, much to Alma's irritation, change after he met her.

Determined before the summer vacation to make his tongue tell what his eyes had already eloquently told, Alma began to treat him with an uncertain tenderness that convinced him that she loved him.

"I never dreamed that you would ask me to marry you," she lightly told him when, at the great June reception at the Laurens house, he spoke in reverent humility.

"How could you think I cared for you?"

"How could I think of it?" Reading asked when he at length understood. "You made me think of it!"

Alma's mirror after the reception that evening reflected an alluring creature in her splendid yellow satin gown, but he had not been sufficiently affected by the glamour of her beauty to beseech her to change her mind. Vexed and disappointed, she had sent away the gown she had worn.

* * * * * * *

It was October again. The western college town had never had a concert to equal the one now in progress.

"Isn't she beautiful!" The instructor who had thrown up a professorship in an eastern city for this humbler place heard this breathed as he sat listening with downcast eyes.

"Do look, Professor Reading! Oh that gown! Oh!"

Leslie looked up. There behind the footligths stood a girl with masses of red brown hair waved simply back from her face. The gown she wore with charming grace might have been Alma Laurens' June reception gown thought Reading. And was it not?

Madeline Coyle did not like the staring to which she was subjected, but there was something in the evidently unconscious gaze of a pair of solemn blue eyes that followed her during the next day at the hotel that made her heart beat quicker.

Long acquaintance is not necessary to love. Madeline knew this very soon, and she began to find it hard to sing before the serious listener in the front row each evening. It was a series of concerts that was being sung in the college town.

And Reading knew before the week's end that the heart he had believed dead was alive and in the keeping of the young singer who wore Alma Laurens' dress.

On Saturday he came upon Madeline walking on the river bank.

"I want to speak to you, Miss Coyle," he said hastily. "Will you listen a moment?"

"Professor who stares, what have you to say?" she asked, in attempted lightness.

Reading flushed painfully. "Did I stare? It is small wonder when you—when you wear the very costume another woman wore when she trampled on my heart—a woman who, for the fun of making me propose marriage, made me believe she loved me. I—I—may I ask"—

"I had no means to buy a new costume," the girl said simply, "so I purchased it from a clothing bureau."

"I did not know there was a woman in the world so beautiful," said Reading after a moment. "Madeline, what would you say if a stranger told you he loved you?"

Madeline looked at him, then laid her slim hand on his trembling one.

"I would say," she half whispered, "'Oh, Leslie, how happy I am!'"

"Blessed yellow dress!" murmured Reading when they had strolled back to the town at sunset. "You'll wear it at our wedding, won't you, my sweet?"

The young singer smiled. "A bride must wear white," she said softly, "but I will put it on at evening when you come home to dinner. Will that satisfy you, dear?"

And Reading made eloquent answer.

Rose That Changes Its Color.

White in the shade, red in the sun—such is the twofold character that has given a name to the chameleon rose. At night or when it is carried into a dark room it assumes a waxlike whiteness. This does not occur abruptly, but the petals first pass through a blush tint, which rapidly changes into a very pale rose and finally ends by becoming the purest white. Then if it is taken into bright sunlight with the greatest rapidity it resumes the scarlet tint of the most brilliant peony.

This horticultural phenomenon comes from Japan, that country of magic gardens and wizard horticulturists.—Petit Jardin.

ADVERTISE IN THE REVIEW.

Do You Need Shaking?
Like a Stove Choked with Ashes.
You have probably noticed how much more briskly the fire burns when freshly built or shaken. You doubtless remember too, how much more briskly you used to get around when you were in your 'teens or twenties.
The cases are parallel. You are like the fire that is choked with ashes.
The cells which compose the body are constantly dying and being renewed. Then there is the indigestible part of the food to be removed. This cleansing of the body is the duty of the bowels, kidneys and skin. When any of these organs fail to do their work properly, the system becomes clogged and the fire of life burns low.
There is an increasing tendency towards constipation, kidney trouble and poisoned blood as one grows older. In most cases, the need is felt of something to regulate these vital organs.
"Fruit-a-tives" the famous fruit medicine, does this perfectly. It acts directly on the liver, increasing the flow of bile and causes the bowels to move regularly and naturally. "Fruit-a-tives" is the greatest of kidney regulators, overcoming the tendency to congestion of the kidneys and strengthening these organs. "Fruit-a-tives also stimulates the skin to renewed action.
By their combined action on bowels, kidneys and skin, "Fruit-a-tives" keeps the system free of all poisons and renews the vigor of youth.
"Fruit-a-tives" are sold by all dealers at 50c a box, 6 for $2.50, or trial box, 25c—or may be obtained from Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

A Case of Luck.

"Guess I was born lucky, all right," remarked a man with a low comedy face at a downtown lunch counter. "Listen to this:

"Yesterday morning on leaving home I encountered a friend at my newsdealer's. He handed me a paper. At the subway station he produced two tickets, and we rode together. About 12:30 my brother-in-law phoned me an invitation to join him at luncheon, which I did. He was engaged to dine at my house in the evening. He called for me at the office and insisted on paying the fares uptown. When I got home I suddenly realized that, quite inadvertently, I hadn't spent a cent all day."

"Don't see anything very lucky about that," a listener interrupted.

"Didn't say there was," continued the speaker. "But I discovered at the same time that I had left home in the morning without one cent in my pocket."

"Guess you are lucky, all right," said the other.—New York Mail.

Made His Heart Glad.

'Twas night, and the editor lay in bed and thought of the weary day he had just passed, of his aching head and the bills he had to pay.

He watched the stars through his window peep and Cynthia's silver beams till his eyes grew tired and he fell asleep and passed to the land of dreams.

He slept and dreamed till the morning broke and the day began its race, and the wife who lay by his side awoke and gazed on his placid face.

She looked and saw on his face a light like the sun's first golden ray that softly kisses the mountain's height as the darkness flies away.

Then she nudged his arm, for 'twas time to rise, as the clock was striking 7, and asked as he rubbed his sleepy eyes, "Did you dream you were in heaven?"

"Oh! not quite that, my love," said he, "but it made my heart so glad; I dreamed that a man came in to me and paid in advance for a full page ad."—Exchange.

Vanilla Ice Cream With Pineapple.

Crush and dissolve a junket tablet in a tablespoonful of cold water. Heat a quart of milk, a cupful of double cream and a cup of sugar to about 90 degrees F. Stir in one tablespoonful of vanilla extract and the dissolved tablet. Let stand in a warm place until the mixture jellies, then let cool and freeze. Put a tablespoonful of canned grated or crushed pineapple in the bottom of a sherbert glass. Above dispose a rounding tablespoonful of the ice cream. The canned pineapple is sweet enough for general use.

COLD BROUGHT ON KIDNEY DISEASE
Brantford Lady Suffered Till Cured by Dodd's Kidney Pills
Mrs. A. H. Thompson Had Heart Disease, Lumbago and Rheumatism, and Tells How She Was Restored to Health
Brantford, Ont., Oct. 4.—(Special.)—How colds, lagrippe and other minor ills settle on the Kidneys and develop rheumatism, heart disease, Bright's disease, and other terribly dangerous ailments, and how any and all of them are cured by Dodd's Kidney Pills is fully shown in the case of Mrs. A. H. Thomson, whose home is at 48 Albion street, this city.
Mrs. Thomson was, some years ago, taken with cold and lagrippe, and straining, which affected her kidneys, and the result was backache, lumbago, rheumatism and heart disease, which caused both her and her friends grave anxiety.
She had suffered some years when she heard of cures effected by Dodd's Kidney Pills, and bought a box, which she used with such splendid results that she continued to take them till she was cured. Since then she has used Dodd's Kidney Pills in her own family and recommended them widely to her friends, all of whom have warm words of praise for the standard Canadian Kidney remedy, Dodd's Kidney Pills.
Heart Disease, Rheumatism, Lumbago and Bright's Disease are all Kidney Diseases or are caused by diseased kidneys. You can't have any of them if you keep your Kidneys sound and your blood pure. Dodd's Kidney Pills make the Kidneys sound. Sound Kidneys strain all the impurities out of the blood.

DRESSING TABLE SETS.

Newest of All, Those of Coarse Net and Cretonne.

Fancy lawns, showing delicately colored patterns upon white, are made up into attractive looking as well as practical dressing table sets, comprising a square or oblong cover and two or more doilies. They are mounted over sateen of a shade matching the tracings on the lawn and finished with a featherstitched hem or with a washable ribbon border. Sheer white lawn sets have wide borders headed with hemstitching or with narrow insertions of valenciennes or muslin embroidery, while those of all over muslin embroidery have frill trimmed edges of valenciennes or cluny. An exceedingly dainty effect is gained by placing strips of embroidery and lace entredeux and finishing the edges with double frills of sheer muslin edge with lace.

Dotted and figured swiss is made up with ruffle frilled edges of the same material, finished with a rolled hem with narrow lace or with baby ribbon. Some of them are bordered with a wide hem headed with ribbon run beading. All of these very thin dressing table sets are given additional body and character by the use of colored linings of heavy lawn.

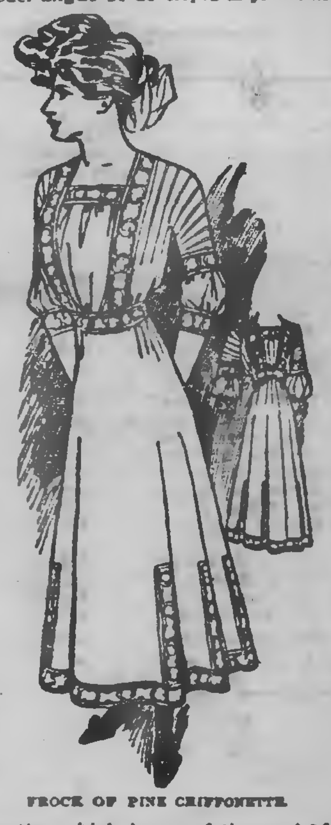
Butcher's linen sets sometimes have scalloped edges and their owner's monogram in the center or in one corner with white or colored embroidered silk, or they have solid embroidery centers and scalloped edges in plain buttonhole.

Newest of all in the realm of dressing table sets are those of exceedingly coarse net, appliqued with cretonne sprays and veiled with fine net, through which the colors of the flowers show distinctly.

Printed foulards and fancy silks of light tints and in floral effects make exceedingly pretty dressing table sets, and as they are not launderable they may have borders of wide satin ribbon, plain or embroidered, or a frilling of fine lace. Frequently a set of small doilies in silk and lace are used in connection with a very long bureau towel of hand embroidered linen bearing a large initial on one end.

In Party Attire.

A party frock for a young girl made after the design illustrated would be very charming and attractive. The model might be developed in pink chiffonette, which is one of the most effective of the new wash materials. It has the added advantage of keeping its color and crispness after several launderings. The chiffonette comes forty-five inches wide and costs about 50 cents a yard. Such a frock when trimmed with lace insertion would make the total expense amount up to not more than $10 if the dress was made at home, and a charming costume would be the result.



FROCK OF PINK CHIFFONETTE.

A Luncheon Dish.

Russian Fish Pie.—Take about one pound of fish that has been baked or broiled and has been left over from the day before or is cooled ready for this dish. Flake it and set aside while preparing the following mixture: Melt together some flour and butter, add a pint of rich fish stock, boil with the butter and flour mixture, season with salt and pepper and a little anchovy. Lay in the bottom of a casserole the flaked fish, cover with an equal layer of boiled rice, pour over this some of the sauce already prepared and cover the top with sliced hard boiled eggs. Upon this foundation arrange another layer in the same rotation until the casserole is nearly full, lay egg slices on the top, put dabs of butter over this and bake in the oven for a few minutes.

An Odd Decoration.

For a table decoration on a very warm day it would be hard to find anything more dainty and refreshing than the following: Fill a rose bowl with sparkling mineral water and immerse in it the stems of nasturtiums with a few of the leaves below the surface. After a short time the blossoms and foliage will become covered with a mass of frostlike moisture, which is very cool and attractive in appearance.

PURITY FLOUR
And Its Keeping Qualities
SOME people find it necessary to buy a considerable quantity of flour at one time—sufficient to last for a long period. Naturally they are anxious to procure a flour of the kind best adapted to lengthy storage.
There are two important reasons why PURITY FLOUR possesses these qualities. One is that it is made entirely from Manitoba Hard Wheat. The other lies in the fact that the careful milling necessary to produce "Purity" absolutely excludes all low-grade particles of the wheat berry. It's the high grade Manitoba Hard Wheat Flour that keeps—stands longest storage. That's "Purity."
"Purity" flour may cost a little more, but is more than worth the difference. Try it. Watch results both for quality and yield.

FOR THE LADY WHO CALLS

The lady who has a large circle of acquaintances always finds it a difficult matter to keep track of the reception days of her friends and often mistakes are made, that might have been avoided if care were taken to make a record of such days. And then there are the teas, at homes, and parties to be remembered too and when a hostess is planning an affair, she is always worried lest she overlook some one who has extended hospitality to her some time previous. To avoid these mistakes, a social register has been issued by the Review, that will be a boon to the busy lady. There are pages for each day of the month on which the record of the calls received and paid with the address of the visitor appear, then there are pages for social engagements, visits paid, addresses and memoranda, all of which prove very valuable data to have. These books are on sale at all the book stores and at the Review Office for 50 cents and there has already been a good demand for them.

C.P.R. HAS NOT YET DECIDED ON JUNCTION POINT FOR THE NEW GRAIN ROUTE

Peterborough and Havelock are the Points Mentioned—Company Makes Proposition to the City Council—Two Plans are Submitted.

The Canadian Pacific Railway have not yet decided on junction point on the main line for the Georgian Bay and Seaboard Railway, which is commonly referred to as the "grain route." According to a letter received by Mayor Rush from W. J. Leonard, the company has not yet decided between Peterborough and Havelock. Mr. Leonard submits two plans to the city council, and in both of them they make pretty heavy demands. Mr. Leonard's letter is as follows;—

Mayor Rush:

In connection with the interview with you and Ald. Phelan some weeks ago as to the entry of the Georgian Bay and Seaboard Railway and the connection between that Railway and the C.P.R. being made at Peterborough, we have not as yet decided definitely on the junction, and it is a question between Peterborough and and Havelock. I think, however, that if we could see our way to getting the room for the tracks and facilities necessary to a junction point that we would probably decide on Peterborough.

We have given considerable study as to how this could be secured, as well as the entrance through the city, and in order to find sufficient car space to take care of the traffic interchanged at junction point, it would be necessary to find another location for tracks and freight shed facilities required in connection with the Peterborough local traffic.

I enclose two plans, one of which is intended to show how we would suggest to provide facilities to take care of the Peterborough local traffic leaving the present traffic opposite the station to provide accommodation for the business occasioned if we make Peterborough the junction; in connection with this plan we would suggest that the city grant us all their title and interest in the property enclosed within the red lines.

The other plan shows our proposed entrance into and through the city for the Georgian Bay and Seaboard Railway, and by reference to it you will see we propose to enter the city limits at the line between Smith and the city, just below the line between Monaghan and the city, crossing the following streets;—Bonaccord, Cordach Ave., McDonnel street, Walnut, Cedar, Elm, Weller street, and Homewood Avenue, where the line enters the township of Monaghan. In this territory we would ask that all the streets, except McDonnel and Homewood be closed, and Weller be diverted, and the railway carried under the diversion. The line again enters the city limits and again joins the Canadian Pacific Railway tracks at Chamberlain street, and we suggest the closing of the railway tracks of Chamberlain street, Park street, Stewart and Rink streets, giving in lieu of these four crossings a subway under the tracks off Park street, with an outlet on Rubidge street as indicated on plan.

Yours very truly,
J. W. LEONARD.

The letter was referred to the Committee of the Whole Council and will be taken up.

LOCAL OPTION BY-LAW TO HAVE NO PREAMBLE

Deputation Asked the Council Last Night to Eliminate the Preamble From the By-law, and After Much Discussion Their Request Was Granted.

A delegation of local optionists and the Ministerial Association to the number of fifty, waited on the Council last night, and asked that the preamble of the local option option by-law be struck out and after the matter had received considerable discussion it was eliminated from the by-law.

As the by-law stood before the meeting, the preamble set forth the fact that;

Whereas, petitions in writing by at least 25 per cent. of the total number of persons appearing on the last revised voters' list of the municipality of Peterborough to be qualified to vote at municipal elections have been presented to the Council of the said city in the words following;

The temperance people want this withheld from the by-law claiming that it weakened it and left it open to attack. The majority of the aldermen during a discussion before the deputation was heard, favored the preamble as without it it would look as if the Council was forcing the by-law on the people.

Rev. J. G. Potter headed the delegation and he addressed the Council, setting before them the reasons why the preamble was objected to by the local option forces. He said that the report received from the Legal Committee in Toronto in regard to the preamble, was that it would be unsafe to have it included in the by-law. If the by-law passed with it in it might tend to lead the Council into considerable litigation and those opposed to the by-law could take the question up. The organization of the local option workers had started work soon after the present Council was appointed and inside of two weeks the petition was sufficiently signed. The committee had taken every precaution to see that the names tallied with the voters' list, and a number of names had been taken off. He said he felt sure that all the citizens understood that the Council had not initiated the by-law and that the citizens were alone responsible.

Ald. Morgan moved that the preamble be taken out of the by-law, but there was considerable dissention on the part of some of the other aldermen. Finally Ald. Morrow moved that whereas the City Clerk and Solicitor had found the petition properly signed the local option by-law be submitted without the preamble. Ald. Morgan, seconded the motion and it carried.

BY-LAW TO GO BACK TO WARD SYSTEM—GIVEN A TEMPORARY HOIST

The City Council was in regular session last night, with Mayor Rush in the chair, and all the aldermen in attendance except Ald. Duncan. There was considerable routine business on the order paper, and several other matters of more than ordinary interest, which are dealt with under separate headings in to-day's issue of the Review.

Ald. Morgan's by-law to return to the ward system of electing aldermen was introduced last night for the first and second reading. Ald. Morrow moved that the by-law be left over for present and Ald. Bradburn seconded it. The vote was a tie and his Worship voted to have the by-law left over for the time being.

Several by-laws were passed.

On motion of Ald. Morrow and Ald. Metheral the city clerk was instructed to write the officials of the Grand Trunk Railway requesting them to have less whistling of trains going through the city at night. The residents in the neighborhood are complaining about this matter.

On motion of Aldermen Morrow and Metheral the city clerk was instructed to have the by-laws to be voted on at the municipal election in January next advertised the required number of times.

Ald. Duffus moved that the city clerk write the Toronto National Fair authorities and the Peterborough Industrial Fair authorities thanking them for the courtesies extended to the aldermen of the city. This was carried.

COMMUNICATIONS

The following were among the communications read:—

R. Redman stated that he considered he should have the money collected in fines from several boys who had stolen plums from his orchard, as he was the sufferer.—No action taken.

J. C. Higgins stated that he will proceed in an action against the city if an account for $51 for gravel used in repairing his property is not settled.—Board of Works.

Wm. Irwin, East City, suggested in a letter that the Cereal Co. bridge at the end of London street, be planked, in order to provide access to the city for the residents in the northern part of the East Ward, while the Smith street bridge is closed to traffic.—Board of Works.

Mr. C. Griffin wrote stating that he considered he had been unjustly fined in the police court in connection with a dispute over a line fence, and asked that the money he had paid be remitted.—Received.

IS THIS THE TRAMP WHO COMMITTED BRUTAL ASSAULT?

Suspicious Looking Character Arrested at Grand Trunk Station Last Evening. Description is Similar to That of Man Wanted at Lindsay. Remanded for a Week.

A suspicious looking character, giving his name as Charles Murphy, was arrested last evening at the Grand Trunk Station, and his description is similar in many respects to that of the tramp who committed the brutal assault on Mrs. Thomas McGinnis, of Mariposa on Saturday last. The description as given by the authorities at Lindsay is;—Height 5 feet 8 inches, stout build, age about 40 years, dark hair, beard of about one month's growth, dark coat and vest, striped (dark) trousers.

The man arrested answers to the description in regard to height, build and age. He wears striped (dark) trousers, but no vest. He has dark hair, but his beard has been recently shaved.

Conductor Ringling, of the G.T.R., "moonlight" freight, had some trouble with the man last night and he telephoned the Police Station. P. C. Meagher answered the call and took the stranger into custody.

This morning at Police Court he was charged with being a vagrant and pleaded guilty. He stated that he had been working in the woods of late and had only recently come out.

Chief Rossel asked for a remand of one week and City Clerk Armstrong, Tho presided in the absence of Magistrate Dumble, enlarged the case for that time.

THAT WATCH OF YOURS

Is in many respects similar to a railway engine. Let an engine be run without oil or cleaning and before long it will stop dead. Upon examination it will be found that the friction and wear and tear has ruined the machinery, and it is fit only for the scrap iron heap. Likewise your watch. You put it in your pocket, and while there is a kick in it, you, in your mistaken economy, do not consult the watchmaker, and consequently rob your watch of years of good service and also much of its former accuracy. The time-keeping qualities of a good watch are maintained and often improved by timely and skilful attention. If you have been one of the neglectful ones call around and see us.

Council Trying to Have Siding Put in From East Side

The City Council are losing no time in dealing with the request of the Peterborough Hardware Company to have a siding put in to their proposed new warehouse on George street. A special meeting of the Council was held this morning at ten o'clock and the question was considered for a short time. If there is any other feasible way the aldermen would like to keep the siding from crossing George street. Mayor Rush, Aldermen Gillespie and Phelan and the city engineer were appointed a committee to interview all the parties concerned and try to arrange to have the siding put in from the east side. To do this will likely necessitate the removal of a portion of the Houghry building.

Took a Drop Too Much

Daniel Ross was called upon to answer to a drunk charge at the police court this morning. He pleaded guilty, but gave as an explanation a story about being sick, and taking a little too much of the nerve food, in liquid form. He was allowed to go with a warning not to call again.

LAST NIGHT'S COUNCIL MEETING

The C.P.R., Georgian Bay and Seaboard line is a feeder from Georgian Bay joining the C.P.R. proper, at Peterborough. It is really intended as a grain route to carry western grain. That it will be used for the other purposes of a railway is a matter of course. The shutting up of several streets leading to the western boundary and the handing over of almost the whole of the new water-front above the C.P.R. bridge is a somewhat extensive demand. It will require a few days for us to draw our breath concerning it although we are as everybody else is, anxious to help our city.

THE WOMAN QUESTION

We have read many articles on the woman question, some of them deep, philosophical studies of the whole problem. The underlying objection to the "advancement" claimed by women is, possibly, a prejudice against them, a sort of desire to keep masculine control. To women are ascribed many good and endearing qualities, much fortitude in trials, etc., which, however, is said to be quite counter-balanced by a genuine love of intrigue that is fatal at once to their claims and to the safety of the world itself. Inferiority, therefore, is the badge of womanhood. It will be hard for many to concede this but with that fact settled the era of the new slavery of woman from the standpoint of her rights has opened. The emancipation of woman has proceeded slowly, and the early part of the 20th century witnesses, apparently, a setback to it.

SUCCESSFUL MEETING AT ST. JOHN'S

A large attendance was present at the first social of the season given by the A.Y.P.A. of St. John's church last evening. Much enthusiasm and interest in the work of the society for the coming season was evinced, and a most successful season's work is anticipated. The Misses Horsfield and Whitcroft rendered a very pleasing piano duet. Mr. Dudley gave two bass solos, which were thoroughly enjoyed. Mr. Geo. Chandler's tenor solo was most welcome, as was the sextette singing presented by members of St. John's Glee Club.

The tennis prizes for the St. John's Tennis Club were presented, Mrs. R. J. Davey taking ladies' single prize and Mr. and Mrs. Walter Richardson the mixed doubles. A large number were registered for the Ambulance Class, which the society propose taking up this winter. The date of the first meeting of this class will be announced later. Any further members wishing to enter this class still have the privilege of so doing.

New Yorkers Enjoyed the Comedy Situations Immensely

Charles Cherry and the original Maxine Elliott Theatre Company and production will be seen here next Friday evening, Oct. 8th, at the Grand Opera House in Clyde Fitch's latest comedy "The Bachelor" The play is under the direction of the Shuberts. Mr. Fitch has done many unique things, but his latest contribution to the stage is declared to be one of the neatest, daintiest works he has yet accomplished. "The Bachelor" had considerable vogue in New York during its run last spring at the Maxine Elliott and later in the summer enjoyed much prosperity at the Whitney in Chicago.

The story is that of a bachelor, who falls in love with his stenographer without the slightest intention of marrying her. His motives, however, are honest. By the interference of a young brother of the typist, a proposal is brought about, although when the girl learns of the brother's over-zealousness, she breaks off the engagement. How Mr. Fitch manages to bring the lovers together is one of the amusing things of the play. While New Yorkers enjoyed the comedy situations immensely, much was said of the delination of a Swedich character in the play. As usual, Mr. Fitch has lived up to his reputation by drawing one or more original characters.

Plan now open.

Aldermen Will Decide on Site For Hospital This Afternoon

Where will the Isolation Hospital go?

This is the question the City Council now has to decide and to settle the matter a meeting will be held this afternoon at three o'clock. That it will go on the Hilliard farm or on the property which the city owns on the east side of the river near the new waterworks dam has already been decided and it is these two sites that will be considered this afternoon. Each possess certain advantages and question will be gone into very carefully before a decision is reached.

WAREHOUSE WILL BE A LARGE ONE

Peterborough Hardware Co. to Extend Wholesale end of Business

The warehouse to be erected by the Peterborough Hardware Company, on the property south of the Kinnear building on the south side of George street, will be a large structure. It will have a frontage of sixty feet and will be a hundred and fifteen feet long. The company intend to go into the wholesale end of the business on a much larger scale than in the past, and the new warehouse will be used almost entirely for that branch. The retail business will be looked after at the present store on George street. The erection of the new warehouse will be proceeded with without delay.

Tribute To Work Of Mr. Ritchie

The following tribute to the work of Mr. Ryerson Ritchie, who recently organized the new Boston Chamber of Commerce is given below;—

"What! A united Boston!

That city of cliques and classes, of aristocracy and democracy, of conservatives and theorists! Can such a community unite?

From the evidences in sight a united Boston is promised.

Step by step Boston has rapidly move toward union—popular co-operation.

The overthrow of the Fitzgerald administration, the revelations of the Finance Commission, the formation of the Boston City Club to bring men of different occupations and divergent views together upon communal issues, the institution of the "Boston—1915" movement to formulate civic ambitions and aim to realize them in six years, and last, but not least, the consolidation of the Board of Trade, Merchants' Association, Chamber of Commerce, and other commercial bodies, into one institution under a new charter, which specifies that its objects are to "promote the commerce, industry and public interests of Boston and of New England."

The policy is to labor not for a greater New England in trade and manufacture, but for the public interest.

The new Chamber of Commerce is the central figure in Boston's co-operative movement. Within its membership are the representative men of business and the professions, forming one homogeneous and cosmopolitan organization. It aims to use restorative and constructive methods in its work, setting aside the old deliberative and "resolving" order of things."—Advertising and Selling.

FUNERAL OF THE LATE W. C. KIRKE

Took Place Yesterday Afternoon —The Services

The funeral of the late Wm. C. Kirke took place yesterday afternoon. A large number of friends gathered at his late residence and at St. Luke's church to pay their last respects to the departed. At two o'clock a private service was held at the home by Rev. Dr. Langfeldt for the members of the family, after which the funeral cortege proceeded to the church of St. Luke's, the evangelist, where the solemn funeral service of the Church of England was held. As the coffin was borne into the church and placed in front of the chancel, the organist played Chopin's funeral march the rector reading the opening sentences. The hymns sung were "Peace, perfect peace, in this dark world of sin," and "There is a Land of Pure Delight," both being favorite hymns of the departed. The rector in a few words paid his testimony to the faith of the departed and spoke comforting words to the mourners, who occupied the front pew in the church. As the body was taken out the congregation sang the Nunc Dimittis.

Interment took place at Little Lake cemetery, Rev. Dr. Langfeldt officiating at the grave. The pallbearers were Messrs. A. Fitzgerald, G. R. Browning, J. J. Turner, jr., A. Kingdon, Chas Crane and Kenneth Shook.

STYLE IN FURS

THE beauty and shape that are in Barrie's Furs are there when you buy them, and stay there while wearing, for months and years.

Is not that something you want when you buy Furs? For Furs are really an investment when wisely bought.

These things can't be said of ordinary ready-made Furs. They are fair up to a certain point. When that point is passed durability drops out of sight.

BARRIE'S FURS have and retain shape and finish because they are manufactured on the premises. Fur making is essentially a hand-made accomplishment. Machinery can do little in the making.

The materials are there. Each one good for the price asked. But all have style, finish and that chic effect that is worked into the goods, because of the know-how in the making.

It's not too early to inspect the Fur styles. It is a desirable thing to do, while the assortment is practically unbroken.

A Gallon.

Verdi and the Critics.

No outsiders, not even members of the press, were allowed to be present at rehearsals of Verdi's operas. "A production of a work of mine," said Verdi, "is an affair between that work and the public. I do not write for the press, but for the public, who will support me if my work is good or who will execute me if it is not. I do not care for aught else." M. de Nevers thus describes Verdi's attitude at a dress rehearsal of "Otello" in Paris, when the press was present against his wishes:

"The critics were all placed in the corbeille of the amphitheater, some ten rows of stalls having been cleared away to make room for a table and chairs for Verdi, Boito and the directors. MM. Sardou, Meilhac, Halevy, Ohin, the director of fine arts, and two or three dignitaries and officials of the opera sat behind in the remaining rows of stalls. Among the critics were MM. Reyer, Bruneau, Joncieres, Bellaigue, Pessard, Corneau and Sarcey. The foreign press was represented by M. de Blowitz and myself, and as Verdi came in all stood up, with hats off, and cheered the wonderful man. The orchestra joined, of course, in the ovation, and it was to the musicians that the master went, and, bowing his venerable head very low, he thanked them for the kind demonstration and shook hands with the nearest, but never once did he turn our way except for one moment, when he took us all in with a side glance—an ugly one—and then for the rest of the evening, some five hours, ignored our presence completely."

Whitey.

Instances are common enough where dogs and horses and even cats have been instrumental in saving human life, but this is the first instance in the writer's knowledge of such remarkable actions by a rat.

One of the two boys of a Danish family of four named Nelson living in southern Wisconsin was given a white rat, named Whitey, which became so contented that it never attempted to run away, notwithstanding that it was given the run of the house.

Before retiring one night the husband filled the bedroom stove with soft coal. At about 3 o'clock in the morning Mrs. Nelson was disturbed by something pulling and scratching at her hand and wrist and awoke to find the room filled with gas and Whitey squealing and jumping on the floor beside her. She was so nauseated and weak that she could do no more than roll off to the floor and crawl to the stairs. When attempting to descend she fell to the bottom, her head resting near the front door. The cold draft entering under the door finally roused her, and her screams for help brought the neighbors, who revived her husband.

Whitey died peacefully a year later, and a friend of the family diagnosed the case as one of gout.—Chicago Record-Herald.

THE WHITE LADY.

Kaiser William and the Specter of the Imperial Palace.

While Kaiser William is a sincerely religious man, more so assuredly than any of his predecessors on the throne of Prussia, it is a mistake to describe him as a mystic. Indeed, superstition is foreign to his nature, so much so that he has even been known to manifest skepticism with regard to the existence of the famous White Lady, who, according to German tradition, has haunted his palace at Berlin for hundreds of years, her appearance invariably foreboding the death of a member of the reigning house. Some time ago one of the imperial footmen was summarily dismissed by order of the kaiser for having circulated a story to the effect that he had seen the dreaded specter gliding along the corridors. By a strange coincidence a young lieutenant of the guards, who happened to be on duty at the time when the servant claimed to have seen the White Lady, reported to his commanding officer on being relieved that he, too, had seen the celebrated spook. The subaltern was examined and cross examined in every possible way by his colonel, who, subsequently learning of the story of the footman, considered the matter sufficiently uncanny to feel it his duty to bring it to the notice of the kaiser. William sent for the subaltern, who entered the imperial presence even more tremblingly than when he had seen the ghost. The emperor, noticing this, asked him in kindly tones:

"What was the lady like? Was she tall or short?"

"She was tall, your majesty."

Kaiser—How was she dressed?

Lieutenant—She wore a white petticoat with a white bodice, had a white cap on her head and a long veil flowing over it all.

After a pause the emperor continued: "Was she carrying anything?"

"Oh, yes, your majesty."

"What did she have in her right hand?"

Lieutenant—A candlestick.

Kaiser—And what was in her left hand?

Lieutenant—A box of matches.

Emperor William has a very keen sense of humor, and the idea of the White Lady, who dates from some four hundred years ago or more, promenading about the corridors of his palace carrying matches, which are an altogether modern invention, caused him to burst into roars of laughter, the young subaltern gazing at him in the meantime with open mouthed astonishment. When finally the emperor recovered his composure, he remarked kindly, but firmly:

"That will do. Don't let me hear anything more about the White Lady. And take my advice. Don't peer about in the corridors of the palace at night, for you might often see ladies there attired in white petticoats and bodices, carrying candlesticks and boxes of matches in their hands."—Metropolitan Magazine.

Says the Earth Is Flat.

The Englishwoman Lady Blount has recently been conducting some new experiments in proof of her theory that the earth is flat. She asserts that instead of being a giddy ball, whirling through space at the rate of something like nineteen miles a second, it is a fixed, immovable plane, anchored to its foundations. She founds her belief upon the descriptions given in the Bible, but she also demonstrates her theories with calculations of her own. One of her proofs is a photograph taken with a photo telescopic camera, which shows a river, at the end of which a cross is clearly visible upon the screen. This cross was placed two feet above the level of the water and six miles from the photographers. If the earth were round, argues Lady Blount, the cross would have been below the line of vision, and the fact that it was clearly visible to the eye of the camera proves that the earth is flat. She belongs to a society called the "Flattists," and she edits a magazine called the Earth, the policy of which tends to support her theory.

Age of the Ocean

Of course the ocean is not as old as the earth, because it could not be formed until the surface of the globe had sufficiently cooled to retain water upon it, but it seems chimerical to try to measure the age of the sea. Nevertheless Professor Joly has undertaken the task, basing his estimate upon the ratio of the amount of sodium it contains to that annually contributed by the washings from the continents. He thus reaches the conclusion that the ocean has been in existence between 80,000,000 and 170,000,000 years. This does not seem a very definite determination; but, then, in geology estimates of time in years are extremely difficult because of the uncertainty of the elements of the calculation. The most that can be said for such results is that they are probable.

Appliances For Ocean Safety.

Last year a thousand ships or more were lost. The year before the sea took nearly the same toll. To the tourist his assurance of safety lies in the fact that it is the sailing vessel, with its dependence on the fickle wind, that largely makes up this tremendous loss. Freighting steamers, voyaging on unfamiliar coasts, nearly complete the disaster roll. But to the great liners, with their familiar routes, their well known lanes of travel, their guarded and well lighted harbors and all their appliances for safety, the manifold dangers of the ocean are only the remote possibilities that give a touch of adventure to their passage from land to land. The probabilities of disaster are trifling.—L. Frank Tooker in Century.

Butchers.

There were few butchers' cattle that sold over $5 per cwt. Prime picked cattle sold at $5.30 to $5.50, but there were very few went over $5, not a car load, as far as we heard. Loads of good, $4.75 to $5; medium, $4.50 to $4.75; common, $3.75 to $4.25; cows, $2.25 to $4.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, Oct. 4.—(Special.)—At the Montreal Stock Yards, West End Market, the receipts of live stock for the week ending October 2, were 2800 cattle, 1900 sheep and lambs, 1675 hogs and 460 calves, while the offerings to-day amounted to 1400 cattle, 1050 sheep and lambs, 750 hogs and 250 calves. Fully 75 per cent. of the cattle offered consisted of Manitoba domestic and northwest ranch stock in first-class condition. The undertone continues easy on account of the large supplies, but buyers were many and the weather cool and prices show no change. The demand for exporters was very limited, as cable advices from Liverpool noted a further decline, owing to large arrivals. A few extra choice steers sold at 5¼c, but the bulk of the trading was done in choice stock at 4¾c to 5c, good at 4¼c to 4½c, fair at 3¾c to 4c, medium at 3¼c to 3½c, common at 2½c to 3c, and inferior at 2c to 2¼c per lb. Good bulls brought 3c to 3¼c, and canners 2¼c to 2½c per lb. A stronger feeling prevailed for lambs, owing to smaller offerings and prices ruled ¼c per lb. higher at 6¼c per lb. In sheep an easier feeling developed, with sales at 3¼c to 3½c per lb. Calves were scarce, for which there was a good enquiry at prices ranging from $3 to $12 each. Prices for pigs were steady under a fairly good demand and smaller supplies, and sales of selected lots were made at $8.75 per cwt., weighed off cars. Cable advices from all the leading foreign markets on Canadian bacon last week noted a further decline of 2s to 4s per cwt., in spite of continued light supplies.

At the Canadian Pacific Live Stock Market the receipts for the week ending Oct. 2 were [illegible] cattle for export account and 1900 cattle, 2200 sheep and lambs, 825 hogs and 250 calves, for local consumption. The offerings this morning consisted of 1100 cattle, 700 sheep and lambs, 150 hogs and 175 calves.

THE EEL.

Despite the fact that he is driven in hopples The Eel is probably the most popular harness horse of the year in the Grand Circuit. His bloodlike form, high style, unfailing spirits and always cheerful way of going captivate the spectators whenever he appears on the track. He seems to be of iron constitution, for after having been campaigned all last summer he was raced on the ice all winter, kept in the stud all last spring and now is going through the Grand Circuit, meeting and beating the best pacers in training. The handsome gray stallion is now seven years old. He was bred by John Gibson, of Dearfield, Mich., and was got by Gambett, son of Gambetta Wilkes, the sire of George Gano. Belle Bidwell, the dam of The Eel, was by John L., 2.23 3-4, son of Bourbon Wilkes. Coming out green last year The Eel gained a record of 2.02 1-4, which he has this year lowered to 2.01 1-4. With a fair chance there is little doubt that he could pace a mile in 2.00 or better. He is owned by F. W. Entriken, of Tatoe, Ont., and is driven by "Dan" McEwan.

KELSEY Zig-Zag Heat Tubes

Make the KELSEY WARM AIR GENERATOR the most powerful apparatus.

¶ The "Kelsey" warms fresh air by the best method; warms large volumes of air properly and forces to exposed or distant rooms; has double the weight and heating surfaces of the ordinary furnace, and utilizes all the heat to much better advantage; does not heat the cellar or waste heat up the chimney.

¶ The "Kelsey" does not warm the same air over and over like steam or hot water systems with radiators; costs less to install, and for management and repairs; and is more efficient, healthful and economical.

¶ These are a few of the reasons why the Kelsey Fresh Air System has been installed in so many of the finest class of City and Country Homes, Churches and Schools, and why it is being specified in preference to other systems.

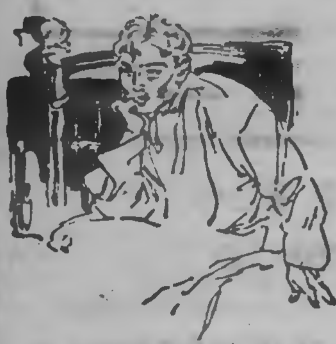
THE YOUNGER SET

Author of
"The Fighting Chance."

Lying back there in his desk chair one evening, Selwyn suddenly remembered that Gerald had come in. They had scarcely seen one another since that unhappy meeting in the Stuyvesant club, and now, remembering what he had written to Eileen, he emerged with a start from his contented dreaming, sobered by the prospect of seeking Gerald.

For a moment or two he hesitated, but he had said in his letter that he was going to do it, and now he rose, looked around for his pipe, found it, filled and lighted it and; throwing on his dressing gown, went out into the corridor, tying the tasseled cords around his waist as he walked.

His first knock remaining unanswered, he knocked more sharply. Then he heard from within the muffled creak of a bed, heavy steps across the floor. The door opened with a jerk. Gerald stood there, eyes swollen, hair in disorder and collar crushed and the white evening tie unknotted and dangling over his soiled short front.



Gerald sat on the edge of the bed.

"Hello," said Selwyn simply. "May I come in?"

The boy passed his hand across his eyes as though confused by the light. Then he turned and walked back toward the bed, still rubbing his eyes, and sat down on the edge.

Selwyn closed the door and seated himself, apparently not noticing Gerald's dishevelment.

"Thought I'd drop in for a good night pipe," he said quietly. "By the way, Gerald, I'm going down to Silverside next week. Nina has asked Boots too. Couldn't you fix it to come along with us?"

"I don't know," said the boy in a low voice. "I'd like to."

"Good business! That will be fine What you and I need is a good stiff tramp across the moors or a gallop if you like. It's great for mental cobwebs, and my brain is disgracefully unswept. By the way, somebody said that you'd joined the Siowitha club."

"Yes," said the boy listlessly.

"Well, you'll get some lively trout fishing there now. It's only thirty miles from Silverside, you know. You can run over in the motor very easily."

Gerald nodded, sitting silent, his handsome head supported in both hands, his eyes on the floor.

That something was very wrong with him appeared plainly enough, but Selwyn, touched to the heart and miserably apprehensive, dared not question him unasked.

And so they sat there for awhile, Selwyn making what conversation he could, and at length Gerald turned and dragged himself across the bed, dropping his head back on the disordered pillows.

"Go on," he said; "I'm listening."

So Selwyn continued his pleasant inconsequential observations, and Gerald lay with closed eyes quite motionless until, watching him, Selwyn saw his hand was trembling where it lay clinched beside him. And presently the boy turned his face to the wall.

Toward midnight Selwyn rose quietly, removed his unlighted pipe from between his teeth, knocked the ashes from it and pocketed it. Then he walked to the bed and seated himself on the edge.

"What's the trouble, old man?" he asked coolly.

There was no answer. He placed his hand over Gerald's. The boy's hand lay inert, then quivered and closed on Selwyn's convulsively.

"That's right," said the elder man; "that's what I'm here for—to stand by when you hoist signals. Go on."

The boy shook his head and buried it deeper in the pillow.

"Bad as that?" commented Selwyn quietly. "Well, what of it? I'm standing by, I tell you. That's right"—as Gerald broke down, his body quivering under the spasm of soundless grief—"that's the safety valve working. Good business. Take your time."

It took a long time, and Selwyn sat silent and motionless, his whole arm numb from its position and Gerald's crushing grasp. And at last, seeing that was the moment to speak, he said:

"Now let's fix up this matter, Gerald Come on!"

"Good heavens! H-how can it be f-fixed?"

"I'll tell you when you tell me. It's a money difficulty, I suppose, isn't it?"

"Yes."

"Cards?"

"P-partly."

"Oh, a note? Case of honor? Where is this I. O. U. that you gave?"

"It's worse than that. The—the note is paid. Good God—I can't tell you!"

"You must. That's why I'm here, Gerald."

"Well, then, I—I drew a check—knowing that I had no funds. If it—if they return it marked"—

"I see. What are the figures?"

The boy stammered them out. Selwyn's grave face grew graver still.

"That is bad," he said slowly, "very bad. Have you—but of course you couldn't have seen Austin."

"I'd kill myself first!" said Gerald fiercely.

"No, you wouldn't do that. You're not that kind. Keep perfectly cool, Gerald, because it is going to be fixed The method only remains to be decided upon."

"I can't take your money!" stammered the boy. "I can't take a cent from you after what I've said—the beastly things I've said."

"It isn't the things you say to me, Gerald, that matter. Let me think a bit, and don't worry. Just lie quietly and understand that I'll do the worrying. And while I'm amusing myself with a little quiet reflection as to ways and means just take your own bearings from this reef and set a true course once more, Gerald. That is all the reproach, all the criticism, you are going to get from me. Deal with yourself and your God in silence."

And in silence and heavy dismay Selwyn confronted the sacrifice he must make to save the honor of the house of Erroll.
